Man Found Guilty Despite Lie Detector

OTTAWA (CP) — Romeo Phillion was found guilty of non-capital murder Tuesday and sentenced to life in prison.

Phillion, 33-year-old native of New Liskeard, Ont., had been charged with the 1967 stabbing death of city fireman Leopold Roy.

Although Phillion was charge shortly after the Aug. 9, 1967 death, and released because of insufficient evidence, then confirmed to in emandr last January, th most dramatic event in his case came Monday.

It was then Madam Justice Mabel Van Camp of the Ontario Supreme Court ruled admissible the results of a polygraph—lie detector—test undergone by Phillion.

Defence and Crown lawyers both said it marked the first time in Canadian legal history such test have been admitted to evidence.

The tests approved Monday were sought by Mr. Cogan and performed by Dr. Julio Arboleda, a psychiatrist at the Royal Ottawa Hospital.

Dr. Arboleda told court other tests and examinations indicated to him that Phillion was a truthful individual and would say anything to draw attention to himself. He testified that he undertook the tests as a means of determining the truth of Phillion's confession of murder, and they indicated Phillion lied in his confession.

Discriminate

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian elementary and high school systems fail to give Canadian-born blacks the same opportunities as white children, a Sir George Williams University professor said Tuesday.

Clarence Bayne, who is also chairman of the National Black Coalition Institute of Research, said teachers in many cases tend "to discriminate against black pupils "because they consider them as lazy, indolent and unable to learn."

'Screen' Seen

QUEBEC (CP) — Camille Laurin, Parti Quebecois national assembly leader, said Tuesday the provincial government is using Victor Goldbloom, minister responsible for the environment, as a screen to make people believe it is concerned with the environment.

Mr. Laurin said it remains to be seen if proposed anti-pollution legislation will survive strong pressures in the cabinet and among voters.

Mr. Goldbloom last week presented the legislation for second reading in the national assembly. It would place government agencies, departments and municipal organizations concerned with combatting pollution, under the control of a director of environmental services.

Ships Seized

HAMILTON (CP) — A battle-marsmall-sense complaints led to the dismissal of Hamilton city council's representative on the harbor commission, learned Tuesday that three ships he intended to scrap have been seized and towed away by the harbor commission.

A harbor commission spokesman said the vessels, seized for non - payment of dock space, were moved to a fenced-off waterfront section and are being guarded by harbor police.

The seizure follows a long dispute between businessman Kent Barfreicht and the commission which was opposed to the scrapping of ships on property in its jurisdiction.

Driver Jailed

SIMCOE, Ont. (CP) — Ronald Ebert, 36, of London, Ont., was sentenced Tuesday to two years less a day for dangerous driving in connection with an accident in which John Arden Burke, 24, of Brantford, Ont., was killed.

Ebert was found guilty Oct. 18 by a Norfolk County Court jury. He was acquitted of criminal negligence.

Gets Two Years

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) — James Campbell, 19, of Brampton, Ont., was sentenced Tuesday to two years definite and 12 months indeterminate for a series of incidents last August.

Campbell had been found guilty of robbing a Chinguacousy Township man of $41, postession of a stolen car and theft of a wallet.

CBC Shuffle

OTTAWA (CP) — A CBC management shuffle has left executive vice-president Lister Sinclair with additional responsibility for programming.

Mr. Sinclair, once a programmer himself, takes over these new functions Dec. 1 from vice-president Marcel Ouimet, 57, of Ottawa, who becomes vice-president of special services.

Short a Juror

MONTREAL (CP) — Selection of the jury for the kidnap trial of Jacques Rose continued Tuesday after lawyers decided the case will be heard by 11 jurors rather than the normal 12. One of the seven jurors already sworn in was dismissed after admitting he gave an incorrect answer under questioning last week. A trial is considered to have started as soon as the accused entered his plea, so the juror cannot be replaced. Rose is charged with kidnapping Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte.

Trial Changed

WALLACEBURG, Ont., (CP) — James Karvalis, of Toronto, lawyer for the Union of Ontario Indians, was granted a change of venue Tuesday for the trial of two brothers "charged with assault causing bodily harm.

Provincial Judge C. E. Perkins set plea and trial of Bradley Sands, 19, and his brother Donovan, 19, of Sarnia, for Nov. 27 in Chatham after they elected to be tried by a provincial judge.

More Muscle Urged To Stop Strikebreakers

OTTAWA (CP) — Tough stands against strikebreakers and taxation privileges to corporations were taken Tuesday by the Ontario Federation of Labor (OFL) at its annual convention.

The day also was highlighted by re-election of president David Archer, an attack by a Canadian Labor Congress official on opponents of internationl unions and a confrontation between union members and a strikebreaking security guard.

The policy statement on strikebreaking was passed by the 1,100 delegates after many speakers urged the unions to use more muscle on the picket lines to stop so - called scabs from taking jobs when workers are on strike.

The federation claims strikebreaking leads to violence and longer strikes. Canada is the only "country of significance without laws prohibiting professional strikebreaking, the statement said, urging pressure on government to adopt such laws.

The convention took on unexpected turn when one delegate identified a security guard at Ontario's Civic Centre, where the meeting is being held, as a strikebreaker during the strike of garbage collectors three last year.

The guard was surrounded by about 25 angry unionists and threatened, but violence was averted.

A Civic Centre official told the guard he could not be blamed if he did not report for work today, the last of the convention.

Earlier, the federation adopted a statement on unemployment, taxation, and so-called corporate ripoffs that was almost identical to policy espoused by the New Democratic Party during the federal election campaign. The convention endorsed the NDP Monday as its political arm.

Delegates forced the deletion from resolution of a sentence that said: "Our fight is not with the corporations."

The policy statement urged cancellation of tax concessions to companies and plugging of loopholes, full taxation of capital gains and reduction of personal income tax to stimulate consumer demands and thereby increase employment.

Careless Assessor to Pay Damages

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — An assessor, who admitted leaving a trapdoor open after inspecting a cellar, was ordered Tuesday to pay $450 damages to a housewife who fell through the opening and broke an ankle and several ribs.

County Court Judge Edward Fenley ruled that Mrs. Harold Smith of Brantford suffered $1,500 damages, but she was 70 per cent responsible for the accident.

The judge ruled the remaining 30 per cent the responsibility of Ephraim Nablo of Cayuga, assessor for the counties of Brant, Norfolk and Haldimand.

Mr. Nablo said Mrs. Smith was with him during inspection of the house, including the cellar.

He said the trapdoor was behind a curtain and he forgot to close it.

Mrs. Smith testified that she fell into the cellar a short time after Mr. Nablo left.

Tunnelling Children Perish in Cave-in TORONTO (CP) — "I couldn't do anything but help dig them out," a North York man told police after he struggled to save two children who died Tuesday afternoon when a tree fell on them while they were tunnelling into a slope in northwest Toronto.

Paul Bensinger, an unemployed plumber, ran to the scene when playmates of Peter Charles Ingrey, 10, and John Bridgeman, 12, came to his apartment for help.

Seven children were playing on the slope tunnelling under the roots of a 50-foot tree. The other five managed to run away before the tree fell across the tunnel opening.

Police and firemen cut the tree to pieces and dug through two feet of rain-soaked mud before reaching the bodies.

Mr. Bensinger, whose wife called police, said: "I tried to see the kids, but there was nothing but tree branches. I pulled the debris away, but I couldn't find them."

The Duke of Edinburgh Unit has been pleased at the results of helping two new units in getting organized in the past year. Almost a year ago a unit was started at Kingston and was granted its charter for which they thanked members of Unit 201 for their advice and assistance. At the last Provincial quarterly meeting, again under the guidance of this unit, the new Maynooth unit was granted its charter. Both these units are in the seven hundred class so it is easy to see that in the last forty years the number of units across Canada has more than doubled. May the trend continue.

Recruedes on the hospital list are: J. Corr, Room 407; G. Booth, Room 634; A. Glew, Room 631; all in Belleville General Hospital. Sit Cat Sun is in St. Margaret's Hospital in Toronto and A. McKenna is Back for observation in the Queen's S.C. Unit, Belleville.

President Hank Ford is happy to report that, at the quarterly meeting, The Duke of Edinburgh Unit was awarded the Annual Provincial Golf Tournament for 1973. It will be held in September, date and place to be announced later. So the unit golfing fraternity better be practising up for they will be competing against their own competition.

Film-makers Learn Trade at Kitchener

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Signs of Life and Nick's future film makers are learning their craft in Kitchener and area studios using the area as a background for their first films.

They are students of the film departments of Conestoga College of Applied Arts and Technology, and for three years they study and practise the techniques of film-making under the guidance of experienced professionals.

Prof. Vaclav Taborsky, who has headed the department since 1968, emphasizes that it is not the department's aim to turn out experienced members, but to provide a basic background training to supplement each student's own originality and creativity as a film-maker.

In the first year, students study the basic film skills, first by writing and then editing. Each student is required to present at least seven assignments.

In their second year, students concentrate on a particular craft, such as directing or sound recording. For practice into third year each student must present two films, one a 15-millimetre film made at least five minutes and the second an experimental film of at least three minutes duration that has been written, directed and edited by the student.

The third year, as a graduate, students complete the course explains, "emphasizes the further development of practical abilities in a particular film form (documentary, education, animation, feature, etc.)."

Each third - year student, working with 16-millimetre film, is assigned an educational or industrial film to be used by the college to demonstrate professional skills. Each student also must complete a graduation film on a subject of his own choice.

"We get a lot of documentaries filmed in the area and clients of their stories," said Prof. Taborsky.

One of Prof. Taborsky's graduating class of eight students also produced two feature-length films, a first for the college, and an unlikely regular pattern for future years as starting this year students are required to pay processing costs of their films. Formerly this was paid by the college.

Prof. Taborsky, who has worked as a film director, producer and writer in his native Czechoslovakia and with the National Film Board of Canada, said that graduates from Conestoga won't mean that a person will be able to walk into a principal job in professional film-making.

Many do have to start as assistants, but they will know how difficult it is to make a film and they will know a lot about all aspects of working on a film crew."

This fall, 30 students began the course, about half of them from the Kitchener-Waterloo area.

Students to Improvise

TRENTON (Staff) — Just for the Hellivit, pronounced Hell-o-vit, will be heralding the 1972 theatre arts season for students at Trenton High School this week, marking an innovation in student productions.

For the first time, Nov. 9 to 18 the youthful actors and actresses will be given the chance to perform improvised situations, acted out before a live audience on the barest of suggestions. Armed with a one-line phrase or key, the players will then build a small vignette.

The regular production, that includes five one - act comedies, will be interspersed with these improvisations, plus comedy gags and vaudeville. For this, the first play endeavor for the students this year, original music has been composed by Dorothy Hobbs, a student at the high school.

"They've never even put pantomimes before a live audience," theatre arts teacher Donald Burrows said in an interview, adding the theatre arts class at THS is also a first for the school.

In order to try out some of their ideas on a captive audience, some of the players have been taking their improvisations before various classes in the school. "It's frightening for the first time," the teacher-director said, "but it is really good for concentration."

"To a lot of schools in Belleville, theatre arts classes are old hat. I've been after this for two years and now that we're finally got it, I'm pleased," he said.

Mr. Burrows believes through such courses, young people can more easily learn to be creative than in the older form of teaching. "Although," he chuckled, "sometimes I wish we could return to the old system. I find it very hard to keep up with their enthusiasm."

While the five one-act plays were cast by way of auditions, most of the students come from the new theatre arts course. The plays range from more traditional comedy to modernistic styles. They include, A Resounding Tinkle, The Still Alarm, Not Enough Rope, a version of Noah and the Ark, and The Sandbox.

The performances this Thursday and Friday night, run from 8 p.m. until 10.30 p.m. with admission price of $1 for adults, 50 cents for students. Mr. Burrows says the plays and interludes have been designed for a younger audience.

Since the start of Theatre 212, as the bi-annual productions have come to be known, the plays presented have run the course of dramas, comedies, modernistic interpretives and situation plays.

The students and their teacher are very excited about the production and feel even more confident knowing that theirs is the only school club actually making any money. Profits are turned back to the school for use in the auditorium, for theatre arts purposes.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

THURSDAY, Nov. 9 .

Aries (March 21-April 19): Impulse leads to overdoing if you let it. Your forbearance in family discussions saves the delicate balance for future serenity.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): You'll be proud of your tact and patience in this day of crosscurrents, uphill going. What you do get settled is permanent.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20): Personal attachments conflict with responsibilities. The main obstacle is a matter of scheduling, getting things into proper sequence.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Impatience is natural, can lead to dismaying results. Realize that you haven't completed turns out not needed after all.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Impressing people depends more on what you are and what you keep than what you spend. Taking yourself too seriously isn't the thing to do.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Come to no final judgments—all the evidence hasn't been presented. Much is gained by staying on familiar terrain.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Impulse leads to overdoing if you let it. Your forbearance in family discussions saves the delicate balance for future serenity.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): After an encounter with stark reality, self-confidence prevails. Expect delays and confusion in travel, either long or short.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The optimum experience would be an uneventful day with reasonable progress in work, some time spent in work and play.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stay out of others' disputes, seek a calm personal environment in which to get as much done as your present limitations permit.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your progress is blocked if you mix yourself in strange activities. You can inspire friends to outstanding co-operation.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20): In full self-reliance go on with what you started, at low key and steady pace. Asking needless questions provokes complex reactions.

Dog Has Diabetes But Master Safe

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a dog seven years old who has diabetes. I give her insulin shots every day.

She also gets sores on her skin and I look her to a clinic. Can a human catch any diseases from dogs? I apply medication daily to her sores but they come up some other place. Could I catch anything from applying medicine on the sores? — L. H.

Yes, there are diseases people can acquire from animals. This kind of disease is called a zoonosis. (And, of course, there are diseases which are not transmitted from one species to another).

Among the "catching" diseases are ringworm, and other fungus infections, the common bacterial infections such as strep and staph, some kinds of worms, salmonella, certain viruses (including rabies) and parasite (including trichinosis).

Diabetes, of course, is not a disease that passes from one person to another, or one animal to another, so you need have no fear about that.

However, human diabetics are subject to various skin problems, including boils, and although I am not a veterinarian, it seems reasonable to suppose that diabetes may be part of your poor dog's problem.

The recurrence of the sores would suggest that the exact germ or organism causing the sores has not been identified, and it might be wise to have some cultures or smears studied in hopes that a medication can be applied that will do more than just make the sores move from one place to another.

But as to you, there's no danger of catching diabetes, of course, but some precautions would be in order to protect you from catching whatever organism is causing the skin sores—which may or may not be risky for you.

Avoid petting the dog too much. Apply the medication with a pledget of cotton, and wash your hands frequently and thoroughly after either petting or medicating her.

I can't, without knowing more than I do, say positively that the sores she has could be transmitted to you, but it is within the realm of possibility —so be careful. Meantime, I would welcome any counsel from veterinarians who may have an idea for us.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please help. About 11 days before my period was due, my fiance and I were "fooling around." He did not break through me, and did not enter deeply, and didn't spill any sperm in me.

My period is now one week late and I am worried to death. Is there a possibility of being pregnant? Please answer as soon as possible. S.W.

Tension and worry sometimes can throw the menstrual cycle off, and that may be the explanation.

But you mustn't ignore the possibility that you are pregnant. It can happen from such fooling around, and it has. All it takes is one live sperm cell to cause pregnancy, a particle so small you can't see it without a microscope.

Quite regularly I get letters asking whether it is possible to become pregnant "without going all the way." It most certainly is.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Someone says that celery could cause brain deficiency when eaten by females. Do you think this is true? — S.S.

That's utter nonsense, of course. I might have some question, though, as to the brain power of anyone peddling such story.

Opening lead — king of spades.

The most interesting hands are those where each side must make one or more good plays in an effort to achieve his objective. Here is a spectacular example where both sides gave their all, with the defence finally coming out on top.

West started with the K-A of spades and, observing partner's high-low with the 5-4, put the defense on the right track when he continued with a third spade. It was the first of four successive good plays.

Declarer was down in the dummy and was faced with the problem of holding himself to one trump loser. He would discard and so acquire his purpose he led the jack of hearts from dummy.

At this point, since East would have followed low and the defenders would thus have acquired two trumps tricks to pot the contract down one.

But South decided that West was more likely to have a doubleton trump honor than East, and accordingly he made the somewhat dangerous play of a low club to the queen at trick four, followed by a low trump toward dummy's J-10-4.

Ordinarily this play would have succeeded in its purpose, but West read the situation perfectly when he won with the king and led a fourth round of spades.

Declarer was down to the J-10 of trumps in dummy and could not survive this blow. If he ruffed in dummy, East would discard and so acquire a second trump trick, while if declarer discarded from dummy, East would ruff his partner's high spade with the nine and in that way establish the setting trick.

So, as a result of the scintillating defence, South had to settle for down one.

You can't win 'em all!

Paper Firm Accused Of Blocking Mill Sale

OTTAWA (CP) — A group of Temiscaming, Que., citizens accused Canadian International Paper Ltd. (CIP) Tuesday of blocking attempts to buy and reopen the company's pulp mill here.

The U.S.-owned company shut down the Temiscaming mill last May after 50 years as the town's only significant economic base. It said the mill could not operate at a profit.

The citizens group, composing Mayor Paul Benoit, local merchants and unemployed members of the United Paperworkers International Union, say CIP management fears embarrassment if the mill is successfully reactivated.

A new company, Tembec Forest Products Inc., has been created by former CIP employees and is currently negotiating purchase of the mill with the blessing and promised support of the Quebec government.

The basic issue is price: CIP is understood to be demanding $2.5 million while Tembec has offered $1.5 million.

Doctor Loses Appeal

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan Court of Appeal Tuesday dismissed an appeal by Dr. Metro Surkan of Prince Albert who was found guilty of negligence in 1968 after a 38-year-old treaty Indian had his legs amputated because of gangrene.

Dr. Surkan had appealed both conviction and damages. Joseph Badger of Sturgeon Lake was awarded $67,500 damages in the suit.

Mr. Badger was run over by a tractor in April, 1968, suffering fractures to both legs. He was treated by Dr. Surkan at the Holy Family Hospital in Prince Albert.

Mr. Badger sued the doctor, claiming he had been negligent in applying casts too tightly, had failed to carry out adequate examinations.

During the original trial, a number of medical authorities gave evidence that tight casts caused gangrenous conditions in the man's legs.

Chief Justice E. M. Culliton said in his judgment that there was sufficient evidence that Dr. Surkan failed to apply the skill and knowledge ordinarily practiced by a medical practioner in similar cases.

Parachuting Called Biggest Head Game

They say you have to concentrate on what you are doing. If you let your body do what it wants to do you may get hurt or it may prove fatal.

Vic Borghese demands that his students learning the sport have at least six hours of ground school training prior to their first jump. He teaches part of the course at his home in Guelph and part at the Simcoe airport.

Mr. Borghese, who began parachuting 10 years ago, won't allow a student to jump unless the beginner has attained a mark of 90 per cent in the ground school. The course is intensive and designed to make the mind and muscles work.

The lessons include a bit of historical background. The first parachute was designed by Leonardo da Vinci in the 16th century. The design hasn't changed much to the present.

The first jump didn't come until much later when the French decided the invention had possibilities. It took the necessity born of two world wars to bring parachutes into their own.

The first military parachutes had no modifications. There was little control and they were almost impossible to steer. The jumper was at the mercy of the wind—pushed around, landing sometimes in trees, among wires or on church steeples.

Now all military surplus parachutes have a hole at the top called an apex. The apex allows some air to escape, decreasing the sway of the jumper. The hole is made by cutting away material.

Today the jumper is able to control his forward speed and where he wants to land by the use of wooden toggles attached to risers. A pull on a riser will result in a turn.

For the first few times the jump master spots the exit point and tells the student where to get out. On the word "ready" the jumper gets out of the airplane, feet on the outside step, hands on the wing strut and head back.

On the command "go" the jumper propels himself away from the plane at an angle and the static line opens the parachute in three seconds. In case of failure there is a reserve rip cord.

The first time the jumper leaves the airplane at 3,000 feet. After the main parachute has opened he looks up to see if there is any malfunction, makes a complete turn to get the feel of the equipment and then fastens his eyes on ground control.

The parachute has a forward speed of five miles an hour. If there is a wind speed of 10 m.p.h., subtracting the complete ride is with the wind.

Ground control judges the wind and parachute speed and has the student either back into the wind, decreasing forward speed, or face the wind, increasing forward speed. The combination results in a steady rate of descent, landing the jumper at or near the drop zone.

The student is taught to roll in the direction he is traveling when he touches the ground. In this way he avoids injuries. But if it is done wrong sprained ankles or broken bones may result.

The theory of the procedure is taught in a three-hour talk session at Guelph and three hours at the drop zone.

Once the theory is mastered the student is ready for his first jump. For me that first jump was the most beautiful, fantastic and moving experience of my life.

Drought Scourges Afghans

KABUL, Afghanistan AP) — Two years of severe drought are reflected in an orphanage here. A small apartment development owned by the government has become home for 70 children ranging in age from three to 12.

They were flown to Kabul from Ghor province in central Afghanistan where thousands have perished from famine. They are the lucky ones. There are no figures available on the numbers of deaths, but it is known they included thousands of children.

Some of the 12-year-olds in Kabul say their parents fled, leaving them alone. Thousands of parents still live in poverty after selling all they had to buy wheat.

A committee that visited Ghor several months ago discovered the plight of the children. Orphans flocked to a house for destitute children opened in the provincial centre, Chaghcharan.

"Many of those children looked like ghosts," a committee member said. "Some looked like animals. They were walking skeletons."

Virtually all of them suffered from chronic dysentery. Doctors found evidence they had been eating sand to fill their bellies. A doctor said they also ate herbs and grass.

The public health ministry looks after the orphans in the apartments requisitioned in Kabul. Twelve nurses work there.

The spectre of hunger still hangs over several provinces despite good spring harvests throughout Afghanistan. Wheat, powdered milk and medicine have been sent in army trucks. Where trucks can't go, the carrying is done by horses, donkeys, cows and yaks.

Twelve centres, each run by a special commission, have been established in the four provinces. The army housed up barracks in Farah province to house migrants who went to move from the drought areas to other parts of Afghanistan. Migrants are transported on army trucks.

The government has set up mobile inspection teams to supervise food distribution. The team can dismiss any distribution officials accused of corruption.

The Afghan press has criticized the handling of wheat distribution. High-ranking officers found thousands of tons of relief wheat stolen. Several officials are in jail.

Mexican Jet Seized

Rebels Freed By Hijackers

But the Cuban government gave no indication what it would do with the five hijackers, the ransom they collected and six suspected bank robbers surrendered by the Mexican government.

The aircraft landed in Havana today from Monterrey, Mexico, carrying 73 passengers, five hijackers and the six "political prisoners" whose release was demanded and won by the gunmen.

The hijackers shouted "Viva Cuba!" as they stepped from the Boeing 727 in Havana, carrying sub - machine - guns which they used to commandeer the flight during a domestic flight in Mexico.

The hijackers were whisked to the airport lounge, said witnesses who watched the six political prisoners follow. Among them was an injured woman on a stretcher.

The passengers were the last to leave the plane, owned by Mexican de Aviacion airline.

The plane was commandeered on a flight from the northern city of Monterrey to Mexico City and returned to Monterrey, where it circled for three hours before landing.

The hijackers demanded and got a ransom of four million pesos (about $320,000) as well as the release of the prisoners, who were among 12 persons, mostly university students, detained in the last few days for suspected urban guerrilla activities.

During the three tense hours the aircraft sat on the Monterrey runway, machine-gun fire was heard from inside the plane as the hijackers tested the weapons, which they had demanded from authorities.

The Mexican foreign ministry said Cuba will be asked to extradite the hijackers under an extradition treaty signed by the two governments in 1953.

The terms of the treaty do not include any legal basis to request that the prisoners be returned also.

Food Is Cheaper But Index Rises

Targets Set For Economy

OTTAWA (CP) — The Economic Council of Canada proposed today a set of performance goals it says should reduce unemployment and cut down the inflation rate.

The performance goals proposed in the council's annual review should reduce the unemployment rate to 4.5 per cent of the labor force by 1975 and cut the inflation rate to three per cent annually, it says.

Unemployment this year so far has averaged 6.1 per cent of the labor force. Prices have risen nearly four per cent in the most recent 12-month period for which broad statistics are available. Consumer prices alone have risen 5.3 per cent.

In brief, the goals are:

—An overall growth rate of six per cent a year in gross national expenditure, the total outlay of governments, business and individuals. Equivalent: in the gross national product, the GNE now is running at more than $102 billion a year and increasing at roughly the suggested rate.

—A 5.5-per-cent annual increase in consumer expenditure, and an increase of not more than five per cent a year in all government outlays on supplies and services.

—Annual increase of 10 per cent in outlays on machinery, plan and equipment, and increases of five per cent a year in housing construction.

—Export increases of six per cent a year, and import increases of 6.5 per cent a year.

—Increases of total employment amounting to 3.1 per cent a year, with output per person employed rising 2.8 per cent a year, and productivity in the manufacturing industries rising five per cent a year.

All of these, the council said, should be the achievement goals for 1973 to 1975, with spending and investment figured on the basis of dollars of unchanging value, not whittled away by inflation.

Paris Delegates Expect Kissinger

PARIS (Reuter) — The Vietnam peace talks continue today amid intense speculation that U.S. security adviser Henry Kissinger may return for final secret discussions now that President Nixon has been re-elected.

The big question is when will Kissinger come to Paris for what is hoped will be a conclusive session with Hanoi emissary Le Duc Tho that would end the Vietnam war.

The delegations have had talks for four years and during the last year attention has shifted from the weekly gatherings to the secret discussions between Kissinger and Tho.

HENRY KISSINGER
. . . may talk again

North Vietnam has consistently opposed new negotiations with the Americans unless the agreement for a ceasefire was signed on Oct. 31. But U.S. diplomats say Hanoi will agree to another round of secret talks.

The North Vietnamese delegation to the talks has reacted to Nixon's re-election with allegations that he was stepping up and prolonging the war.

They quoted North Vietnamese Prime Minister Pham Van Dong's statement in Hanoi that his people would back until they expelled "the U.S. imperialist aggressors and their vassals."

Despite the North Vietnamese hawk's remarks, diplomatic sources here have said that Hanoi and Washington now are indicating to each other their willingness to hold another secret parley.

Nixon allowed the deadline for the Oct. 31 signing to pass because he wanted the nine-point ceasefire agreement to be clarified further.

The United States wants the withdrawal of part of North Vietnam's 145,000 regular forces who are fighting in South Vietnam.

Failing this, the Americans would like to see these forces confined to their bases, informed sources said here.

These areas would be along the Laotian border from the northern part of South Vietnam, in the Mekong Delta and in the central highlands on the Laos-Cambodia border.

New York Drowns In Coastal Gale

NEW YORK (AP) — A vicious coastal gale, with winds gusting up to 69 m.p.h., broke all records for a November downpour Wednesday, inundating the metropolitan area with 3.06 inches of rain in less than 18 hours.

Air and highway traffic was snarled. Commuter and subway trains ran late, and a subway line between Manhattan and Brooklyn was knocked out of service for a time by flooding. Light vans, trucks and house trailers were banned from higher bridges, including the George Washington bridge over the Hudson River.

The previous record rain for this date was 1.79 inches in 1917.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Cold north winds swept across the province and overnight temperatures dipped into the 30s in the south and the teens in the north. Considerable cloud will prevail today. House Costs Climb

OTTAWA (CP) — The Consumer Price Index rose to 142.1 in October from 141.8 in September despite a drop in food prices, Statistics Canada reported today.

Higher housing and clothing costs were mainly responsible for the increase, which was about average for this time of year.

The index, based on 1961 consumer prices equalling 100, was 134.9 in October last year. In percentage terms, the 12-month increase was 5.3 per cent, and the index was up one-tenth of one per cent for the month.

The statistics bureau, which surveys more than 300 consumer goods and services every month to compile the index, said the same increase again was recorded between September and October in both 1970 and 1971. Food prices usually move down in October.

A small increase in house rents was reported, but costs of home ownership rose strongly. The increase in clothing prices, the bureau said, was a movement that usually occurs between September and October, with the approach of winter.

In dollar terms, the over-all index means that it cost $14.20 in October to buy what $14.18 bought in September, or what $13.49 bought in October last year, in a broad selection of consumer goods and services.

In the food category, the price of restaurant meals rose last month, but there was a significant drop in the cost of foods purchased for home consumption. For food at home, last month's grocery basket cost $14.13 compared with $14.31 in September and $12.90 in October last year. The same foods cost $10 in 1961.

In compiling the over-all index, Statistics Canada figures housing cost represent 32 per cent of the total, food prices 29 per cent, and clothing prices 11 per cent.

PM Meets Cabinet

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau met with his cabinet today to discuss, among other things, the contents of the next throne speech and, presumably, the date when Parliament will meet.

Asked by reporters whether the date would be decided today, the prime minister said, "Perhaps."

He said that in drafting the speech, which outlines the government's legislative plans, an effort would be made to meet some of the criticisms raised during the recent election campaign.

Asked whether a cabinet shuffle was imminent, Mr. Trudeau said, "No, certainly not in the next two weeks."

Count-down Under Way For Canada's Satellite

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (CP) — The count-down proceeded smoothly today as launch time drew near for Canada's first domestic communications satellite.

An official of the National Aeronautics and Space Agency (NASA) said this morning that no problems developed as technicians worked through the eight on preparation for the 6:20 a.m. EST launch.

The satellite, named Anik-1, is the key part of a $90-million communications system that will bring live television service and dial telephones to Canada's North.

Telesat Canada Corp., owner of the satellite and its associated ground stations, has established a gathering of Canadian officials and others here, including six students from northern areas, brought down by the CBC.

The $50-pound satellite is being launched by NASA for a $7-million fee. There are no guarantees if the launch fails, Telsat Canada still says.

But another satellite, Anik 2, is scheduled for April launching. If Anik-1 succeeds, Anik-2 will serve as a backup satellite.

Homeowners Without Hydro Threatening Legal Action

MONTREAL (CP) — Homeowners left without electric power since Monday threatened legal action Wednesday as a strike by 8,500 Quebec-Hydro employees entered 11's fourth day today with no sign of a return to the bargaining table.

Of 236 power failures since the walkout began at 7:30 a.m. Monday, 113 remain unrepaired, leaving 7,893 customers in Montreal, Quebec City and the Laurentians area without electricity.

In the Montreal suburb of Cote S. Luc, where more than 4,000 persons have been without electricity since Monday morning, residents said at a meeting they would seek a court order demanding the repair of the broken cable that caused the blackout.

A member of the union committee responsible for handling emergency calls said in an interview the break would not be repaired until the strike ends.

In the national assembly, the second request in two days for an emergency debate on the strike was turned down. Speaker Jean-Noel Lavoie told Camille Laurin, Parti Quebecois leader in the assembly, that the situation was not serious enough to warrant an emergency debate.

The linemen, maintenance workers, engineers and office personnel are represented by the Canadian Union of Public Employees and have been without a contract for 11 months.

Hold Tax Line Advice Of Experts

OTTAWA (CP) — The Economic Council of Canada says governments should hold the line on taxes in the next three years and perhaps even reduce them.

It also says the country can expand its tax-supported welfare system without increasing tax rates.

The report released today was approved by the 27-member council last June, about three months before the recent federal election campaign in which opposition parties advocated substantial tax cuts.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said the government he would form would continue a three-per-cent tax cut after its scheduled expiry date Dec. 31, and make an additional four-per-cent cut.

NDP Leader David Lewis also said the three-per-cent reduction should be continued, and a further cut of up to eight per cent should be made.

The government then backed Finance Minister John Turner's stand that he could not renew the three-per-cent cut and would permit the higher rate to be restored Jan. 1, unless he were assured of substantial other income.

However, Prime Minister Trudeau hedged that position somewhat in a news conference last Thursday. Asked then whether the three-per-cent reduction would be renewed, he said: "Whether we will take any other fiscal measures is something I really can't answer now."

Red Carpet Ready for Lahr Visitors

Belleville becomes an international host today with the arrival of an eight - member delegation from our twin city of Lahr, West Germany.

A Canadian Forces 707 was scheduled to leave at CFB Trenton at 6 p.m., where the visitors will begin a six-day stay in Ontario. The visit reciprocates a trip one month ago by Belleville officials to Lahr.

Mayor J. Russell Scott and his wife, Marion, were to head the landing reception. Also on hand were Col W. B. Paisley, Commanding Officer of CFB Trenton, Aldermen and Mrs. Ben Corke, Alderman Gerald Joyce and City Manager Jim Reynolds.

Accompanying Dr. Brucker are his daughter, Cordula, City Manager Adolf Sohler, education director Dr. Willehelm Seibis, and four councillors, Robert Sehles, Walter Detilling, Fritz Leser and Eugene Lauderer. Dr. Brucker's wife is ill and was not able to make the trip.

Most of the visit will be devoted to pleasure — Quinte style. Planned for today is a tour of the Hastings County building, Bata Shoes, Marmoraton and Mine, Belleville General Hospital and a farm in rural Marmora. There's even provision for hot dogs and hamburgers at the Quinte Ski Area, should the guests fall into the North American spirit.

The delegation travels to Toronto Monday where the province is playing host at a luncheon at the Parliament buildings. Premier William Davis or one of his cabinet ministers is expected to be present.

At some point, the visitors will board a plane for a flight over Niagara Falls.

All types of meals are planned, both domestic and German, in locales that vary from day to day.

Some business may also be conducted during the stay. Dr. Brucker and Dr. Scott, through arrangements with the Canadian Armed Forces, are organizing an annual student exchange in which eight students from each city will travel overseas for a summ e r term - Atlantic education.

After their arrival, the visitors from Lahr were to be taken to their quarters at Quinte House near the Trenton base. There, they'll find a sampling of information and goods indigenous to the area.

The Mohawk Indians of Tyendenaga Reserve have provided beadwork ornaments as well as their well-known cornsilver soup. There are also copies of Nick Mika's Mosaic of Belleville to take home, a variety of interesting Canadian stamps and pen and pencil sets contributed by the Bank of Montreal.

Everyone — especially those of German origin — is invited to Friday's 11 a.m. reception at Belleville city hall. A long list of civic representatives will be on hand and Dr. Richard Potter and MP Jack Ellis will give brief speeches.

At the Legion Hall luncheon, Fred Deacon of Deacon Brothers Sportswear will present each guest with a Belleville - manufactured jacket.

Ironically, Saturday is also Remembrance Day in Canada and the host committee decided to take the visitors for a journey into the country. After a stop-over at the Quinte Mall, the Belleville Industrial Commission is holding an evening dinner at the Four Seasons Hotel.

Home entertainment might be the theme for Sunday's activities. Dr. and Mrs. Scott, Alderman and Mrs. Corke, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Vaughan and Capt. and Mrs. Paus will treat the visitors to real Quinte hospitality following a morning church service at CFB Trenton.

Time permitting, a stag will be held Monday night at Sun Luck Gardens after the delegation returns from Toronto.

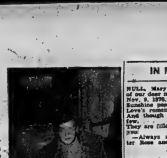
The tour committee, headed by Ald. Corke, has been working steadily since the Belleville delegation returned from Germany Oct. 6 after a 10-day stay.

They have brought in army troops and city police to act as security forces and 11 helicopters have been flown in to ferry the guests around.

The only hitch, it seems, concerns drinks. The Germans apparently don't drink, while the Canadians' head - aided at home expressed no desire for beer. That, however, only wine, so perhaps there will be some sampling before the holiday ends.



Rainfall More Than Inch

Skies were rained dry yesterday as more than an inch of rain fell on the Belleville-Trenton area.

The Canadian Forces Base Trenton weather forecaster said skies would remain cloudy but no more rain seemed to be falling for today.

Yesterday 1.34 inches of rain were reported at the base making a total of 1.53 inches since wet weather moved into the area Tuesday.

In the same two-day period Bancroft had 1.61 inches and Tweed 1.54 inches.

First Flyer

Rick Williams wasted no time today. Hired as an official aldermanic candidate in the upcoming municipal election, Mr. Williams was the first to file this morning, leaving the remainder of the day, Friday, and all day Monday for the balance of candidates to formally announce their intentions at City Hall. Election day is Dec. 4.

Metric Change to Be Gradual

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

Canadian progress for implementing the metric system will be determined largely by the course taken by the government of the United States, Paul Boire, executive director of Canada's Metric Preparatory Commission indicated last night.

Speaking to a public seminar on the metric system at the Loyalist College, he said "Canada will not be one micro-second behind or ahead of the United States."

While distinctly Canadian approaches are being taken to introduce metric measurements in this country "it is the national interest" (as stated in a 1970 White Paper), the executive director said that the government does not want to enact legislation that would impose hardship. Instead of, for example, requiring that an industry throw out manufacturing equipment on a specific date and replace it with machinery to produce products in standard metric sizes, Boire said government would prefer to have such changes made when production equipment would ordinarily be replaced.

He made it clear that for many products, conversion to the metric system is not just a matter of specifying the metric size of the product to internationally recognized sizes.

Why switch? Boire told the audience there are only nine countries in the world that are not either on the metric system or in the process of metric. And the list is largely composed of small countries like Muscat and Oman and Sierra Leone.

The compelling reason is that two-thirds of world trade is conducted in metric units and this will increase when the changeover is completed in the European Office in 1972. Britain in 1975, New Zealand in 1976, Australia in 1978 and the United States in 1983.

Boire said the costs but there will also be benefits . . . the costs may well be greater if we do not adopt it," he concluded.

No Controversy Here Over Trustees' Brief

The Ontario Public School Trustees Association yesterday presented its brief on the school grant system favored Roman Catholic separate schools.

The Association presented a brief to education ministers Thomas Wells, asking that per pupil grants in public schools be increased by the same level as those to separate schools and be made 10.

A prepared press release said: "As elected public school trustees, we feel obligated to bring forcibly to the attention of the minister of education and the people of Ontario an unjust and dangerous situation whereby public schools are being increasing ly short - changed in favor of Roman Catholic separate schools.

In a press conference in Toronto later, Dalton Cathie association president said: "I hardly think the press release

Four Seek Re-election

TRENTON (Staff) — Four Trenton councillors have announced they will be standing for office in the upcoming municipal election December 4.

D. James MacDonald, mayor of Trenton for 15 years and a 12-year veteran of the Trenton Public Utilities Commission, has announced he will seek re-election to the post.

As well, Trenton's three school trustees will be seeking another term. Ralph Weaver and Jean Hutchison will run for Trenton Hastings County Board of Education. John Forbes will again run for a seat on Trenton's separate school representative on the Hastings County Board of Education.

Job-seekers Increase

The number of persons seeking jobs through Canada Manpower Centre in the Belleville-Hastings county area in October increased from the same month last year.

However, Manpower officials have stepped up visits to employers in a drive to increase employment for the Christmas season.

H. W. Ham, Manpower's Belleville-area manager said he and the centre's counsellors have increased such calls by 60 per cent this year to extend employment of the work pool available through Manpower for seasonal jobs.

The number of persons registered for work through the Centre increased to 1,146 in October from 994 in the same month last year.

In the same period placements were up slightly — 218 compared to 208.

The Belleville centre serves an area that includes Belleville, Ameliasburg township in Prince Edward County and all Hastings County outside Trenton.

Most noticeable decrease in the vacancies was in the construction industry which, at this time of year is shifting to indoor work, Ham said.

There was a slight improvement in retail job opportunities and little change in the executive and managerial sectors.

Three of the area's largest industries which he didn't identify were starting thinwork shifts, which could mean increased job opportunities due to increased orders, said Mr. Karn.

Coming Events

DR. JOHN STOCK

Dr. Stock was born in Belleville and served in Normandy and northwest Europe with the 28th Armoured Regiment, a British Columbia tank regiment, entered the medical faculty of the University of Toronto after the war and returned to Belleville to practise.

He is a past president of the medical staff at Belleville General Hospital, has served on the board of governors of the hospital for two years and has been active in St. John Ambulance in the city.

Dr. John Stock Council Candidate

Orderly growth and better planning for Belleville will be the theme of the medical candidate's campaign to be waged by Dr. John A. Stock, city physician, in his bid for a downtown seat this December.

"I'm tired of seeing hightrises go up in older districts where we should be maintaining our heritage," he said. "Streets turn up for Sewer installation are the result of poor planning."

Dr. Stock served a term as alderman in 1956-57 and sat on Belleville and Suburban Planning Board.

"When I served on planning board we didn't have had a good plan ready to submit," he says. "It was prepared at no extra cost to the public and was ready when the old planning board was phased out. City council did not see fit to accept this plan and now Quinte Plannint Board has hired an outside firm at considerable cost to prepare a plan. It is apparently dragging its feet."

All That's Left of Dockside Landmark

Molasses Tank Gone

A long-standing landmark on the Belleville waterfront has been cut down.

Workers now are clearing away the remains of a 37-foot-high tank — with a 366,000 gallon capacity — that once stored bulk shipments of molasses.

The tank is believed to have been at least 40 years old and the molasses was used by Corby's Distilleries Ltd. up to about 10 years ago when delivery by tanker up the Bay of Quinte was discontinued.

A. J. Legge, of Plainfield Metal and Machinery, who was given the demolition contract, says there was a residue of about 9,000 gallons left in the tank which he gave to farmers for stock feeding.

The tank — demolition of which started several weeks ago — realized about 75 tons of steel, says Mr. Legge.

Brown Steps Down

TRENTON (Staff) — It seems quite possible that Trenton's town council may be acclaimed during the Dec. 4 municipal elections. Few people have expressed interest in contesting seats and this morning, another councillor announced he is removing his political hat from the upcoming election ring.

George Brown, pharmacist at Lord's Pharmacy on Dundas Street and a councillor for the past four years, this morning announced he would not seek re-election Dec. 4.

"I just don't feel I have the time for it," he said. Although he had been asked to run for mayor this time, Councillor Brown told The Intelligencer in a telephone interview, "I've had enough of it, it's a bit frustrating."

Councillor Brown joins Councillor E. M. "Ted" Parker off the ballot for this election. Mayor Duncan McDonald, Councillors George Greer and Peter Aziz have so far been the only ones to announce their candidacy, along with merchant Ronald Price.

Today's late morning announcement leaves only Councillors Stanley Ketcheson and Paul Tripp to announce their positions for the upcoming election.

Wet Hunt Poor

Wet weather has made for a poor start to the 1972 deer-hunting season in the Quinte district.

Of 1,181 hunters checked by wildlife officers of the natural resources of ministry Tweed district office, only 74 deer had been shot.

This was a 6.4 per cent success rating — although clearer statistics will be available after next week when the ministry sets up stations at Northbrook and Eldorado to check hunters heading out of the bush.

Rain before and after the start of the hunt Monday has made tracking conditions difficult. In wet weather deer won't move and scent is reduced.

Last year with 19,500 hunters in the district — the highest concentration of any hunting area in Ontario — some 4,300 deer were shot, a success rating of 22 per cent.

Already, ministry officials at Tweed said today, several infractions of hunting laws had been uncovered by wardens in the field. Charges were expected to be laid against a number of hunters for having no licences and carrying loaded firearms in automobiles.

Makeshift Sewer Worries Council

PICTON (Staff) — Water flooding private property near Queen Elizabeth School here has been channelled to a town sewer; but councillors are not convinced this will assist Prince Edward County Board of Education trustees with the injunction they face in this matter.

An open ditch has been dug around the flooding area and a 30-inch tile leading into a 24-inch sewer on Elm Street has been connected.

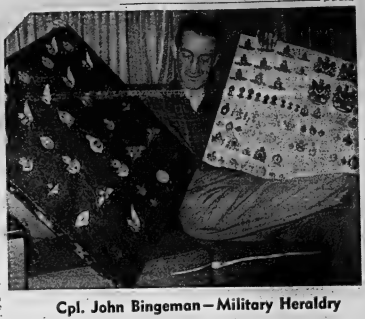
Picton Reeve Albert Piroth said "I think all we have done with a 30-inch pipe on a 24-inch sewer is to relieve the board of the injunction and put the monkey right on our back."

Deputy reeve James Bird, chairman of the public works committee, said the board is striving to conserve the taxpayers' money and added hopefully the sewer can handle the extra flow.

He said, however, that town engineer David McIntosh and members of the public works committee have expressed doubt in this direction.

A committee to work with the board of education will be established by mayor Marriott Ackerman to consider a joint responsibility for relieving the flooding if the town system cannot handle the added flow.

Ernest Shortt, business administrator for the county school board, said flooding problems started when a swampy area at the rear of the school was filled for use as a playground. Water now runs into the playground and overflows onto private property. One Elm Street resident sued the board and won an injunction against it. Trustees must now correct the situation.



Raccoon Not Rabid

Anti - rabies treatment has been halted for a 2½-year-old Stirling-area boy who was bitten by a raccoon last Friday.

Federal laboratory tests showed the animal was not rabid, Dr. C. R. Lenk, public health officer for Hastings and Prince Edward counties said yesterday.

Treatment — a two - week routine of daily injections — was advised after the raccoon's behavior in permitting the child to approach it, raised suspicions the animal had rabies.

Dr. Lenk said the raccoon may have had distemper, which is not transferable to humans.

Cpl. John Bingeman—Military Heraldry

Badges Military History

By ELMER BONTER
Special Correspondent

TRENTON — A corporal at Canadian Forces Base Trenton hopes to preserve an important part of Canadian history with an expanding collection of military badges and insignias dating back to 1608.

Corporal John Bingeman, 22 Rivers Drive, Middleton Park has accumulated close to 2,000 individual metal and cloth specimens since starting his hobby in 1956. His collection has grown from a hat badge he received from Sgt. James Bell of Preston, Ontario who was killed in action with the Highland Light Infantry of Canada in World War II.

A sentimental most cherished badge for reasons is one he obtained from his father, Harold Bingeman, who served as bandmaster of the Oxford Rifles at Woodstock, Ontario and is now a musician with the Stratford symphony orchestra.

Cpl. Bingeman's undertaking is officially described as Heraldry in Canada, although his collection includes insignias from Great Britain, United States, Australia, New Zealand, France and Germany.

He points out he wants it to go to his son and then eventually be passed along to the Trenton Branch of the Royal Canadian Legion or the National War Museum at Ottawa.

The collection, already containing numerous rare items, became more valuable with unification of the armed services in 1968 when a number of regular units were disbanded in the process.

In 27 years with the armed services, Cpl. Bingeman has travelled to many overseas places and has been able to acquire pieces otherwise almost inaccessible to the average hobbiest. On a visit to Algiers, for example, he picked up a prized Foreign Legion badge with decoration ribbon attached.

Finding additional memorabilia can be difficult as Cpl. Bingeman has learned. But every so often good fortune is on his side like the time he visited a police station at Baden Baden, Germany in search of mementos. As it turned out that inquiry netted him a complete set of the forces badges in brand new condition. Another sortie produced an insignia of the First Regiment of Coldstream which originated in England early in the 17th century.

But the most likely place a badge hunter will be rewarded is in a pawn shop, according to the corporal. It's where he's discovered more than one long - sought - after piece of military regalia to add to his growing collection.

Municipal Election

The tempo is beginning to quicken on the municipal election scene. There is the contest for Mayor and as candidates for council come forward there is the prospect of fresh ideas and a new look on Bellleville's next administration.

Alderman Robin Jeffrey in running for Mayor believes that for her this is the psychological moment. After five years on Council she says it is time to "either move up or out." She has said too that a community must obtain the ideas of dozens of different council members over a few years.

Mrs. Jeffrey sees a need for more parks, playgrounds, open spaces and beautification programs, including tree planting. Downtown — what she sees as the central core — is another sphere of potential development. No doubt Mrs. Jeffrey has some specific ideas about this but meantime she is content to note only that it should be a place to relax and enjoy.

Incumbent Mayor Dr. J. Russell Scott has spoken lately of orderly growth and Belleville has seen such growth, including as Mayor Scott points out, the new hospital buildings, facilities for sewage disposal, road work and maintenance. But has this growth always been consistent? Or well planned? What about the construction of high-rise apartment buildings, for instance, conflicting with traditional and modern homes nearby, compromising the special character of each?

The Magic Circle' plan of 1968 Mayor Scott sees as one that must take its turn in the roster of improvements. There can be no argument with this, but it cannot be said that anything that has to do with the progress and viability of downtown is a matter of some urgency. Road work, which Mayor Scott also mentions, is far from perfect, as a drive around the city centre reveals. There it is under way, as on Dundas Street west, potholes abound and, left unattended, are a hazard for motorists.

There is in this election another matter that has been of some controversy since last April. We refer to the conflict of interest allegations against Mayor Scott by Alderman Soutter. The charges were renewed by Alderman Soutter in Council on Monday, despite a recent statement by Mayor Scott, ending months of virtual silence on the matter. He denied any such conflict and called for Alderman Soutter's resignation along with that of Ald. Jeffrey who had seconded the former's original motion calling for a judicial inquiry.

As it happens Mr. Soutter, who has proved himself an able councillor and one who has been active in other spheres of public life, is not running again. He has accepted a position with the provincial government in the health services field.

Meanwhile, the "conflict" issue remains.

Aldermen Jean Smith, Arnold Orr and Paul Russell have announced they will run again and other candidates at the time of writing include railroader Albert Lentini, ambulance owner-operator Stuart Meeks, stockbroker Roger Porter, who is chairman of the Downtown Businessmen's Association, city alderman Joe Raycroft, city physician Dr. John Stock, psychology teacher Rick Williams and businessman George Zegouras.

Their interest is an encouraging sign of public concern for the needs of the community at this vital time in its development. We would like to see it translated into further community progress — in home and industrial development, in the fight against pollution, including such mundane but nevertheless important tasks as ridding our streets and sidewalks of litter, and in the realm of sport and recreation, to mention just some.

The election picture will become more apparent as the days pass and more candidates put forward. The vote is not far away and we need maximum community interest and participation.

Sick Humor

Driving through Foxboro last weekend we noticed that someone with a sick sense of humor had been at work painting over the road signs. Not only had the sign identifying Foxboro been splashed garishly with paint, but the name Foxboro had been given a new and vulgar connotation. Similarly the River Road sign in the village had been daubed in slap-happy and indeed, irresponsible, fashion. This is the kind of prank we can do without.

They Decide Tax Dispensations

Government Deputies-the 'Inner Group'-Wield Great Power

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Governments, cabinets, parliaments come and go, but nothing changes, it's the holders of invisible power.

In continuing touch by phone, they meet, informally, about twice a month; the Inner Group — at least four, but sometimes five and six quiet men — for lunch at either Ottawa's enclave of wealth and privilege, the Rideau Club, or at the Canadian Grill of the Chateau Laurier.

Both establishments offer quiet comfort, elegance, privacy and fine cuisine, conveniently just on the rim of Parliament Hill.

Members of this Inner Group wear conservatively cut lounge suits—if conventional blue or grey, and they talk quietly at a corner table in the Rideau Club or an alcove at the Chateau Grill, blending unobtrusively into the atmosphere with the visiting industrial, financial and business leaders, and the lobbyists who are part of a very small and select facet of the Capital's scene.

To those who know and recognize them, these men carry with them the aura of enormous power.

But it is your money. Taxes. The collecting, and even more important to them, the spending.

When they exchange ideas about it, their quiet conversation is likely to affect the lives of every Canadian one way or another, sooner or later.

They are not elected, these men with the invisible power. They are appointed. By the Prime Minister's favor and selection they have found their high places.

They theoretically are supposed to be politically sterilized. By tradition, they must be nonpartisans, serving no political master, dedicated exclusively to the service of the state.

But because the Liberals have ruled the land in 31 of the last 37 years — from 1935 up now with only the six Conservative years of former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker interrupting the long reign — attrition, if nothing else, has had to have resulted in these holders of invisible power being more Grit than Tory.

For it is safe to say no prime minister, if he knows what he is doing, ever deliberately appoints to an office of such immense power men who are not at least understanding of his political philosophy.

And if, on coming to power, a new prime minister inherits a highly appointed office holder who openly is not in accord with his line of thinking, he gets rid of him.

As Prime Minister Diefenbaker did with Mitchell Sharp, ousting him out, quite unceremoniously, as deputy minister of Trade and Industry.

Both the Inner Group of today, lunching quietly if not altogether inconspicuously at the Rideau Club or Chateau Grill.

Calling the invisible power shots.

Treasury Board Secretary, Al Johnson, Deputy Finance Minister Simon Reisman, External Affairs Undersecretary Ed Ritchie, Deputy Industry Trade and Commerce Minister Jim Grandy, Deputy Transport Minister Gerry Stoner, and Deputy Energy Mines and Resources Minister Jack Austin.

Occasionally the Inner Group is "joined by the most powerful deputy of them all, Gordon Robertson, the tall, shy reserved and graying man who, as Clerk of the Privy Council, briefs the Prime Minister every morning on the business of the day and as secretary to the cabinet exerts enormous influence over its work by managing the flow of documents and directing the agenda.

Between them these men administer a staff of 20,000 people and a combined budget of $1.110 million.

Their secret strength lies in their ability to influence the cabinet and its committees and through them, Parliament.

Governments rise and fall. To these holders of invisible power it matters little, for one government needs them as urgently as another.

Korean-Style Concord Might Suit Vietnam

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

It will be 20 years next May since the Korean War ended in the permanent armistice signed at Panmunjon. Next year will also mark 20 years since the Republic of Korea was guaranteed, more-or-less, security in the southern half of the once-united Korean Peninsula.

With the postwar future of another Southeast Asian state at the stake, namely the Republic of South Vietnam, how has South Korea managed after 20 years of independence and continued reliance on the non-Communist world?

In terms of the difficult environment of power nations in Asia, Korea is well into an economic boom, yet on the verge of a one-man dictatorship has done well.

Unlike Vietnam which was largely an agricultural region before the 1954 divisions into separate countries, the northern half of Korea was the seat of electric power potential and heavy industry. Most of the latter taken over by the People's Republic of North Korea after 1945 had been built by the Japanese colonial powers.

South Korea was the breadbasket of the peninsula, almost totally devoid of industry and with little hydro power. Both have since been supplied through judicious agreements and technical assistance with the United States, West Germany and Japan. Offshore industries taking advantage of cheap, but semi-skilled labor, have flooded to Korea.

Highly-competitive industries such as textiles—finished apparel already in existence in abundance in Southeast Asia in Taiwan, Hong Kong, Pakistan, not to omit the giant People's Republic of China—sprang up in Korea.

As with almost all postwar Asian states submerged by Marxism, economic boom has been synonymous with, right wing dictatorship. Thailand. This was true with Taiwan, the Philippines and Indonesia. Exceptions to the rule would be Hong Kong (still a British crown colony) and Malaysia, (still a Commonwealth nation with representative government).

Laissez-faire economic policies are more easily instituted by strongmen regimes not over-burdened with the parliamentalia of the welfare state.

This is about to come true in South Korea as well where 53-year-old President and General Chung Hee Park is on the verge of submitting constitutional amendments to a national referendum to give him power in perpetuity.

The national assembly would also be his tool, with the voting majority of members appointed directly by the proposed permanent president.

Perhaps this is the political cost for economic boom in asian nations which have never known Western parliamentary democracy. South Korea, unquestioned in every last decade by puritanical military rulers who have tried to legislate public morality like a bunch of Greek colonels, and resurict the free mass media, has prospered as never before.

Outsiders who visited Seoul, South Korea's capital after the Korean War, or worse saw the city in ruins after its recapture during that event, are overwhelmed at the changes in the city and its people.

North and South Korea, once incorrigibly separate, have recently met through the common needs of the Red Cross in both states. And negotiations about Korean reunification are more than figments of the imagination.

Assessing the bad as well as the good in South Korean recovery since May, 1953, it appears if a similar pattern could be expected in an even more war-torn South Vietnam. it might be the best we can expect in the long run.

Community Chest Chairman J. J. Trudeau today urged all canvassers in the Red Feather campaign to complete their assignments and file returns at headquarters by Saturday. The total now reported from all sources has reached 79 percent of the $94,500 objective.

The Rod Cross will set up its monthly Blood Donor Clinic at the Kiwanis Centre, and later the unit will move its facilities to the Northern Electric factory to accept donation from the employees. This trip the Red Cross requires 300 donors in order to meet the quota.

Major R. H. Wilson, Field Secretary of the Canadian Red Cross Society, addressed a large gathering of Red Cross workers in the Oddfellows' Community Hall in Trenton. In an address he told of the importance of Red Cross work in the present struggle and stressed the need for a greater effort among the women of the community. The urgency of the need for the whole-hearted support of all is shown by the fact that nearly $½ million dollars annually are spent for parcels of food to British prisoners of war in German prison camps. The Canadian Red Cross supplies supplies 40,000 11-pound boxes weekly at a cost of $2.50 each. These are urgently needed because of the poor quality of food in Germany with which the prisoners are fed.

Hospital Parking

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I have given the feasibility of parking meters at Bayside General Hospital a great deal of thought; in fact I brought this matter to the floor of County Council.

The Hospital Board is preparing to buy property as the houses in the vicinity come up for sale for future parking space. I have recently spent some time in the hospital and noticed land to the south of the tracks which could readily be made available for parking. The expense of putting a crossing or a cross walk for pedestrians would not be excessive. There is considerable talk about the hospital employees taking up parking space that the visitors badly need. An area south of the tracks could be used, thus releasing the present parking space for visitors.

I have been informed that this area south of the tracks is in the Green Belt area and that Belleville Council will not release this property to the Hospital Board: County representatives also claim the possibility of getting this land for parking is still possible.

The reason for writing this letter is to find out if the people in Belleville and district prefer parking meters. I have a feeling parking meters are to bring in more revenue rather than and the parking situation. When a relative or friend is in hospital the anxiety and frustration does not have to be multiplied by meters.

If there are any other people with the same thoughts perhaps if they would contact the proper authorities the problem could be resolved without too much difficulty.

Mechanics of an Election

By DON O'HEARN
from The Intelligencer's
Queen's Park Bureau

Because of mix ups in the election law in the federal election, and currently in municipal elections, there has been a strong demand for permanent voters' list.

It is claimed that they would end the major problem of enumeration which sees hundreds of names left off the list in some ridings.

Also as they would do away with the two weeks needed for enumeration they could shorten the time for elections and cut down on campaigning—something with which most politicians would agree.

Also, on the surface it would appear that they would make cheaper elections as there would not be any cost for enumeration.

Roderick Lewis, our chief election officer, says that studies by federal officials have shown that permanent lists could be vastly more expensive.

With permanent lists there is an annual registration and changes to be made throughout the year as people move or die.

This means there would be permanent officials. And they would take money.

Enumeration for our last provincial election cost $2.2 million.

Registration offices in all our 117 ridings, and at least one would be needed for each constituency, could hardly be maintained for this amount of money.

And the cost, whatever it turned out to be, would be a yearly one not an election one-shot as the $2.2 million is.

However, while some politicians wanting them, as they do, we probably will have them eventually.

There is a possibility that both federal and provincial governments could share the cost. There are few differences in the qualifications for voting between these two levels of voting.

But when it comes to the municipal field the situation is different.

Municipalities would probably have to carry their own lists.

In some municipalities, for one thing, only property owners can vote on certain questions.

And then there are people who have property in two or more municipalities and can vote in each. While in federal and provincial jurisdictions voting qualification, of course, is strictly by one residence only.

However, somebody may come up with a method of covering the above levels of government with the one registration. Then a permanent list would unquestionably be in order.

Mitchell Retires

Kingston Whig - Standard

Eastern Ontario and Northern New York will miss the enthusiasm and energy of Grant Mitchell who has recently retired as executive secretary of the Thousand Island Bridge Authority.

This ambassador of goodwill has been active in the area since life early 1930's, when the first bridge was built as a bridge between Alexandria Bay, N.Y., and Landsdowne, Ontario, first became a reality. He has devoted his energies to promoting two-way traffic across the Thousand Islands Bridge, which was his principal responsibility, but in doing so he has benefited communities on both sides of the international border and has made both Canadians and Americans much more aware of the good qualities of their next-door neighbours.

A gregarious man by nature, Grant Mitchell made thousands of friends during his long term as principal executive director of the bridge. He is being retained by the T.I.B.A. as a consultant and we can think of no better way his talents could be used than in continuing his long established habit of making friends and customers for the Thousand Islands Bridge and for both Canada and the United States.

"The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world."

John 1:29

There is only one way that the sin problem of the world is taken care of and that's through the Saviour. It was settled through His sacrifice on the cross. "Christ died for our sins."

Fire And Image Of Downtown

Oglesbarg (N.Y.) Journal

We never thought we would live to see the day the "fix" was the cleaning up of the "wreckage of the past" that has accrued as recent disastrous fire. Judging by past performance and experience, we have succeeded in looking at those charred ruins for at best a few years and probably five or more. John Langford who owned the Strand Theatre owned the Belleview Inn which had two fires some years ago and was left standing for five years before it was demolished.

We don't know whether there was a single hero in this case or whether there are several heroes. Anyway, Dave Bell, who was acting city manager when Frank Gordon was away on leave and Mayor Byrnes called a meeting after the fire with Mr. Langford and Paul Jones of Dillingham. Jones and Chisel Inc. had control of the properties on the Strand. Representatives of the insurance companies Paul Jones said he would advance the money to clean up the wreck and we understand that he put pressure on the insurance companies and the $2000 right has to pay Nicconville Co., for removing the ruins and filling in the hole.

There may have been others involved in this deal and we hope they don't remain nameless through history. They all should be nominated for a Pulitzer Prize for "Cleaning Up Municipal Wreckage." All of those who had a part in this episode deserve a heartfelt "thank you" from the citizens of Oglesburg.

Thanks to them we won't have to look at that awful looking mess in a burnt-out Strand for five years.

We hope that Bud Phillips does something about his diner which is next door. It is pretty terrible looking now and should be repaired and painted or torn down. When that is done that corner will no longer be a civic blight and a public liability.

Fire Caught Early

TRENTON (Staff) — Gilbert Weese of 251 Victoria Ave. was returning home from work at 4:54 p.m. Tuesday when he spotted smoke seeping from the eaves of his mother's home at 253 Victoria.

He ran into the house and told his mother, Mrs. Myrtle Weese and brother Robert, eating supper at the time that the house was on fire.

Trenton Fire Department spent less than an hour extinguishing the blaze that was restricted to an area between a bedroom floor and ceiling. Cause of the blaze was blamed on overheated stovepipes.

Deputy Fire Chief Henry Barr estimated damage at between $100 and $125. He said little smoke and water damage was done, the fire being spotted early enough to get it under control wth little problem.

CJBQ Wins Award

Radio station CJBQ will be the first recipient of the newly instituted annual environment award, it was announced at Tuesday's PACE meeting.

PACE, People Against Contaminated Environment, a local pollution fighting group, will annually sponsor the award to "the outstanding effort of the previous year."

CJBQ, specifically announcer Lee Jouard, was chosen for the award in recognition of the support they gave to the recycled paper project initiated by PACE, which spokesmen now say is running "successfully".

A design is still to be obtained for the trophy and it is expected that one trophy will be presented to the station and a smaller replica to Mr. Jouard.

A spokesman for the organization said, "CJBQ has been really fantastic in their support." It is hoped the presentation could be made in the early days of December.

One Step at A Time

Working slowly but methodically, a group of actors from the Belleville Theatre Guild go through their paces learning the concentration of movement, as taught by Brian Scott of the Quinte Dance Centre. Ted Bairstow, president of the guild, explained, "actors need the same kind of discipline as a dancer when they are on the stage." The class is sponsored by an Ontario Council for the Arts grant.

Council Supports Society's Request

The increasing number of unmarried mothers keeping their babies as opposed to relinquishing them to the CAS for permanent care is resulting in increased costs for local municipalities.

Under the terms of the financial formula laid down in the Child Welfare Act, 1965, the province assumes 100 per cent of the cost of caring for children in the care of the CAS which are born out of wedlock and 60 per cent of the remaining approved costs.

As result of this formula, from 1968 to 1970, the Ontario government paid between 75 and 80 per cent of CAS budgets with the remainder being born by the municipalities.

However, with the increased number of unmarried mothers keeping their babies ,the portion of the cost born by the province has decreased with Bruce M. Kerr, Hastings CAS director, estimating the 1973 difference will be as much as five per cent.

In the belief that it was the intent of the 1965 Act to provide for stability in board budgeting, the Hastings Family and Children's Services in October moved to support a resolution of the Ontario Association of Children's Aid Societies that the Ministry of Community and Social Services give consideration to altering the present financial formula to one that provides for an 80-20 per cent sharing of approved costs.

The motion was forwarded to city council which this week concurred in the resolution.

"House Rules" Breed More Respect for Law

By DORIS CLARK

Speaking of character values, has it ever occurred to you that respect for law is something which has to be learned?

It starts with what happens at home. The little "house rules" which should become routine from the moment a youngster can understand anything at all — they are the beginning. If his small world is perceived by him as an orderly one this will help tremendously to make him a happy, secure child.

Says our political science professor: "Children should learn that obedience to law in a democratic state is an obligation of citizenship.

"They should learn that respect for law-enforcement officers, when the latter are doing their duty, is one of the indispensable prerequisites for living together peaceably, without fear".

What do we get if they don't learn these things? — Individuals with little concern for other people's rights, little sense of respect for other people's property, and the ignoring of regulations which have in the beginning, been set up for everybody's benefit.

Dear Doris: I'm so embarrassed! My mother let me help with my sister's going away party (because she has work in a distant city) but my father ruined the whole thing.

He has a terrible temper and got real mad when some boys crashed the party and made a lot of noise with their motorcycles. He is very prejudiced against teen-agers anyway, and he threatened to come home (from a neighbor's across the road) with a whip and straighten them out.

It was all my mother could do to stop him. The party had been going so well too. But we had to break up before midnight, All I be kids were so nice about it and left without a fuss.

Next day we really got a blast and I got grounded (I'm just 15 and he can boss me) with the added warning never to go to another party. Mother did not want to oppose Dad because he might start drinking again, and he is trying to stop. — Subject to a Tyrant.

Dear Subject: Sorry, Father with terrible tempers shouldn't happen to a dog. But did you know that such madness is just that — a bit of unbalance? The drinking is another sign that he hasn't got everything under control.

As for the impossible prohibition on your ever attending another party — how could he make that one stick?

Time will change things. If there is a branch of Al-Anon and Alateen in your area, attendance at their group sessions could help you understand and cope. And if he is serious about wanting to quit, Alcoholics Anonymous could well be of great help to him.

It was really the noisy crashers who ruined things, wasn't it? They must have been there were no adults at home. How about that?

Mirror of Your Mind
by JOHN CONWELL

Is it 'odd' to crave loneliness?

WELL, it certainly is different—after all, man is gregarious; he would have been content in his cave, if he could be happy all by himself. Although there is nothing wrong with wanting to be alone, a person would do himself a lot of good if he made sure he wants to be alone solely because he loves solitude. Let him make certain that he isn't trying to punish himself for some guilt feeling that he has unconsciously kept suppressed.

Should there be 'his' and 'her' cars?

If two cars are needed, yes. A man and wife, though, should not go in separate cars if they are going to the same destination at the same time. Some authorities claim people communicate more with each other in a car than they do, say, at the dinner table. Any kind of communication is a "plus" in a marriage—especially if there is danger of love being taken for granted — even if the only words exchanged come from "backseat driving."

Can a tyrant be a loving father?

YES, though he may be the only one who thinks he has any love to shower on his child. Perhaps he is a tyrant only because he fears he won't do a good job of raising his youngster. If he can resolve his own problems and gain a measure of self-assurance such an individual can become the loving father he would like his child to think he is. Then he will provide leadership and guidance instead of threats and tyranny.

Adopted Child Looks For Right Answers

Dear Ann Landers: The people who adopted me are the only parents I have ever know. They have been wonderful and everyone tells me how lucky I am.

But there's this big blank in my life. I need to find my real parents. I have to know what the circumstances were that made them give me away. My imagination runs wild when I think about what might have happened that made them abandon me.

I think about these things more and more. It's getting so that I don't think about anything else. I have to learn the truth about myself so I can stop brooding. Don't tell me to forget it because I can't. I need some advice.—Confused In Chicago

Dear Confused: It is natural for an adopted child to wonder about his blood parents—but you sound obsessed. If you were adopted through a legitimate agency it was agreed at the time that the identity of your natural parents would never be revealed—and with good reason. Usually when an adopted child locates his natural parents it means trouble—both for the child and for the adoptive parents. I won't tell you to "forget it" but I do hope for the sake of everyone concerned that you will not make this your life's goal. Do yourself a favor and divert your thoughts to something more productive and less hazardous.

Dear Ann Landers: Your column is an instruction course in good sense, good judgment and good manners. Will you please print these basic rules for the issuing of invitations? So far as I know, nobody has ever done it.

1. Write or telephone. Don't ask a third party to relay the message. It's an insult at worst and at best, an indication that you didn't care enough to do it yourself.

2. If you get a refusal, don't ask why or make the person feel uncomfortable about not accepting. Say, "I hope we will see you another time."

3. It is always appreciated if you mention others who have accepted. People like to know who else will be present and are often reluctant to ask.

4. If your invitations are refused more than twice, take the hint. They do not wish to get involved with you socially.—Well Like Gracious Living

Dear Gracious: I go along with 1-2-3 but not 4. I can tell you from personal experience that I've had to refuse invitations (more than twice) from people I enjoy. A third or fourth refusal need not mean they don't wish to "get involved with you socially."

Dear Ann Landers: Your response to "I Hate Medicine" drove me to write.

Your suggestion that parents, when they don't feel well, should keep it to themselves and not let their children know, was nutty. I have eight children, six still at home, and I have plenty of splitting headaches. Why shouldn't I let the kids know? Usually they are the cause.

The younger generation's motto, "Tell it like it is," is a good one. Rethink your answer and change your advice.—No Phoney Baloney

Dear N.P.: Children are the world's best imitatorS. Invariably they take on the physical symptoms they hear discussed at home. Mothers who complain of "tension" will have daughters who will do the same, Fathers with frequent backaches will have sons with frequent backaches.

There's a difference between "telling it like it is" and telling more than people need to know. Discretion is the greater part of valor.

Food Preparation Regulation Unenforcable in This Area

Public health regulations regarding food preparation and service are virtually unenforceable, the chief public health inspector for Hastings-Prince Edward Health unit admits.

But the two counties have been lucky — no cases of food poisoning originating from food served at bazaars, church and lodge suppers, fairs or carnivals have been reported to the health unit, says Lloyd Ellenton.

He agrees that strict enforcement of government regulations would mean disappearance of almost all bake sales and bazaars.

"There's no way it is economically feasible for them (sponsoring groups) to comply," says Mr. Ellenton. "Even on the average home doesn't comply."

Rare roast beef would disappear from restaurant menus if the government cracked down with stiff enforcement of its 1967 regulations on food.

All hot food must be held at a temperature of 140 degrees to prevent breeding of the organisms that cause food poisoning. But the rare slices of beef in the centre of a roast only reach about 130 degrees.

Education and publicity has helped to eliminate the hazard of food poisoning, says Mr. Ellenton.

When church groups renovate kitchens they now seek the advice of the health unit. And the health unit personnel takes every opportunity it can to talk to women's groups to explain the need for meticulous care in the preparation and storing of food.

We Have Good Food

The Chief Health Inspector of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties said there had been no food poisoning reports from bazaars in home caterers in the past.

There is a possibility, though, of poisoning from bazaar pastries according to reports from other areas.

"If you apply the regulations entirely, we'd only allow sales of food prepared on inspected premises and handled according to the requirements after it's prepared.

"It really would take the cooperation of these groups. They've got to realize what they're doing is hazardous."

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — If health regulations were applied strictly, most bake sales and bazaars would have to be closed, says Dr. J. E. Watt, director of environmental health services for Oshawa-Ontario County district health unit.

"Food is kept at room temperature for long hours. When you add milk to the food served through this type of thing, it's a tremendous volume.

"We've no interest in not enforcing regulations. What we have done is insist on a minimum standard in church kitchens and ethnic halls, but they don't necessarily have the facilities to produce all the food in that kitchen, and food is prepared at home and brought to the event.

"Any food wholly or partially perishable, particularly meat or milk products, must be prepared in sanitary premises. Also, if it is a cold food, it must be kept under 40 degrees and if hot, over 140.

"If you hold cabbage rolls at room temperature, any bacteria present multiply tonn rapidly. And if they're the right bacteria, you get food infection or poisoning.

"We also want it prepared under sanitary conditions. It could be prepared in a home with children who have communicable disease. The woman packs it in the trunk of a car where it's warm and the place where it's sold is warm. Bacteria multiply.

"Meat pie is a definite hazard. Fresh pie isn't such a hazard from the bacterial point of view, but they have the habit of putting food in used boxes and keeping it in the open where people are sneezing.

"It's estimated that in Canada 200,000 cases of food-borne illness occur annually."

Dr. Watt says he knows there would be opposition to any move to enforce regulations strictly and close bake sales.

"They're donating time and effort to charitable purposes. There seems to be a feeling that they should have free reign.

"We're not going out of our way to pick on these groups. It's just part of the general food control program.

Short Battle Jackets Are On the Streets in Paris

By STASIA EVASUK

Everywhere you go in this gay old city with its bustling traffic, beautiful shops and great restaurants, you see young Parisiennes wearing the short battle jacket in fabric or fur.

Other times you see the girls strolling along the Champs Elysee or whizzing by on their motor bikes with their pants tucked into boots or rolled up three or four inches above the knee. And more often than not, there is that cropped little jacket.

When they're not bareheaded, they wrap their heads in print scarves or add tight crocheted caps or peaked ones like baseball players wear.

The skirts are mostly above the knee but there are some below the knee and midcalf length now that the weather is getting colder.

Over in the St. Germaine district, where the students and avant-garde make their haunts, hence is what many of the young girls are wear-

BC Faces Changes

NDP Is Housecleaning

VICTORIA (CP) — Like housewives armed with cleaning utensils prowling around a dusty attic cluttered with the old and the used, British Columbia's New Democratic government is busy scrubbing established programs and policies in the province.

There are very few corners not peered into or pieces of furniture left untouched in this all-out clean-up campaign launched by the government during its first two months in power in B.C.

The list of projects includes a look at health services, labor laws, the public school system, bargaining rights for civil servants, Indian problems and even a glance at the state of the government's airplanes.

The NDP government appears anxious to implement quickly programs it has held dear for many years and to relegate to the trash can some long-standing pieces of legislation brought in by the Social Credit government during its 20-year reign in B.C.

Besides reviewing and updating what it considers to be ill-conceived programs, Premier Dave Barrett's administration also is launched on some creative legislative proposals.

In this latter category the major job belongs to Highways Minister Robert Strachen, now engaged in a complete study of the government automobile insurance schemes in Manitoba and Saskatchewan with a view to drafting a bill for a similar program for B.C. in time for presentation at the next session of the legislature likely to begin in late January.

Quebec Dentists Told Fee System Must Go

MONTREAL (CP) — Dentists must provide more comprehensive care to more people or face losing their monopoly over dental care to a public institution, a provincial government official said Wednesday.

Speaking at the opening ceremonies of the Montreal General Hospital's expanded dental clinic, Dr. Gilles Pelletier said dentists must go into the community, especially rural areas, stress preventive care, and work with other professionals in a team approach.

Dr. Pelletier, director of Quebec's dental health division of the social affairs department, said dentists must abandon the fee-for-service method of payment and accept a salary in its place.

Under the team approach, several dentists would work in a health centre with dental assistants and hygienists, physicians, nurses, social workers, psychologists and counsellors.

The province needs at least double the 1,700 dentists practicing now, Dr. Pelletier said. Because training dentists is expensive, the government has started programs in the junior colleges to train dental assistants.

Labor Attacks Potter

OTTAWA (CP) — Strikes in Ontario hospitals and homes for the aged are inevitable despite a provincial strike ban on workers in those institutions, a union official said Wednesday.

John MacMillan of the Canadian Union of Public Employees made the prediction at the first day of the Ontario Federation of Labor (OFL) annual convention.

Walkouts are the only way justice for workers can come about, he said.

The delegates also heard a call for the resignation of Ontario Health Minister Richard Potter, and passed a resolution calling for autonomy for Canadian branches of United States-based unions.

Mr. MacMillan told the 1,100 delegates to the convention that workers in higher paid industries should support hospital workers who are paid as little as $68 a week.

The issue had come up before during the three-day convention as delegates charged that hospital wages had slipped behind those of employees in comparable work in other industries since strikes were denied them seven years ago.

Mr. MacMillan said that present rates being handed down by arbitrators mean some people would not be making $100 a week by the year 2000.

"There are going to be strikes in Ontario hospitals and homes for the aged, there are going to be people on the picket lines, because there is no other way that justice will be done."

The OFL passed a resolution condemning the strike ban legislation.

Earlier, Bill Doherty of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, had demanded the resignation of Dr. Potter for the failure of the Ontario government to support community health centres.

Mr. Doherty said a health centre proposed for Cornwall had been worked for by "a lot of little people" was being sabotaged by lack of support from the provincial government.

He cahrged that Dr. Potter represented vested interests in the medical profession who do not want to see community health centres established because they provide cheaper services.

The resolution urging OFL promotion of minimum standards of Canadian autonomy in international unions called for election of Canadian officers by Canadians and the holding of Canadian policy conferences.

The motion adopted almost unanimously reflected a moderate form of national autonomy rather than rejection of the U.S.-based unions.

Bill Baker of the Toronto Labor Council, who said he was a member of an all-Canadian union, said some "nationalists" were trying to set up their own little empires for their own "selfish" reasons.

Terry Meagher, OFL secretary-treasurer, said capital was multi-national, and strong international unions were needed to deal with big companies.

Snow Costs Kill Fence

Higher than anticipated snow removal costs during the early months of this year could put the city in a deficit financial position in 1972.

This was intimated Monday at city council during discussion of a request for the erection of a chain link fence along a walkway in the West Park Village area at 57 Village Drive.

Cost of the fence was estimated at $1,500 and councillors seemed prepared to order its erection and charging the amount to the city's emergency fund.

But City Manager J. R. Reynolds said the required funds may be available due to higher than expected snow removal costs early this year.

Erection of the fence was accordingly referred to the 1973 council.

On the council agenda was a letter from Gordon Carton, transportation and communications minister, advising that the government, because of financial constraints, would be unable to pay any additional maintenance subsidy for winter control.

As a result, the extra snow removal costs will have to come entirely out of city funds.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell said the city's application asked for approximately $5,000.

On another request for fence erection — this one an extension of a chain link fence into the Auburn Street road allowance — council took no action.

Indians End Sit-in at Bureau Building

WASHINGTON (AP) — Protesting Indians who seized the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) building a week ago have returned it to the U.S. government — somewhat the worse for wear — and claimed a victory.

The last two dozen Indians, out of as many as 500 who had occupied the white marble building since Thursday, filed out Wednesday night.

The Indians took with them Indian artifacts that had been on exhibit and BIA documents they claimed contained evidence that public officials have deprived Indians of their property for many years.

"We know we definitely have changed the course of history," said Russell Means, a leader of the Trail of Broken Treaties caravan, which arrived last week to protest treatment of Indians by the U.S. government.

Dozens of Indian tribes from Oklahoma, Montana, South Dakota and New Mexico were represented in the caravan. Most Indians wore red headbands, armbands or scarves as symbol of "red power."

They posted a sign on the front of the building that said Native American Embassy and erected a teepee on the lawn in front where the leaders of the protest occasionally met to confer, as tourists looked on.

As the Indians left they were given money to help them return home. Indian negotiator Hank Adams said a $66,000 transportation fund for the estimated 500 Indians was obtained with the help of the White House.

A BIA official confirmed an unspecified amount of government funds were turned over to the Indians for transportation.

Indian leaders said a major accomplishment of the seven-day occupation was the prospect the BIA would be dismantled.

Impropriety Behind Incentives

OTTAWA (CP) — Two grants from the regional expansion department to Silver Shields Mines Inc. and the Jacques Cartier Mint Inc. of Toronto have been cancelled, it was announced Wednesday.

The grants, totalling $730,000, were originally announced last May in support of proposals for a silver refining plant and a commercial mine to be located in Cobalt, Ont.

The department said in a news release that an investigation into the incentives produced evidence that a member of the department had received "improper benefits" from a person or persons associated with the company, and the grants were cancelled.

The person involved is no longer with the department, and the results of the investigation have been brought to the attention of the justice department, the statement said.

Nixon Planning Cabinet Shuffle

A series of summit meetings with West European allies and new moves to try to bring peace in the Middle East were expected to be among Nixon's priorities at the start of a second four-year term in the White House.

Nixon, who flew to his Key Biscayne, Fla., home Wednesday night, may make up to four changes in the heads of the 11 cabinet departments over the next few weeks, political observers said.

Defence Secretary Melvin Laird, who has presided over the gradual withdrawal of 500,000 American forces from Vietnam, is considered certain to leave the Pentagon post at his own request, after four years in the job.

State Secretary William Rogers, who has often been overshadowed by White House foreign policy adviser Henry Kissinger, may also depart.

There is speculation, too, that Nixon will replace Attorney-General Richard Kleindienst and Housing Secretary George Romney.

Main speculation in Washington centred on who might replace Rogers. The state department has lost prestige and influence since Nixon concentrated foreign policy-making machinery in the White House.

A name frequently mentioned is that of the former treasury secretary, John Connally, head of the Democrats-for-Nixon in the presidential campaign.

Other possibilities included New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and Elliot Richardson, health, education and welfare secretary and a former under-secretary of state.

Senator Edward Brooke of Massachusetts, the Senate's only black member and a landslide victor himself Tuesday, said he is going to give "serious thought" to a 1976 presidential bid, declaring that Vice-President Spiro Agnew "is not the heir apparent" to Republican leadership.

Irving Secretary Called Hostile

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — For the second time in the Irving newspaper combines trial, prosecutor William Hoyt accused an Irving executive of being hostile and uco-operative in the witness box Wednesday.

However, he failed to convince Mr. Justice Alleny M. Robichaud of the New Brunswick Supreme Court. The judge declined to declare Winnifred Johnston, a secretary of K. C. Irving Ltd., hostile in legal terms. Such a ruling would have allowed Mr. Hoyt to follow a tougher line of questioning.

Earlier in the trial the prosecutor made a similar charge against Ralph Costello, publisher of Saint John Telegraph-Journal and Times-Globe, and with the same result.

Mr. Hoyt complained that Miss Johnston, formerly private secretary to industrialist K. C. Irving, ignored a court order to produce financial statements of K. C. Irving Ltd., a holding company charged as operating as a monopoly with three Irving publishing companies.

He also accused her of giving conflicting testimony about an Irving television station in Moncton and withholding the names of some of the many Irving companies.

Miss Johnston said she knew nothing about CHMT-TV of Moncton, a transmitter connection with CHSJ-TV, he Irving-owned television station in Saint John. But later she indicated she was unfamiliar with the Moncton station's call letters.

Mr. Hoyt's attempts to get more company names followed his introduction of a list of more than 50 Irving companies prepared in 1970 for the Senate committee on mass media. Miss Johnston said she had not prepared the list, but typed it and knew it was incomplete.

The partial list of companies read by Mr. Hoyt, and confirmed by Miss Johnston as far as it went, gave a picture of K. C. Irving enterprises involved in more than 30 different lines of business in Eastern Canada.

They ranged from newspapers to building products, oil refining to security guards, bus lines to sawmills, dredging to broadcasting. All but a few companies had headquarters in Saint John, N.B. In all cases directors were drawn from the Irving family, comprised of his wife, Harriet, and sons, James, Arthur and John.

Mr. Irving moved to the Bahamas and later Bermuda early this year leaving his sons in charge of his business empire.

Mr. Hoyt also pressed Miss Johnston for her personal views on the combines charges now in the third week of being tried. She said her personal feeling is that the businesses should be free to operate "according to established ethics" without government interference.

Of the trial, she said: "From the evidence I have heard I would not think the charges are justified." She was the 31st witness to be heard since the trial opened in Fredericton Oct. 17.

Earlier Wednesday, freelance journalist Eric Wells, a former editor of Winnipeg Tribune, disputed advertising figures for Moncton Times and Transcript presented by lawyer Donald Gillin. The figures showed

Nixon's Triumph Baffling World

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Foreign reaction to President Nixon's victory reflects bafflement. To people outside the U.S., the result seemed a mandate for continuation of Nixon policies, but in terms of the national legislature he remains a minority president.

That could not happen in a parliamentary system of the sort Britain implanted in many countries around the world. As for Communist countries, long sealed off from the democratic process, the result likely is beyond the comprehension of most.

The difference between the U.S. and parliamentary systems stands out in bold relief this year because only nine days before the Americans, Canada also went through a federal election.

The continental results suggest, among other things, an unlikelihood that men ever will achieve the perfect democratic superstate.

One British newspaper comments Nixon one of the most, makes Nixon one of th recent powerful presidents of the century, with a virtual blank-cheque mandate. But that overlooked Nixon's lack of control of the Congress.

The parliamentary system requires popular voting for members of the lower house of the national legislature. The party winning the most seats forms the government. Its leader in the House of Commons becomes prime minister and he draws his cabinet from Commons members, who remain members.

In 1968, Pierre Elliott Trudeau's Liberals in Canada won a landslide. House of Commons members tend to toe the party line rather than risk discipline, and this makes a majority prime minister powerful, subject to practically no legislative rein on his will.

This year, however, the result was close to a dead heat and meant neither major party could rule without the support of the NDP, Canada now, in all probability, must have a new election soon and try to dispel some of the confusion and uncertainty.

If Canada's system had been like the United States, Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield would have won hands down, since Tradeau carried only one province—Quebec. But Stanfield would have had a minority in the Commons.

If President Nixon were in the position of a prime minister, he could be ousted by a vote of no confidence from a hostile legislature. As it is, he will rule at least two and perhaps four more years without a congressional majority.

Park Plans Criticized

PICTON (Staff) — Town councillor Harry Abram this week criticized plans by the ministry of natural resources to develop more park lands in Prince Edward.

He expressed concern when Picton rerve Albert Piroth reported a meeting of the Prince Edward planning board with Eric Gage and eight members of the ministry of natural resources and an ARDA representative.

Reve Piroth said the trend of the meeting indicated the county is being considered more and more as a parks and recreation area and there are three plans under discussion for development of Point Petre as a park.

Councillor Abram read the report of the meeting and asked reeve Piroth to read aloud sections which dealt with the advisability of the expulsion of provincial parks in the county.

County councillors attending the meeting agreed the revenue received from the parks was too small and associated problems of pollution and petty crime were increasing.

Councillor Abram noted one sentence in the report referring to observations by government representative Eric Gage stated, "the necessity for providing public recreation areas for population from outside the county must probably override the desires of local people."

Mr. Abram said he felt these comments should be read aloud in council to inform ratepayers of what is happening.

Reeve Piroth said he and others at the meeting last month stressed that more diversified industry is wanted here in the immediate future.

"There is no sense in letting them nibble away at little pieces of our county," he said.

He suggested the county warden, the mayor of Picton and county reeves should form a delegation to make local opinion known forcefully in Trenton.

Club Requests Trailer Park

PICTON (Staff) — The Quinte travel trailer club, with a membership of 60 families in this area, has petitioned town council for a trailer park at Prince Edward fairgrounds to accommodate tourists on brief stopovers.

Picton mayor Margaret Ackerman suggested the matter should be referred to council's parks and recreation committee. Approval also is needed from the Prince Edward Agricultural Society and Prince Edward County council since the fairgrounds site is county owned.

Douglas Porter, spokesman for the trailer club said many tourists arrive in town planning to stay only a few hours to shop or attend a movie. They would benefit from a trailer park and camping site where they would be allowed to stay for one or two nights for a fee. He explained the money could be deposited in meter boxes placed at the fairgrounds and noted "9 per cent" of all campers would pay the charges for camping without an attendant present.

He felt the establishment of the trailer site would encourage tourists to spend money locally.

A letter from the Quinte trailer club stated 78 other municipalities have received provincial assistance under the Parks Assistance Act.

Car Robbed

ETV in Picton Next Month

PICTON (Staff) — Educational cable television will be introduced in Picton next month through an agreement between the Ontario Educational Communications Authority and Quinte Cablevision Ltd.

Cable subscribers will be able to view the provincial educational television service on Channel 19.

The educational programs will be broadcast for 10 hours each day and will be geared to all age groups in the community.

Much of the programming will be planned for the out-of-school audience as well as for students of the Ontario curriculum.

Picton viewers will enjoy a voice in the programming and policies of the OECA by representation on a 15-member regional council serving eastern Ontario.

Bermuda Waters Yielding Marlin

HAMILTON, Bermuda (CP) — This light tackle fishing resort never has been known for its blue marlin fishing, but this may change after this summer.

A record-breaking number of the big blues have been taken and probably dozens, if not hundreds, lost through inexperience.

In the previous decade only blue marlin had been caught off Bermuda. This summer 22 have been boatled and the Bermuda record that stood since 1958 went by the board.

Norbert Monish, a local angler, boated a 416-pound 12-ounce blue marlin to beat the record of 362 pounds that had stood since Lee Roberts made his catch back on June 29, 1958.

But while local anglers were excited about the marlin boom, one man was sceptical.

Pete Perinchief, fishing information bureau director, isn't prepared yet to start telling overseas fishermen to head for Bermuda for marlin fishing.

"My own feeling is this. It's going to take four or five years to see if we continue to hit them," Perinchief said. "If we do it could mean there has been some sort of change in the marlins' habits or it could be more people are fishing for them. It could be a combination of both."

Perinchief noted that a sudden jump in the number caught attracted a great deal of interest from local anglers.

"Apparently everybody got excited about the number being caught and went trolling exclusively for marlin," he said. "The concerted effort has produced more."

In previous years k was assumed the surface conditions had something to do with catching marlin.

"We assumed we needed a chop on the water," Perinchief said, "but this season they are being raised on a calm day.

"But I'm sceptical until proven otherwise. I hope we have more marlin than we figured. But if we don't we all have one of the top fight tackle areas in the world for wahoo, blackfin tuna, yellowfin tuna, amberjacks and all the other species we have."

While Monish's fish stands as the island record it is not the biggest marlin taken. Just three weeks after he made his catch policeman Dennis Brookes landed a 581-pounder, only to have it disqualified.

Two men handled the rod and game fishing rules state that only one person may touch the rod from the time the strike until the fish is boated.

Although the marlin run at the height of summer has eased off the occasional blue is still being taken, backing up Monish's opinion that the species are around Bermuda all year.

What was Perinchief's reaction to the marlin population explosion?

"I'm as pleased as hell," he said.

Basements Become Breweries

TORONTO (CP) — An increasing number of Canadian basements are turning into breweries.

S. F. Anderson, president of Wine-Art Ltd. of Toronto, which supplies ingredients for amateur beer and wine makers, says about 200,000 gallons of home-brew were made last year.

Although it is only a drop in the bucket compared with the 950 million gallons produced by Canadian breweries, Mr. Anderson says interest in making home-brew is growing.

But wine kits are the biggest seller, making up about 75 per cent of the company's sales.

It takes a great deal of control or a lot of luck to imitate the taste of Canadian lager, says Mr. Anderson in an interview. There also is a degree of snobbery connected with wine that attracts the bulk of beginners to wine-making.

He said it takes several months to a year to make a good wine, whereas beer can be consumed in less than one month after brewing.

Home-brewing has been done in Canada for many years but it didn't flourish until the 1960s when brewing materials were imported on a large scale from Britain, said Mr. Anderson.

It costs about $20 to set up a basement brewery for making five-gallon batches. The necessary supplies include two plastic fermenting vats, usually garbage pails and a capper.

The ingredients for five gallons, or about 60 bottles, cost about $4 for malt, hops, sugar, yeast and bottle caps.

It works out to about a cost of seven cents a bottle compared with 21 cents from the retail stores.

It is possible to make a home-brew imitating the taste of Canadian lager, or an ale or even a British ale, he said.

Mr. Anderson recommends that beginners buy a book on how to make home-brew or ask people who are already brewing.

Death Talk Big Taboo In Society

By SHARLEEN BANNON

EDMONTON (CP) — "Death has replaced sex as the most prevalent taboo in our society," says Rev. Leo Klugg, who teaches a course exploring attitudes towards death and the dying.

"Death still cannot be talked about socially, and those most in contact with the dying—the clerical and medical professions —often don't know how to relate to the dying person," said Father Klugg, who is offering the course for the first time at Newman Theological College.

"There is even evidence to suggest medical personnel and the clergy fear death more than segments of the general population.

"The dying are isolated—socially, in hospitals and in old peoples' homes—because society prefers to ignore this aspect of life it doesn't understand.

"People have the right to die with dignity and the moral and medical implications of keeping people alive by artificial means need more exploration."

Being "morbid" when death is mentioned, silence, and treating the subject as a joke to mask anxieties, are some ways people avoid coming to grips with death, he said.

"Now that sex is no longer a taboo topic of discussion, let us hope death also can be brought into the open."

Father Klugg 40 who has a master's degree in sociology from Fordham University in New York, has acted as a hospital chaplain. He said just talking about death alleviates some people's anxieties on the subject.

He said, however, that three or four students told him they were dropping his course after the first meeting because they felt they were not up to discussing death in an objective manner.

Father Klugg said as a result of this reaction he is trying to detect student anxieties and discuss them within the framework of the course.

Though admitting that death is an area where little research has been conducted, he said the body of knowledge on the subject has grown phenomenally in the last five years.

Several universities in the United States offered courses as did the University of Windsor in Canada. In addition, two sociological journals and several theses and books on the subject were available.

Father Klugg is conducting a survey on attitudes to death by mailing questionnaires to 18,000 subscribers of a Roman Catholic newspaper to provide additional data on the subject.

Guilt and fear of damnation derived from one's religious beliefs play an important part in shaping attitudes to life and death, he said. He suggested a re-examination of the basis of these attitudes and separation of fact from fantasy in religious beliefs as a means to find enjoyment in life.

Brain Wave Tests Made

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — In an experiment that may be applied to future pre-induction physicals, the U.S. Navy Personnel and Training Research Laboratory here has started testing the brain waves of selected recruits to see whether it can predict their performance in the service.

The project, which began in February, was announced as a possible way to bypass the built-in bias of language-oriented paper-and-pencil tests. But Dr. Bernard Rimland, head of the laboratory's personnel measurement research department, says the brain wave tests might be even more useful in spotting potential troublemakers.

"Paper-and-pencil tests actually have done quite well in predicting performance in training," he says. "Of course, there is room for improvement.

Dr. Walter Alvarez recently published a book called Nervous Collision that said a great deal of problems certain people get into show up in explosive brain wave patterns. He called it "nonconvulsive epilepsy." Maybe we can get at this."

Is he talking about 1984 style thought control?

"Those kinds of fears are grossly exaggerated," says Rimland, 43. "It's like being afraid that a little boy who's learning to broad jump will jump off the face of the earth."

He says the project has tested several hundred recruits so far, and will chart their progress for at least the next 18 months and try to link it to brain wave patterns recorded on the electroencephalogram (EEG).

Florida Could Lose Half Citrus Trees

EX. MIAMI (AP) — Florida citrus growers are planning a massive replanting program—and a space-satellite early-warning system—to help overcome blight that some experts say could wipe out half of Florida's 60 million citrus trees in a decade.

Some 2,000 acres of orange and grapefruit groves now stand barren as a result of the blight that the experts say is getting worse every year.

"We need to have a real crash program," said Tom Osborne, Florida Citrus Mutual general manager, who called for a campaign to replace 90 per cent of the stricken trees. He said egg-to-the-sky satellites would be used as an early warning system for fruit farmers.

The disease, sometimes called young tree decline or sand hill decline, afflicts trees in all citrus producing areas of the state. Plant pathologists say it seems to strike without warning and without cause.

Desegregation Annoys Even If Class Is Issue

LONDON (AP) — Mothers chained themselves to the railings of the county hall for hours. Others locked a school official in a classroom for a day. Scores of families were deported to have moved their children to private schools from the state system. Parents of 50 children organized their own school in a neighborhood church hall.

The protests were against the schools assigned to children under a system partly designed to mix students. The idea was to move some bright students to schools with a poor reputation, sometimes called "kitchen sink" schools. This was intended to improve these unpopular schools. At the same time, not-so-bright and "problem" students were put in better schools with the hope of improving their standing.

Until this year, London parents were allowed to select schools. If they didn't get the first choice, they were allowed a second or third. The teachers decided students' acceptance or rejection.

Some schools built a reputation for scholarship. Others, with a relatively high proportion of low-grade students, became the "kitchen sink" schools—with the dregs.

Politics played a role. The London education board, Labor-dominated, favored what Britons call comprehensives—big schools somewhat on the North American mixed style, designed to break down class barriers, with some students planning to go on to university and others not.

Many traditional parents and prominent Conservative party members preferred the old grammar schools, which prepared top students for universities. Those without university hopes went to other schools, usually to learn a trade.

On-the-Spot Inspection

Ditch Dismays Committee

An open drainage creek flowing almost past the back doors of a new townhouse development in northwest Belleville may soon preempt demands for city hall safety measures.

Proximity of the water course to the recently tenanted West Tracey St. housing block drew startled on - the - spot reaction from members of the city's Board of Parks Management yesterday.

Board members were worried about the possible threat the creek — which courses past the east side of the development — posed for children.

Board chairman and alderman Paul Russell called it "a shame" for the city to permit such a hazard to exist.

Alderman Jean Williams thought "something should be done before a child drowns there" and said the situation should be set before city council for action, an initial reaction similar to those of board members Douglas Burley and Donald Templeman.

The potential hazard caught the attention of board members during their annual inspection of the city's green belt areas which they administer for the city.

Board members scrambled out in a heavy downpour to get a closeup of the ditch as it flowed past the townhouse site, beneath Tracey St. and through vacant land to the southwest, some of it held by the board for future development.

Ald. Russell said the matter already had been referred by council to his board and would be discussed at its next meeting.

But, viewing it on - the - spot he said he was "quite shocked to think there could be what seems such a hazard to small children, in effect, in their own back yard."

He understood the ditch marked an easement of land to the city and if so the "city should be ashamed" of the situation.

"Something should be done," he added.

The threat not only existed during times of heavy runoff — such as spring or wet fall weather, one board member believed. Wintertime could also be a hazard since the ditch would fill with snow, kept safe by the water flow in the channel.

Fork-lift Lifted

An independent sub-contractor, Mr. Wood is renting another landscaping tractor while city police and the OPP search for his.

Santa's Helpers Lacking

TRENTON (Staff) — Unless more participation is offered for the annual Trenton Santa Claus Parade Nov. 23, the colorful event may be cancelled Chamber of Commerce manager Jack Wilson says.

To date, organizers at the C of C have received confirmation of only two bands, one majorette corps and 10 floats.

Mr. Wilson says there have been 233 notices sent out to prospective parade participants in stores and industry. To date, only 49 replies have been received. A second set of notices will be sent out sometime this week.

Although the chamber manager said active financial support is welcomed, it is people that are really lacking.

The parade is being planned not only as a traditional event, but as the start of the 1972 retail merchants Christmas promotion. Included in the special events planned for the weeks prior to the holiday season, is construction of a Santa Claus Shop on the vacant lot where Trenton's former post office once stood.

The merchants have also indicated they plan to support council to obtain permission to keep stores open all night from Dec. 7 until Christmas.

If all goes well for the annual parade, the route will be as follows: the parade will form up in Centennial Park at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 25. From there, accompanied by the jolly old elf, himself, it will wend its way north on Campbell Street to Dundas, west across the town swing bridge and through the downtown district. It will end at St. Peter's School on Queen Street.

Those sitting on the parade committee are Robert Bell, Bruce Karten, Barry Box, Robert Carleton and James McDonald. Donations and entries in the parade can be made by contacting them or the committee or by calling the Trenton Chamber of Commerce, 97 Front Street, at 392-7655.

Family Tradition

Three generations of Queen Victoria School pupils joined the celebrations of the school's 60th anniversary last night. Mrs. Mary Gilbert (centre) who started school in 1917 was the oldest former pupil present. Helping her find her name in the old register is her daughter, Mrs. Pat Goodfellow, who attended in 1940-41 and her grandson Christer Keller Goodfellow, now a grade 3 pupil.

City Parkland Growing

Belleville is steadily adding more notches to its green belt.

Soon, the city may make enough public waterfront land pleasantly available to its citizens to make it the envy of every community between Toronto and Montreal.

The possibility now is emerging into reality along the city's two major water fronts — the Moira River and the Bay of Quinte.

Members of the city's Board of Parks Management got a closeup of the future's potential at their annual tour yesterday viewed such of their department's projects as:

(1) The 85-acre strip of greenbelt on the Moira's west bank. Already this greenbelt area is about 25 per cent developed, stretching north to 401, complementing Riverside park on the river's east side. Next year visitors can enjoy a beach, parkland and canteen facilities. Future plans include a sprawling natural woodland and a special features sector — probably a minor zoo. The area and its plan concept has been highly praised by a Toronto zoological authority.

(2) Various land lots along the Bay of Quinte shoreline east of the docks. Co-operation by such agencies as the city's Harbor Commission, the environment ministry, which has a sewage disposal plant there, the Ontario Cheese Marketing Board, R. J. Hinking properties to produce an extensive waterside driveway, park and recreation belt.

(3) East Zwick's Park, a recreation area extension of the Zwick's Island park complex opened in 1967. Work is slowly moving ahead to transform the landfill project jutting into the Bay to greenbelt.

"If we keep working away, assembling and developing these areas, we could be one of the better-off communities for waterfront greenbelt between Toronto and Montreal," predicted the board's superintendent, Lloyd Syer, after the tour.

Further waterfrontage could be added if the greenbelt concept is kept in mind during any future downtown redevelopment. Such open - space areas near the river would enhance the city's commercial value, he said.

Yesterday's weather didn't exactly mirror the brightness of such prospects. However, despite a drenching downpour, the board members decided to go ahead with the inspection of what their $350,000 budget had produced in the past year.

Other assets viewed included:

The department's new service and supply centre on North Park St., boasting office, workshops and maintenance machinery. A nursery for plant production and storage also is going up on the six-acre site.

A major greenbelt block in the city's west end adjacent to Centennial Secondary School being developed in conjunction with school board authorities.

Such co - operation between the parks board and various other official agencies holding open - space land is a key to greenbelt progress in the city, Mr. Syer said later. While school, utilities, harbor and conservation authorities may hold land, the parks department can beautify it, making such areas useful by the public.

"We can complement each other and this is the way it should be done," said the superintendent.

Such co-operation with other agencies has seen a marked upswing in recent years — paving the realization by public and local governments of the need for more greenbelt areas.

At present, greenbelt either developed, acquired or in process of acquisition totals about 250 acres, he estimates — with the big deficiencies in the city's core and east end.

But Mr. Syer doesn't sound overly pessimistic about the lack in such areas.

"We haven't grown that large that we can't solve our problems," he said. "We're better doing them now than when we have a population of 50,000.

The key is planning and acquiring strategic open areas as they become available.

"You can't have all open space, but you need enough to complement the built - up area . . . As soon as you get a piece of land, you don't have to develop it right away. But if you don't acquire it when it's available, there's nothing you can do when the land arises for more parkland."

Blueprint of A Greenbelt

Past Recalled at Queen Vic

Custodians were piling up chairs, and sweeping floors, but still the old boys and old girls lingered on exchanging reminiscences of school days and one, two and three generations ago.

It was Queen Vic's diamond jubilee, exactly 60 years to the day since the first minister of education for Ontario came to Belleville to open the school.

Queen Vic and Queen Alexandra, opened officially on the same day in 1912, are the city's oldest school buildings still in use as educational institutions.

Queen Vic has had only six principals since it opened, and, in the presence of first principal A. C. Wilkin was very much alive as former students exchanged memories.

His successor, Everett Fairman was master of ceremonies for the first part of the program, but he had to leave early to attend to his duties as member of Hastings county board of education's property committee.

Mr. Fairman paid tribute to a member of his staff who retired at the same time as he did, and who was on hand last night to remember the name of every ex student — Thomas Coxon, a beloved custodian during the 1920s and 1930s.

The sense of continuity in a small, close knit community pervaded the celebrations — a feeling the Queen Vic community school program seeks to recapture in a 20th century world.

As Mayor J. Russell Scott said in his introductory remarks, "The concept of the school as the heart of the community, that all functions of a civic nature should centre around the school has a lot of merit."

Queen Victoria's Nudes Were News

Queen Victoria School may be Belleville's oldest school building, but it has always had an innovative education attitude.

It was the first to introduce "topless and bottomless" movies to Belleville.

Hawks Plug Desjardins

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The fastest glove in the West faced the fastest shooters in the West and, after a spirited shoot-out, it was no match-up.

The glove held true for two periods before the roof caved in around Desjardins and the Hawks scored six goals en route to a 6-1 National Hockey League victory Tuesday night.

Elsewhere, Los Angeles Kings stretched their unbeaten string to nine games with a 3-3 tie against Atlanta Flames, Montreal Canadiens won 5-2 over Toronto Maple Leafs with three third-period goals, New York Rangers beat Vancouver Canucks 5-2, Minnesota North Stars defeated California Golden Seals 5-2 and Pittsburgh Penguins downed Philadelphia Flyers 5-3.

Boston Bruins will be without rugged Wayne Cashman for tonight's home game with Detroit Red Wings. It was disclosed Wednesday the Bruins winger had played several games with a hairline fracture in his back and still miss several games.

California meets the Sabres at Buffalo and Philadelphia entertains Chicago in the other two games.

Desjardins, a chubby 185-pounder from Sudbury, has had a nomadic career, brought about primarily by a broken arm in 1971.

Traded to Los Angeles by Montreal in 1968 for a pair of first round draft choices, he performed miracles for the Kings before being rescued by Chicago in February, 1970.

It was while laboring with the Kings he earned the trademark, fastest glove in the west.

Before he was ever able to establish himself with the Hawks, a broken arm sidelined him for the rest of the 1970 season and the following year he was traded to California.

The Hawks, however, were still three points behind the West Division-leading Kings who needed Mike Corrigan's score at 19:25 of the third period to keep their string—including eight wins—alive.

The Montreal-Toronto contest was even after two periods as the teams exchanged goals in each of the first two periods. Then Peter Mahovlich beat Toronto rookie goaltender Ron Low at 10:27 of the third period and scored into an empty net at 19:12.

Jim Roberts beat Low, who went back in after Mahovlich's second score, nine seconds later.

Rod Gilbert broke up a 1-1 game at New York and the Rangers went on to score four unanswered goals in the second period to turn back Vancouver.

Split Decision

TORONTO (CP) — Alan Eagleson, executive-director of the National Hockey League Players' Association, said Wednesday night the NHLPA did not give a unanimous endorsement to a North American tour by the top Soviet hockey team in January.

"The members of the NHL Players' Association weren't at all unanimous about playing the Russians again so soon," said Eagleson. "Some of them felt we won the September series by the skin of our teeth, so why be hasty to take a chance on being put down in second place?"

Eagleson said he vhetted the players' enthusiasm by "pointing out the benefits for members of the association."

"If we derived $300,000 from the Russian visit, say, that could go for increased medical benefits or a plan for dental care."

Eagleson and NHL president Clarence Campbell will visit Moscow later this month to complete plans for the Soviet team's tour.

"We haven't decided on where the Russians will play, since we aren't sure what arenas will be available between Jan. 30 and Feb. 5," said Eagleson. "But you can bet the visit is on, regardless of what the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association says."

"The Russians are dealing strictly with the NHL and the NHLPA."

CAHA president Joe Krycka said in Calgary he doubted the proposed four-game series would materialize unless the NHL was prepared to follow the proper channels by negotiating through the CAHA or U.S. Amateur Hockey Association.

'Golden Jet' Can't Help WHA Jets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bobby Hull, formerly the Golden Jet of Chicago Black Hawks, made his debut in World Hockey Association competition Wednesday night, but his presence in Winnipeg Jets lineup failed to intimidate Quebec Les Nordiques.

Nordiques defeated the Jets 3-2 and Hull, restrained by a court order from playing for Winnipeg since the season opened, managed only an assist, with five seconds remaining in the game.

Quebec's victory moved the Nordiques into a tie with Cleveland Crusaders for top spot in the eastern division, while the Sharks took over in the west, with a two-point bulge on Winnipeg and Alberta Oilers, tied for second.

A goal by rookie Jarda Krupicka with 34 seconds to play, lifted the Sharks to victory. Krupica was recalled from Greensboro of the Eastern Hockey League and was making his first appearance in the WHA.

Hull received a standing ovation when to first started controlled the ice, but he was used sparingly in the game, mainly on power plays.

Duncan Rousseau tied the score with a slap shot after a scramble in front of the Quebec net, but Jean Payette put the home team ahead again before the period ended. The Nordiques went in front 3-1 in the second on a goal by Yves Bergeron, on which Hull's former National Hockey League colleague—team captain J. C. Tremblay—drew an assist.

Court Frees WHA Hockey Stars

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A preliminary court ruling Wednesday in Philadelphia frees former National Hockey League players to pursue, at least temporarily, their careers in the fledgling World Hockey Association.

Most of the NHL players didn't let court action by their former employers hinder their participation in the new league, but ex-Chicago Black Hawk star, Bobby Hull, dressed for the first time Wednesday night.

The Winnipeg Jets' player-coach abided by the court proceedings brought against him by the Hawks to prevent him from playing in the WHA until U.S. District Court Judge A. Leon Higginbotham had made his decision known.

His presence didn't help the Jets in Quebec City where he picked up an assist in a 3-2 loss to the Nordiques.

Higginbotham's 124-page report, which deals primarily with the NHL's controversial reserve clause as it applied to Philadelphia Blazers' coach John McKenzie, called for a preliminary injunction that prevents the NHL from enforcing the clause.

The judge said he could not, at this stage, making a finding as to whether the clause violates the Sherman Anti-Trust Act but "merely hold now that I desire a fuller record before making judgment on the Sherman Act issue."

BOBBY HULL

NHL president Clarence Campbell said in Montreal league lawyers in Philadelphia will take "appropriate action" after a full study of the brief. The decision probably will be appealled, since the U.S. Supreme Court ruled this year in the Curt Flood case that baseball was exempt from anti-trust laws.

Higginbotham's decision stands, it would break down the reserve clause which is the structure for most major sports in the United States.

Several NHL stars, including McKenzie, Derek Sanderson and Gerry Cheevers of the Stanley Cup champion Boston Bruins, jumped to the WHA for high salaries and multi-year contracts.

McKenzie's contract was subsequently sold to Philadelphia Flyers of the NHL and the Flyers took the court action to prevent him playing with the Blazers. The Blazers countered by asking the court to rule the NHL reserve clause violated anti-trust regulations.

Judge Higginbotham sridthe preliminary injunction would "maintain the status quo" in hockey until a final decision is handed down.

The injunction gac a mixed reception.

Winnipeg owner Ben Hatskin was understandably elated in that it allowed his player-coach, whom he signed away from Chicago for a reported $2.7 million for 10 years, would finally get to play.

Hull, 33, said he was the last of about 70 NHLers who jumped to the WHA to get to play in the new league.

Asked specifically if he would play in the U.S. court, the high scoring left winger said he understood the preliminary injunction had cleared the way for him "to play no matter where he WHA might play."

Hull's team-mate, defenseman Bob Woytowich, sat out Jets's first 10 games because of court action taken against him in California by Los Angeles Kings. Winnipeg doesn't make its first California appearance until Nov. 17.

No Quebec or Ottawa Nationale players were directly affected by court actions in the U.S.

Another former Kings player, Doug Barrie, sat out the early Alberta Oilers' games but has dressed for the last four contests at the advice of his lawyer.

The injunction offered a condition that a $2.5 million bond be posted by the WHA to indemnify the NHL against any possible loss in the event the judge's ruling is reversed.

There was little comment from NHL owners Wednesday.

CASHMAN HURT

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins left-winger Wayne Cashman has a hairline fracture of his back and has been playing with it for several games, a team spokesman said Wednesday. Cashman will continue to play but must rest between games and will not be allowed to practise, the spokesman said.

THOMAS BENCHED

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Running back Duane Thomas was placed on the reserve list by San Diego Chargers Wednesday, making him ineligible to play for the rest of the National Football League season. The announcement came after Thomas failed to show up for practice, the Chargers said. "Duane is not prepared to play this season," said coach Harland Svare in a statement. "I hope he will be able to play for us next season." Thomas, 25, came to the Chargers in a trade this season after a stormy 1971 season with Dallas Cowboys.

hibition Raceway harness season, Al Vance often drove his horses with an unobstructed view ahead of him. With his 19 wins, Vance also kept himself ahead of the competition for the Bud Zebedee Memorial Trophy, presented to the driver with the most seasonal victories. The Thurlow Township driver beat the rest of the field to capture the Deputy Chief Orr Memorial Trophy for the greatest number of wins and placed horses (15).

A pair of three - year - olds Skippy Rush, owned by Joe Stein and Jens Hall, and Johnny Command carried Vance across the wire for the greatest number of wins. Johnny Command, Vance's own horse, pulled his owner to four wins at Belleville Raceway.

Vance hopes to continue driving Skippy Rush next year, a horse he says "hasn't peaked yet." Centreville's Hugh Wemp, who continues to race at Frontenac Downs in Kingston, came the closest to Vance with 17 wins. Wemp placed six times. Roger Hie followed with 13 wins and five placed. Belleville driver Gerry Walsh managed 11 wins and nine horses placed.

Despite the close of the racing season, Quinte Raceway facilities will remain open throughout the winter months. At present 25 horses are stabled at the fairgrounds. Racing enthusiasts, who at present have 35 horses stabled on the Belleville grounds, will be able to train their horses on the track maintained by the raceway staff.

Of the 20 Belleville meets authorized by the Ontario Racing Commission this year, only one was cancelled. The other 19 meets saw an average nightly attendance of 1073 people. The average nightly wager was $29,097 with the per person average bet working out to $27.44.

The best track time throughout the season was provided by Cadillac Hanover, owned by Ross Ray of Springbrook Ontario, in a time of 2:07.1.

Next year, Quinte exhibition Raceway's third season will begin May fifth, and will end 20 Saturdays later on the fifteenth of September.

According to Ev Gowsell, president of the Belleville Agricultural Society, the major alteration planned for next season is the erection of a roof over the grandstand. Gowsell hopes that the raceway co-operating with the city Parks Board will be able to start plans for the overhang.

John's Duke Takes To Frontenac Downs Mud

KNOSTON (Special) — It was easy as mud pies for John's Duke Wednesday night. Vern Moulton reined three-year old pacer over a muddy Frontenac Downs track to win the featured race of last night's card.

John's Duke slogged to the win in 2:11 to best a six-horse field in his final start of the season.

International Flavor Friday

Three members of the Kingston Aces in their 4-2 loss to Germany will be playing for Belleville, while spectators will get their first chance to secure tickets for the Quinte' January 5th meeting with a Russian team.

George Godson, Lorne O'Donnell and Greg Marchen saw action for the Aces Wednesday night in their narrow loss to the West German national team. In fact Godson came close to salvaging a tie when he broke into the clear while killing off a Kingston penalty. The speedy Belleville forward was beaten by goalie Anton Kehle however as Germany maintained the win.

"The puck was rolling," explained Godson to newsmen after the game. "I tried to go to my backhand but couldn't. All I could do was try and poke it between his legs but he blocked it."

Eric Kuhnacki scored two goals for the winners with the others coming from Anton Hebert and Alois Schloder.

Lionel Bolly, of the Quintes was mystified about Kingston's failure to pick up Al Ferguson along with Kuhnacki

GEORGE GODSON

Godson and O'Donnell. "Sure he isn't the greatest looking skater in the world, but he's the guy that puts the puck in the net."

Bolly also indicated that the club was unhappy with the notion that they're a "one-line hockey team," meaning the Godson, O'Donnell, Ferguson unit. "Actually at one point they had the worst goals for-against average on the team. Now that doesn't indicate everything, but it shows that the other lines have "been contributing as well."

Belleville's first meeting with the Oakville Oaks this Friday, will also mark the first time that tickets will be sold for the upcoming game against the Russians.

"The ticket booths will be inside the rink, not at the box office. The only place that you'll be able to buy them in November is at Quinte's home games," indicated Bolly.

The Quintes hope to sell 1520 regular seats for the contest, along with another 1,000 standing room for the game which could spell the difference in financial solvency for senior "A" hockey in Belleville.

The 272 season ticket holders will have their seats reserved until December 22nd, meaning that about 1200 seats will be available to the general public.

Game time for the Oakville contest will be 9 p.m.

Rugby Action -- A Global Affair

LONDON (CP) — The rugby touring season, a big feature of the sports year in Britain, has resumed with much-anticipated visits to this country by teams from widely separated parts of the world.

It would be tough to be more widely separated, geographically and in most other ways too, than Romania and New Zealand.

These in fact are the poles of origin of the two squads who are the guests giving the British rugby season a touch of outside flavor in 1972-73.

The visit of the All Backs from New Zealand is a familiar event.

The latest one has been preceded by cautious predictions Down Under about what the All Blacks are likely to achieve in Britain this year.

The caution results from the absence of veteran New Zealand stars like Colin Meads, who is a legend in rugby-mad France—where he was known as Le Monstre—as well as in this country.

For their part, the Romanians were certain to add a particularly exotic touch to the season.

They first learned rugby decades ago from the French who in their turn initially had been tutored in the game by Britons involved in commercial expeditions to the wine-producing areas of France.

The Romanians still show a decided French influence in the way they play.

They regularly employ Gallic techniques of swift changes of speed and direction in ball-running and their over-all game is an open one.

Their tour of Britain this season thus was billed as a return gesture, with the fixtures scheduled for grounds in the two areas of southwestern Britain.

The visit was the first by the Romanians in 16 years.

"National politics and hints of professionalism among their players might have (had) something to do with it," wrote a Times rugby expert in trying to explain the big time gap.

Some 80 per cent of th Romanian group visiting Britain turned out to be students. But this did not detract from the general impression here that the talents of Romania's general run of rugby players are formidable.

The New Zealanders, in undertaking still another invasion of Britain, hope to avenge the victories scored in their country last season

U.S.A. May Lose Olympics

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Denver's inability to fulfil its obligations as host of the 1976 Winter Olympic Games has probably cost the United States that international sporting extravaganza, a spokesman for the Denver Olympic Organizing Committee (DOOC) said Wednesday.

The voters in Colorado turned thumbs down on state financing for the Games in a referendum vote conducted Tuesday in conjunction with the presidential ballot in the U.S.

Squaw Valley, Calif., is the latest former Olympic site to offer its facilities to again entertain the Winter Olympics as it did in 1960.

Lake Placid, N.Y., site of the 1932 Winter Games, jumped into running to be considered an alternate to Denver but Carl DeTemple, president of the DOOC, said the offer "is probably not too realistic."

The Vancouver-Garibaldi committee, that offered to stage the 1976 Winter Games at Whistler Mountain only to be rejected in favor of Denver, is also considering resubmitting its bid.

Mayor Tom Campbell said, upon hearing that Colorado voters had rejected funding the Denver Games, the Vancouver-Garibaldi Olympic Committee will go after the Games if the bidding is re-opened.

"We'll be a little rushed for 1976 now, but we can do it," Campbell said.

There has been a move in recent years, headed by Avery Brundage, former International Olympic Committee president, to do away with the Winter Games.

The new IOC president, Lord Killanin of Dublin, Ireland, said shortly after his return home from touring the 1976 Summer Games site in Montreal, he would meet Monday with his three vice-presidents to decide what future steps to take.

The announcement was made through the IOC's headquarters in Lausanne, Switzerland. The vice-presidents conferring with Killanin will be Count Jean de Beaumont of France, Herman van Karnebeek of Holland and Willy Daume of West Germany.

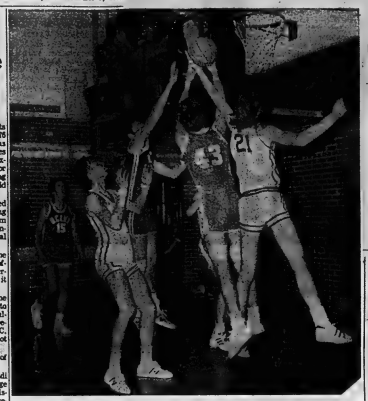
The offer from Squaw Valley interests has already run into a roadblock where state Assemblyman Eugene A. Chappie declared:

"We're still trying to bail out of the mess of 1960. If someone put up $50 million for access, lodging, law enforcement and snow removal, that would be something else. Otherwise, I don't want to see the county get saddled with another awesome burden."

Almost all the facilities used for the 1960 Winter Olympics are available in Squaw Valley, including an expanded ski area.

A referendum would also be required in Lake Placid, site of the 1932 Winter Games. The area offered a bid for the 1976 Games.

Officials there say the only facilities which would have to be built to accommodate the Games would be a 90-metre ski jump, a 400-metre speed skating track, refrigerating for a new bobsled run and housing for athletes and visitors.



Twenty million would do a marvelous job here as opposed to the $100 million planned for Colorado," said one Lake Placid official.

But objections from the ecologists can be expected, according to William Hurley, supervisor of the town of North Elba, where many of the sites would be located.

"I don't think the majority of our people would approve it by a referendum," said Hurley, ailing the same reasons as Coloradans rejected the Games.

Vancouver officials, however, still have an offer of financial assistance from the federal government held over from when they bid for the Games in 1968.

"We already have in writing from the federal government the promise of financial assistance," said Bob Hindmarch, acting president of the Vancouver Olympic Games Committee. "Our original bid . . . stressed that, ecologically, we would ensure the orderly development of Whistler Mountain in Garibaldi Park."

KCVI Tipper

Lorenz Pauleen of KCVI goes up to tip the ball away from Belleville Collegiate's George Lloyd in exhibition high school basketball Wednesday. Wayne Giles of BCI goes up in an attempt to assist Lloyd. Dexpae Pauleen's work on the boards, the Belleville seniors manoeled a 74-69 win over Kingston.

Archibald Hurts Self, 76ers

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kansas City-Omaha Kings' big shooter was hurting Wednesday night, but not nearly as much as Philadelphia 76ers.

Nate Archibald sprained his thumb in the first quarter, but that didn't stop him from scoring 34 points as the Kings rolled past Philadelphia 125-107.

It marked the 14th straight National Basketball Association loss for the 76ers and dropped them 12 games out of first place in the Atlantic Division after only three weeks of play.

The Kings, who trailed for most of the first half, got 25 points from rookie Ken Riley and took the lead for good in the third period. John Block led the 76ers with 35 points.

Boston scored 40 points in the third quarter. Don Chaney had 11 in the third and 23 for the game. John Havlicek led the Celtics with 25. Rick Barry led Golden State with 34 points.

Belleville Srs. Defeat KCVI

Though BCI had a tough fight against Kingston Collegiate Wednesday in an exhibition basketball game, the Collegians defeated the visiting KCVI 74 - 69.

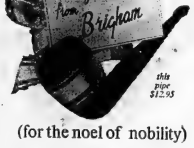
With the two teams matched fairly evenly in playing and scoring ability, the BCI victory came only in the closing minutes of the fourth quarter. At this point B C I coach Brian McKenzie, as he said after the game, "made a little change in the substitution and a little variation in the defense." From this point, BCI stayed ahead of KCVI by a margin of at least four points, whereas in the third and beginning of the fourth quarter the lead had see-sawed between the two competitors.

Despite BCI's 31-29 lead at the end of the first half, the Collegians had difficulties. KCVI worked the Collegians boards effectively, beating BCI defenders for the rebounds.

The second half was a different story, as BCI came out of the dressing room with a new spirit and the effective rebounding of centre George Lloyd and forward Wayne Giles. Despite KCVI's Lorenz Pauleen's efforts under the BCI basket, the Collegians kept the Kingston team outside their key.

To compensate for the BCI advantage, the KCVI coach fired from the field. John Sutton and centre Chris Price, who had been setting up plays for Kingston all evening, swished several shots from the top of the key.

The BCI forwards defended against shots from the field by pushing KCVI guards into the corners, but from there Kingston's Pauleen dropped buckets though BCI's Gary Donovan answered Pauleen's corner shots with several of his own. Despite Kingston's full court press and the double teaming of guard Donovan near the end of the game, the Collegians held onto their lead for the victory.



BCI's Giles with 21 points and Pete Lebaron (18) matched up with KCVI's Sutton (19) and Pauleen (21) as the highest scorers of the match.

The quarter by quarter scores breakdown went evenly — BCI scoring 17-14-18-25 for a total of 74, and Kingston scoring 9-20-22-18 for a total of 69 and a defeat at the hands of the Collegians.

Former Champs Fall in Soccer

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Three former champions fell by the wayside in sub-prize second-round results in the European soccer competitions Wednesday night.

The European Cup produced two of the upsets with the elimination of Portuguese aces Benfica and Glasgow Celtic of Scotland.

Benfica, winner in 1961 and 1962 and three-time losing finalist, succumbed to Derby County of England, being held to a 0-0 draw in Lisbon to lose 3-0 on aggregate.

The Portuguese battled unsuccessfully to pierce Derby's defence as the English club moved into the quarter-finals.

Meanwhile Celtic, champion in 1967 and losing finalist in 1970, crashed 3-0 against Upsett Dozza in Budapest to go out 4-2 on aggregate. Internationals Ferenc Bene, with two goals, and Laszlo Fazekas scored for the Hungarians, who gained revenge for their quarter-final defeat against Celtic last year.

The other upset involved Reymond Rotterdam, European and world champions in 1970. The Dutch club lost 2-1 to OFK Belgrade in the UEFA away victory over CSKA Sofia in a first-leg second-round match.

Highly-rated Ferencvaros of Hungary also eliminated from the European Cup of Winners Cup in an explosive clash with Sparta Prague in Czechoslovakia. The Hungarians, beaten 1-0 in first-leg match, gained revenge with a 4-3 win on aggregate.

The Italian club Juventus advanced into the last eight of the European Cup by scoring the only goal of a match against FC Magdeburg in East Germany. The Germans had been given a good chance of qualifying after their 1-0 defeat in Turin, but were again unable to pierce the Italian club's defence.

Grounds Favor Rough Riders In Eastern Semi-Final Game

OTTAWA (CP) — Coach Jack Gotta is taking his Ottawa Rough Riders into Saturday's Eastern Football Conference semi-final against Montreal Alouettes confident, but not cocky, helped by the prospect of a slippery muddy Lansdowne Park field to slow Montreal's good running, and the fact Ottawa beat Montreal twice straight times during the season.

After the Riders nipped Winnipeg Blue Bombers 33-7 in their final league game here last Saturday, the Ontario collegiate semi-final was played here Sunday, and a heavy mid-week rainstorm turned the chewed-up surface into a bog.

"It looked like a barnyard," said Gotta Wednesday night in an interview.

Park superintendent Red Friel has the tarpaulin down on the sodden field, but says he needs a good wind to get it dry. But the weather office says it will rain until early Friday when some sunny periods will break through and the field may not be dry for the 2 p.m. EST Saturday game time.

Gotta said he was not worried about quarterback Rick Cassnia functioning on a bad field or in the rain.

"Cassata isn't one of those players who is upset by the weather. He just takes it as it comes and operates accordingly."

He compared the straight-ahead power of Montreal running backs Ike Brown, Moses Denson and Larry Smith with the less powerful, more devious running of his Art Gastmeier.

"It'll not all straight-ahead power, you know. There are other factors to consider. And, if the weather slows down our players, it also will slow down their's.

"About the only way we'd get a fast track for Saturday is if it freezes, and I don't wish for that."

The three season wins over Montreal were not major factors to Gotta in preparing for the game.

"The records all go by the boards now. It's a case of one bad game and a long winter to think it over."

He also played down concept for kicker Gerry Organ, who scored 101 points this year to lead Canadian Football League scorers. Organ injured his calfer bone three weeks ago and hit only three of seven field goals attempted against Winnipeg.

"He's going to be all right," Gotta said. "He was better Saturday than the week before and he's a helpful pointer still in workouts."

He also said there would be no lineup changes for the game. CBC telecast of which will not start on the national network until 2:20 p.m. because of previous commitments to broadcast Remembrance Day observances.

The winner of the sudden-death meeting goes against Hamilton Tiger-Cats, winners of the conference by virtue of their three season wins against Ottawa. The two-game, total-point series will start Nov. 19 in the home of Saturday's winner and end Nov. 25 in Hamilton.

In Montreal meanwhile, rain Wednesday forced Alouettes to move their practice indoors.

"I had no idea what the place was going to be like," coach Sam Etcheverry said, after his team ran through its offence in the Royal Montreal Regiment's gymnasium. "I thought there might be a dirt floor."

But it was regulation hardwood which greeted the EFC quarter-finalists as they prepared for Saturday's sudden-death confrontation with Ottawa Rough Riders.

The players shooed up with various types of footgear, to little avail. Mike Widger and Dave Lewis donned rubber galoshes gear but went most of the practice in stocking feet after slipping and falling.

After Moses Denson landed hard on his backside the practice was called. The players did a few sprints, watched some films and went home.

Reporters trying for pre-play-off interviews had little luck. The players earlier this week decided to keep their comments and predictions to themselves.

"We'll let our play do the talking this time," said one team member.

Leafs, Habs Shun Series

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs have no desire to play a touring team of Russian selects early next year.

Spokesmen for both clubs told the Toronto Globe and Mail Wednesday they were too involved in the current National Hockey League schedule to give any serious thought to the Soviet team.

"We might play them if they requested a game with us," said Bill Ballard, Toronto vice-president, "but otherwise we're not interested.

"We're involved in our own league . . . If we had a game scheduled against the Russians the players likely would find themselves thinking about it a couple of weeks ahead.

"There would be the question of practising differently for the Russians and it would be a diversion we do not need."

Canadiens' general manager Sam Pollock was even more determined that the Montrealers not get involved with the Soviets during their scheduled North American visit.

The Canadiens have seven games in Europe during the tentative Soviet dates and Pollock was emphatic that the team would not participate in the international hockey series.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, Nov. 3

Aries (March 21-April 19): No point in dodging an issue or procrastinating about hearing witness. Make the best of it and go forward serenely.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): People raise questions over working conditions. Your concern should be health care.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Others are aloof, not ready for fluent co-operation. Get your work done anyway. Old resentments are best abandoned or left unstirred.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Be aware that you aren't infallible in judging matters outside your own chosen field.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Riding along on momentum you have already generated is all right. Use the free ride for taking stock, getting facts straight.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Preoccupation with financial affairs or friends include at least one rash experimenter to be watched.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Various enterprises lead toward fulfillment, open confrontation. You quickly have to declare yourself on one side or another.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): While you remain uncommitted, you can build resources, gather knowledge freely. Deal with events as they occur, make no move to indicate your intent.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Mature friends are of more comfort than contemporaries. Those much younger need special concessions.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): However uphill the effort, get the week's experience settled in your mind and your share of obligation retired.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): In the flow of discussion you make more extensive promises than your resources currently cover.

'Purpura' Bleeding Underneath Skin

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is purpura? I have had this for almost two years. My doctor didn't know what it was, and I wonder if he doesn't mean able to cure it.

Is there anything that can be done for it? If so, what kind of a doctor must I go to?—Mrs. M.A.E.

Purpura is excessive bleeding under the skin, resulting in red or purple splotches. I dare say your doctor knew what it was but didn't know what caused it.

That's understandable, because it can be caused by quite a variety of conditions and treatment, of course, depends on the cause.

In a sense, purpura is something like a bruise—a bruise represents bleeding under the skin. The difference is that purpura, unlike a bruise, isn't a sign of blood vessels broken because of a bump or blow. Rather, it is the inability to heal promptly, small broken places in blood vessels nearby.

A natural fragility of small blood vessels can be the cause. Years ago purpura used to occur in some infants and often was fatal. Today treatment with vitamin K usually brings quick recovery. In fact, the condition is usually a lack of clotting ability in the blood, most commonly a deficiency of the particles called platelets which are essential in forming clots and hence in stopping bleeding promptly.

Vitamin C and K, and quite possibly calcium can be helpful in controlling the condition—but it is still important to find the underlying cause.

Such causes can include poisoning (by cleaning solutions among others), drug sensitivity, and a variety of infections. I am sure kidney or liver dis cases, meningitis, scarlet fever and others. Allergies and certain kinds of anemia also can be at fault.

If such an underlying cause can be identified and treated effectively the purpura disappears.

But when, after two years, there is no progress, it is time to see someone who specializes in blood disorders. A platelet count and other blood examination would be an essential part of the study.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My grandmother died in her 60s of cancer of the cervix or uterus, and my mother died at 62 of cancer of the cervix.

I am 41. Do you think to be on the safe side I should have a hysterectomy?

I had a Pap test every six months, but that doesn't prevent it.—H.T.

I see a Pap test doesn't prevent cancer, but it will detect it early. While others may be a familial tendency to cancer, I would say that a hysterectomy purely as a preventive measure is too extreme.

Continue your frequent Pap tests. If cancer should develop, there would be adequate warning.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My mother, 84, has never been sick but now he has a skin disease. I thought it might be serious but they say it is "dermatitis." I hope it is not contagious—Mrs. M.S.

Probably not—depending on exactly what it is. "Dermatitis" is a general germ for skin ailments, most of them annoying rather than dangerous, and the great majority of them not contagious. If your brother's was of a contagious type, you'd have been told so. Nutritional and vitamin deficiency can cause this in oldsters.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1♦	Pass	Pass	Dble

Opening lead — four of diamonds.

There is a lot of luck in bridge — even in dudpbcate bridge. For example, consider this deal played during the European championships in the match between Great Britain and Portugal.

At the first table, where the British were North-South, the bidding went as shown and they wound up playing the hand in two spades.

West cashed two diamonds, then shifted to a heart, covered by the Q-K-A. Declarer played a low trump to the king, which held, and continued the suit, ducking East's ten and forcing West to win with the ace.

As a result, North made 10 tricks — which was extremely lucky, since such an outcome required East to have the king of hearts and West to have the doubleton ace of trumps.

All four players assumed that when the Portuguese North-South pair bid the second table came to play the hand later on, they would also not get to game. But this assumption turned out to be false, for here is how the bidding went at the second table:

West	North	East	South
1 NT	2 ♦	Pass	2 NT
Pass	3 NT	Pass	3 NT
Dble

West, for Britain was John Collings opened the bidding ally inclined to bid suits he doesn't have rather than suits he does have.

Pursuing this inclination, Collings opened the bidding with a club, no doubt hoping to stop a club lead against the three notrump contract he visualized would later be played by either him or his partner.

But things didn't go quite the way he had planned. The enemy wound up laying the hand at three notrump — doubled by Collings — and he took the first seven tricks to bring home a score of 500 points.

Burial in Celebes Can Take 20 Years

TANA TORADJA AP) — Dying is serious business in Indonesia's Celebes mountains. Burial can take 20 years and cost as much as $50,000.

Funerals, awash in buffalo blood, are village carnivals for everyone but the feasting family of the dead. Graves are holes high up towering limestone cliffs, occasionally guarded by caricature statues.

The Toradja, numbering about a half-million in their hilly kingdoms on Sulawesi Celebes Island, have more rules about death than most cultures have about life.

For centuries their complex funeral pageants were family affairs. Now busloads of elderly French tourists and hitch-hiking young Japanese are on the guest list.

Local belief says death is a step toward something better. When they were animist, rites rest the corpse off well-fed and spiritually fortified to the hereafter. Now that half are Christian, customs remain but with changed meaning.

There are seven levels of burial. A "slave," as nobleman call impoverished commoners, is unceremoniously chucked away in a village plot.

But royal corpses get the full treatment.

The body is left in the family home for the first funeral, any time from a few weeks to a decade after death. The second funeral comes later—sometimes —where the body is carried to the cliff in a boat-shaped coffin and then trundled up a bamboo pole to the family cave.

After formal greetings, buffalos are dispatched one by one with a single sweep of a razor-sharp machete. Children dash in to lab staves at the dying animals to collect blood for a pudding.

The idea of buffalo—which are currency in Toradjaland—is at the heart of the death culture. They symbolize the dead man's wrath and his place in society.

If family X gives a buffalo to family Y for a funeral, then family Y must repay with an animal of equal value when a member of family X dies. It involves an entire keeping-up-with-the-Joneses status system.

Full-scale funerals can cost the stricken family the equivalent of more than $50,000 after the dozens of prow-roofed guest houses are built and the catering is finished.

Missionaries still have a way to go in West Toradja where local medicine men insist they can hypnotize a dead country man by long distance so that he can walk stiff-legged back home for burial.

Toradjas claim one energetic corpse in 1949 hiked from Makassar, 200 miles south and down a mountain, but eyewitnesses are hard to find.

Flood Enriches Labor

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — Labor is making a financial killing in the flood-ravaged Wyoming Valley, with some plumbers, carpenters and electricians reported to be earning as much as $1,200 a week.

But, while plenty of jobs are available, at good pay, there are twice as many unemployed today than before tropical storm Agnes caused the whole mess last June.

"The labor market has gone bananas," says Charles Vito, owner of the non-union Safeway Construction Co. His major gripe is that pre-flood employees are deserting him in the quest for higher pay, and he can't find competent replacements even at $13 an hour, about twice what he normally pays.

The region suffered $1 billion damage in the June 23 flooding, and now is in the throes of a massive rebuilding effort. Meantime, 40,000 homeless people live in temporary, government - provided shelters — the largest disaster relief program in the country's history—and nearly 1,000 stores and small plants remained closed.

The shortage of qualified repairmen is providing a windfall for many. Hundreds are switching to the building trades, despite lack of experience, to grab the fast buck.

Scores of mechanics are flocking to the region, from as far away as California, to take advantage of the unprecedented building repair demand. Many local, state and federal officials are concerned that homeowners and businessmen, anxious to fix up before winter, may be gypped.

"Some fly-by-night contractors from out-of-town, offering as much as $20 to $25 an hour, took most of our plumbers and electricians," Vito says, admittedly bitter.

"Everybody is stealing the other guy's help. This is what's going on."

Construction union leaders, however, deny there is a labor shortage, or that wages have skyrocketed unreasonably.

Van Horne's Island Is Sold to American

ST. ANDREWS, N.B. (CP) — The 500-acre island here which once served as the vacation retreat of Sir William Cornelius Van Horne, builder of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has been sold to an American who plans to subdivide it into building lots.

Norman Langdon, 30, who said he came to neighboring Maine penniless in 1964, purchased historic Minister's Island for $600,000 this year after the New Brunswick government turned down a suggestion it be made into a park.

The island has long been a favorite tourist spot because it can be reached by car only at low tide when the road on the ocean floor" appears but it is expected it will be closed to the public once it has been sold for private homes.

Mr. Langdon said it was unlikely he would be able to sell lots on the island if he planned to allow the public access to the old Van Horne home still standing near the island's southern tip.

He already has invested some money to repair the 28-room house, complete with 11 fireplaces. The estate also boasts stables, barns and a groundskeeper's cottage.

The island was still in the hands of Sir William's descendents until 1960 when his granddaughter lost interest in it.

The then Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Restigouche arranged the sale of the island to a group of Otto businessmen incorporated as the Van Horne Island Club.

Th original sale price was $27,000 but by the time the mortgage was arranged in 1962, the price had jumped to $50,000, still a bargain.

The Cleveland group put in more roads and even built an airstrip but their dream of a resort island slowly faded and the island came back on the market.

"When I found out it was for sale again, I went to Ottawa 15 months ago and Ottawa said it would be delighted to see Minister's Island as a park," he said. "They were willing to put up 75 per cent of the purchase price. But I went to see Premier Hatfield in the spring and summer of 1971 and his attitude was no. It would only involve $100,000 on the province's part. But he wouldn't hear tell of it."

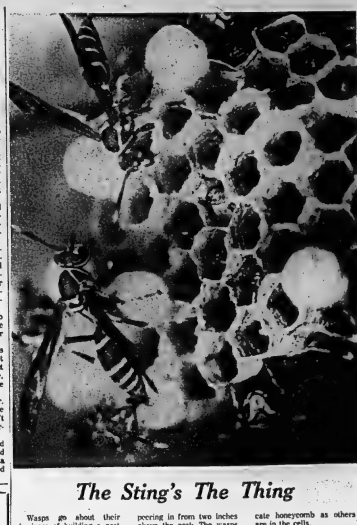
Dr. Noel Tibbo, deputy-mayor of St. Andrews and assistant director of the federal fisheries board research station here, envisaged a major aquarium on the island, related to the work at the research station.

He even went as far as to draft a plan for a marine aquarium - national park for Minister's Island.

"It would have cost tens of thousands," he said. "It would have been millions. But what better place than here, close to the border, in the traffic flow?"

Even the new owner, Mr. Langdon, wonders why the provincial government didn't seize the opportunity to purchase the island.



"Sure, the province should have bought the place and turned the whole island into a monument for the CPR and Van Horne."

Hot Water

LONDON (CP) — Laborer Joseph Owen found himself in hot water when he clambered across scaffolding into a hotel bathroom after working on a building site nearby. Owen, who treated himself to a bath, was charged by the hotel management with stealing hot water worth 25 new pence. Magistrate Denis Purcell gave him an absolute discharge and said: "It's a wonder you were not charged for the soap."

Moscow Worried By Sino-Japan Link

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The decision of China and Japan to establish diplomatic relations confronts the Soviet leadership with a new set of foreign policy dilemmas.

Moscow is ultra-sensitive to everything that happens near its Far Eastern borders. For it is there that it faces the risk of its bitter rivalry with Peking flaring again into armed conflict.

Russia and China share one of the longest frontiers in the world, and so long as the situation there is unsettled, Soviet leaders cannot afford to ignore its possible implications in their dealings with other states, including Japan.

The threat of a nuclear duel with the United States has receded, though not disappeared, freeing Moscow's hand to concentrate more on its strength in the east.

This effect of the arms limitation accords signed last May by President Nixon and Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev is undeniable, although Soviet commentators reject any suggestion that this was the aim of the agreements.

Relaxation in Europe, underpinned by the whole catalogue of treaties and agreements which West Germany has concluded with its Communist neighbors, has had the same effect.

Latest Western press enthusiastes of Soviet armed strength along the border with China put it at 49 divisions, some of them moved there from Europe. Chinese sources agree this estimate is approximately right but hesitate to name any figures.

It can be no accident that the Soviet Union, which has huge under-inhabited and unexploited tracts of Siberia lying close to Japan, is the only major country in the world trying to increase its birthrate.

Moscow hopes for Japanese help in opening up the Soviet Far East, which is rich in lumber, copper, natural gas and a host of valuable resources.

Japan does not want to antagonize China by appearing to build up Soviet economic strength along its northern flank but, by the same token, Russia will be antagonized if Peking's influence outweighs its own in Tokyo.

The Kremlin's public attitude to the establishment of Sino-Japanese relations is that normalization is a good thing as long as it is not directed against third parties. This is the same line as Moscow took after Nixon went to Peking.

With negotiations forthcoming on a Soviet-Japanese peace treaty, Moscow is in a position to chide Japan if it feels Tokyo is in danger of drawing too close to Peking.

Officials here have also let it be known that they are prepared to discuss the thornized question of all with Japan—the four islands in the southern Kuriles taken over by Russia at the end of the Second World War and still claimed by Tokyo.

The Kremlin is thought to fear that any concessions to Japan on this point could reinforce Chinese arguments for concessions in the protracted Sino-Soviet border talks in Peking.

Cambodian Rice Crop Is Small

PHNOM PENH (Reuter) — Cambodia is facing its worst rice harvest in memory because of a nationwide drought, the widespread abandonment of farms and fighting along the main highways.

In the latest move to aid this war-torn Indochina republic, the United States has promised to send 30,000 tons of rice early next year, increasing its food aid budget for Cambodia to more than $25 million.

Many experts here believe that may be only a first instalment if widespread hunger is to be prevented next year. Japan has promised another 10,000 tons as humanitarian aid.

The government, which has taken control of all rice distribution, has avoided an immediate crisis thanks to an American airlift from Saigon and emergency imports from neighboring Thailand.

The imported rice is on sale in this crowded capital at less than the price on the thriving black markets but 50 per cent more than the best grains cost three months ago. Buyers are rationed to 11 pounds each.

The dimensions of the current shortage, which touched off food riots here in September, are considered extremely serious by Western experts.

Chiefly to blame is the drought, which has prevented planting or withered the growing crop in almost every province.

Farmers also have abandoned their land because of insecurity, fleeing to swell the number of unproductive consumers in the towns and cities. Others have fallen under the control of North Vietnamese or local Communists.

As a result the area under cultivation has fallen this year by an average of 60 per cent in the major growing provinces where detailed surveys are made and the parched fields which are still cultivated are yielding 15 per cent less grain in the current harvest, experts say.

With a harvest failure looming, many farmers have been hoarding what little rice there is for their own use in the long, difficult months ahead.

PROTECT ROSES OVER WINTER

In most locations roses are still growing and should not be covered until about November 15th. Trim off excess growth, leaving about 15" to 18" above ground. Mound up at least 9" - 12" with good earth or use a rose collar. Remove earth early in spring and cut back to about 6". An application of C.I.L. Winterizer and/or bone meal would be beneficial now.

TREE ROSES

Although many growers successfully cover them for winter, we find it less time consuming and better

Dig a grave about 12" - 18" deep and shaped like a bowl with room for the roots. After November 15th trim top to 6 to 12" bud, dig up carefully, maintaining a good root-pack on the roots and tops. Cover first with 6 inches (6" or so) and then earth.

MULCH

Pine bark chips or peat moss applied in a 3" - 4" layer on top of the soil provides excellent winter protection for delicate shrubs, trees, perennials and fall-planted bulbs.

Atomic Waste an Issue

Canada Fights For Clean Seas

LONDON (CP) — Canada, on the one hand, and the United States and France on the other, are locked in fierce negotiations over the development of a convention to restrict ocean pollution, informants say.

At the heart of the reported struggle at the convention conference here is a question of jurisdiction over ocean-going traffic and the asserted right of some of the nuclear powers to continue to dump radioactive waste in the oceans—under "emergency" conditions.

The Canadian delegation, headed by Alan Beesley of the external affairs department, is reported to have concluded that unless there is a last-minute change of attitude, the convention—vital concern will have little meaning for Canada and other coastal states.

Under the convention concept, the drive against pollution would be based on a black list, items which could not be discharged into the oceans, and a grey list, items which might be dumped under rigid controls.

The black list would include such items as nuclear waste and chemicals which do not disintegrate and are harmful to creatures through the food chain. The grey list would include chemicals that can be rendered harmless.

As the year-long struggle continued, Canadian bitterness was reported to have been increased by the sudden introduction by some nuclear powers of a proposed escape clause which would allow the dumping of radioactive waste under emergency conditions.

Informants said the Canadian delegation is prepared to seek a way out of the impending deadlock by advocating that acceptance of the "escape clause be cleared as optional.

In that way some signatory countries may endorse it while others are allowed to reject it, though they will still be considered as parties to the convention.

At the United Nations anti-pollution conference at Stockholm last June jubilant Canadian officials felt they were making headway in seeking the right of coast states to prosecute ships flying the flag of another country if they pollute the oceans nearby.

But informants said that as the London conference progressed it became apparent that the flag states, led by the U.S., were strongly opposed to that concept.

The insistence that if a ship is caught polluting the oceans, a complaint should be sent to the state in which the ship is registered, before prosecution would take place.

The Canadian delegates, who are convinced they have the support of a majority of the countries at the conference, fear that a mere complaint will not bring much action from the flag states.

Informants said the Canadians were prepared to compromise, advocating that the coastal and flag states "share" jurisdiction on the high seas in areas adjacent to the coastal states. That would allow either group or both to launch prosecutions. But the flag states refused to agree.

PM Ponders Policy Changes Likely

OTTAWA (CP) — The pressure on Prime Minister Trudeau to keep a minority government from dangerously dictates changes of tack for the Liberals on some major legislative items first proposed in the last Parliament.

Topping the list are those bearing on taxation—Finance Minister John Turner's May 8 budget and such social welfare programs as the new baby-bonus system proposed by Welfare Minister John Munro.

Exactly what changes are coming won't be known until the Trudeau government meets the Commons. But some general areas of forced change have become evident since the Oct. 30 federal election that saw the Liberal majority slide away.

The Trudeau recognized this in his first post-election news conference last week. He pledged remedial action on politics voters appeared to oppose.

While saying the government would go ahead with its May budget plans to reduce maximum income taxes and provide faster equipment write-offs for Canadian manufacturing concerns, Mr. Trudeau left the door open on a reduction in personal income tax rates.

The Turner budget basically left personal income tax rates untouched, meaning that a three-per-cent reduction which has been in effect since mid-1971 runs out Dec. 31 unless the government has a post-election change of heart.

Just Thursday, the advisory Economic Council of Canada said stable or reduced tax rates could be tolerated in a drive for more employment and less inflation.

With 109 of the 264 Commons seats, the Liberals must have support from either the Conservatives, with 108 seats, or the NDP, with 31, to survive a Commons test of confidence. There were 14 Social Credit members and two independents elected to the new House.

Conservatives, who jumped their representation by 33 in the election, are spoiling for a Commons showdown, a Liberal confidence defeat and the chance to take power. The NDP, its election war chest drained and lacking the fund-raising clout of the major parties, would prefer a recuperation period.

Nixon Will Negotiate For New World Order

WASHINGTON (AP) — Armed with a re-election mandate, President Nixon will path ahead in his second term with delicate negotiations aimed at weaving a new fabric of world order from the divergent in-erests of friend and foe.

That's the forecast as top administration officials who are confident Vietnam will be pushed into the past before Nixon's second inauguration Jan. 20.

The president will travel extensively perhaps beginning before spring bu- morning in the next four years will be the spectacular foreign policy breakthroughs of his first term, the advisers say.

One of Nixon's top aides listed the current and soon-to-come tasks: The second phase of strategic-arms-limitation negotiations with the Soviet Union; trade and monetary discussions with Common Market countries as well as with Japan; the European security conference and talks on mutual troop reductions in Europe.

A parallel set of trade talks will be pursued with the Japanese as part of the effort to whittle down the huge imbalance of trade with the biggest Pacific ally the U.S. has.

On Nov. 21 in Geneva, talks begin with the Russians in hopes of reaching a broader curb on offensive nuclear arsenals before 1976, building on the defensive-missile treaty and the limited offensive-missile accord Nixon signed in his Moscow summit talks. Before this month's ends, preliminary talks also will open on the East-West conference on European security to be held in mid-1973. This will be followed by negotiations on mutual force reductions in central Europe.

Meanwhile, discussions will continue on reforming the international monetary system with a target date of next year for adoption of measures to avoid recurrent money crises.

And, while Nixon has promised he would not attempt to impose a settlement on the terrorism-ridden Middle East, the U.S. will make fresh efforts to start Arab-Israeli talks, probably in 1973.

Quebec May Force Hydro Line Repairs

MONTREAL (CP) — A spokesman for Premier Robert Bourassa said Thursday legislation is being prepared that would force striking Hydro-Quebec workers to restore essential electrical services throughout the province.

The legislation would be introduced if the strike is not over within 24 hours, he said.

Hydro-Quebec and union officials refused to comment.

In Quebec City, Mr. Bourassa said the government might consider legislation to define essential services rather than back-to-work legislation because some hydro services, such as meter-reading, are less essential than others.

Negotiations between Hydro officials and representatives of the 8,500 striking members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) were continuing early today.

Indian Summer Chances Slim

TORONTO (CP) — Chances for an Indian summer in southern Ontario are dwindling.

Long-range forecasts indicate the area is not going to have those three to 10 days of warm, hazy weather which come after cold snaps in three autumns out of four and make Indian summer a warming memory all winter.

Just over a year ago, southern Ontario was enjoying two weeks of Indian summer.

"This year, it's 10 to 12 degrees colder across the province," said Tom Moyer, federal climatologist at Toronto International Airport.

And much of the province has already had the coolest summer on record.

Paper Levy Annoying To Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — The U.S. government has exerted another irritant into already sensitive trade relations with Canada—a tariff that could kill $5 million in annual sales of Canadian fine paper in the United States.

Trade department officials said Thursday the government has protested the U.S. treasury department move and has received no formal reply.

Asked whether the U.S. is likely to rescind the measure, one official replied, "I wouldn't put a great deal of money on it."

The E. B. Eddy Co. of Hull, Que., which produces the bulk of such paper for export, estimates the new tariff will shut off sales completely.

Provincial Urban Planning Is Pushed

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government hopes to persuade the provinces to prepare province-wide urban plans.

It is understood Ottawa considers broad plans for future urban growth essential if the federal government is to know how to co-operate with the provinces and municipalities in urban development.

Alberta and Ontario have already moved in this direction but other provinces are lagging, observers say.

Provincial negotiators are likely to push strongly for provincial urban plans at the federal-provincial ministerial conference in Toronto Nov. 20-21.

The tri-level conference will precede despite federal election results which reduced the Liberal government to a shaky minority position in the Commons.

Some observers feel the federal position in the conference might be weakened because of the election. They suggest that provincial governments might be unwilling to reach agreement with a government that might soon be overturned.

But federal sources say the conference is designed only to establish methods of consultation between the three levels of government. There will be no decisions on specific issues such as urban transportation, pollution, housing and finance.

The principle of consultation among the three levels of government has been endorsed by the Conservative and New Democratic parties, and a change in attitude on consultation would be unlikely with a new government.

Canadian Satellite Sent Aloft

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (CP) — A Canadian communications satellite, launched into successful orbit Thursday night, circled the earth today while its Ottawa-based controllers awaited the opportune moment to place it into stationary position over the Pacific.

On Monday, the controllers will signal the firing of a small rocket on the satellite to move it into a stationary orbit 22,300 miles above the equator, its apogee point toward Canada.

If the manoeuvre is successful, Canada's first domestic communications satellite will make it possible for Canada's northern residents to communicate with each other and the world more frequently and receive color television programs in their homes.

Twelve young northern children, representative of the people who are to benefit from the satellite, watched as a U.S. Delta rocket lifted Anik-1 from the launch pad after a false alarm technical warning delayed the launch by almost two hours.

Thieu Says Hanoi Troops Must Leave Before Peace

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu told an envoy from President Nixon today that all North Vietnamese troops must be withdrawn from South Vietnam before an agreement to end the war can become final, a newspaper controlled by the president's office reported.

Thieu conferred for nearly two hours with Gen. Alexander M. Haig shortly after he arrived in Saigon to urge Thieu to go along with the ceasefire agreement presidential adviser Henry Kissinger worked out with the North Vietnamese in Paris. Haig is Kissinger's chief assistant.

The newspaper Tin Song, which is financed by Thieu's private secretary, quoted a high-level source as saying that Thieu in his meeting with Haig insisted on the total withdrawal of all North Vietnamese troops from the south. Thieu was reported to have said he would not accept any private agreements or tacit understandings on a pullout.

Both President Nixon and chief U.S. peace negotiator William Porter expressed confidence Thursday in an early settlement of the war, and informed sources said formed Washington national adviser Henry Kissinger presidential adviser Henry Kissinger was expected to resume his secret talks with the Vietnamese in Paris next week. Haig returns to Washington this weekend.

Residents Ask Dundas Lights

Alderman Art Keegan told Dundas East property owners at a public meeting last night that the city's traffic committee will work to have at least one set of traffic lights placed along the stretch of roadway that is due for widening to four lanes in 1973.

Some of the residents and landowners of the portion of Dundas between Bleecker Ave. and Church St. expressed concern that plans on display during the gathering at the Canadian Legion branch made no provision for lights at any of the intersections from Church through to Dufferin.

"There is too much space in there not to have lights," said one property owner.

Fears were expressed that it would be difficult to turn onto a widened Dundas Street if there were no traffic lights, particularly at such busy commercial corners as Dundas and Foster.

"You could wait an hour to get onto Dundas," said another resident.

When concerns of the landowners were mentioned, Bob Galloway of Green, Galloway and Associates Ltd. told the 70 people in attendance that his firm had not put traffic lights on the plans because traffic counts did not merit them.

He was told from the audience, "you have to live with a problem to see it."

Ald. Keegan, chairman of the city's traffic committee, took the floor to say he favors lights at least at Foster. He said there are several industries south of Dundas in this district and people working there must have ready access to the new four-lane street.

Keegan was asked pointblank by Charles Reeves, of 190 Dundas East "do the property owners have to accept this road widening?"

"It is going to be built," the alderman replied, "if not it (Dundas East) will be a bottleneck from east of Bellamy through to Trenton."

Stevens answered that he was not concerned about Trenton.

Fears were expressed by property owners that much of their front lawn areas would be gobbled up by the new road.

We are going to end up with practically nothing," said one.

Mr. Galloway, representing the engineering consultants, agreed with a member of the audience that there will be "maximum scarring (of properties) on the north side" of Dundas East.

The charge was expressed from the floor that the industrial and commercial properties on the south side were being left relatively untouched, while the more residential north side was having to provide more land to accommodate the widening. It was suggested this should be reversed.

Ald. Keegan said the traffic committee will meet next week to review the Greer, Galloway draft plans for the major public works project

Joyce Not Running

Alderman Gerald Joyce announced today he would not be running for city council December 4.

A member for five years, Ald. Joyce said he regretted the decision but felt obliged to step down because of possible charges of conflict of interest.

"I see my business is to a greater part, investing in real estate rather than being a merchant or buisnessman," he said Thursday morning. "It appears to some that on many issues there could be a possible conflict of interest."

In the past, he said, he has declared his interest and has not voted on any matter concerned before council that might be construed as conflicting.

"At all times, I have declared my interest even though it might be minor," he said.

Ald. Joyce said a speech Monday in council by retiring Aldermen Donald Soutter convinced him he should step down.

"In his remarks to Mayor Scott, Ald. Soutter indicated that a developer should not be the head of council. I feel that what I explained to the mayor is also applicable to an alderman."

This did not mean he was supporting Ald. Soutter's allegation of conflict of interest against the mayor.

"I do not agree with all the views of Ald. Soutter," he said. However, it may be the view of some and I am not going to prejudge my position as a businessman on city council."

He said recent provincial legislation regarding municipal officials and their holdings had "forced" him out of council.

"However I will reassess my position and consider offering myself for municipal government at such time as the Ontario Municipal Act has been changed."

"The Ontario Municipal Act is ridiculous as it affects members of council."

A one - time member of the Belleville Public School Board for three years, Ald. Joyce has been in public life for eight years. He is the owner of Gerald Joyce Realty Ltd.

Library Extension Ready to Go

Miron-Wiggers Construction Ltd., Trenton construction firm, will build the new addition to Belleville's downtown library.

The Trenton firm's tender of $240,938, was the lowest of four bids received on Oct. 30 and is approximately $8,000 under the amount provided in this year's city capital works budget.

Library board chairman Merritt R. Hackett said the Trenton firm had promised completion five months after start of construction, which will begin as soon as materials and equipment can be brought on the job.

Mr. Hackett said board members were particularly pleased that the contract price had come in under the estimated budget price.

"We will be able to go ahead without difficulty," he said.

The new library addition was the topic of some spirited discussion last year when there was pressure from some council members to have a branch library constructed in the city's west end, rather than an addition to the present downtown complex.

But library board members maintained surveys had shown an addition to the central library would best serve the needs of the city.

Hopes last year were that the library addition could be started in time to take advantage of financial assistance through last winter's winter works program. This, however, was ruled out due to delay in plan preparation and the project was put over until this year.

Mr. Hackett said that another application will be made for approval of the library as a winter works project.

The two - storey library addition will be built immediately to the east of the present structure and will take up all available ground space on the library lot.

The addition will include office space, work area and utility rooms on the main floor with a second floor art gallery equipped with folding doors to allow small use.

"The addition will be a big asset to the library, and to the whole city area," Mr. Hackett assured.

PACE Discusses Bay, River Mouth

City Hall, contractors and planners all came under fire at Tuesday's PACE meeting in connection with dyke building up the Moira River for the placement of sanitary and storm sewers.

While aldermanic candidate Stu Meeks claimed, "the Bay is the best he's ever seen in," Bill Hockley said, "you mean it is less of a cesspool than it ever was before."

The issue of the general condition of the Bay of Quinte and the Moira River has come up in council on several occasions from an environmental point of view and is the basis of Mr. Meeks' campaign.

Mr. Meeks explained, "The general quality throughout the bay is good, the best he'd seen in in years." The immediate problem he is concerned with is "the decreasing depth of the harbor because of silt washing down from construction sites higher up the river."

Mr. Meeks contended that sediment being washed down the river was therefore impeding the potential of the harbor.

Sand bars, he said, were forming in the vicinity of the railroad bridge and were affecting off the usability of the harbor.

Bill Hockley was initially concerned that sediment from the building would damage the fish and general water life.

"While the bay fills with mud, the mayor makes these insane comments that the water is fine," said Mr. Hockley. "The mayor hasn't done a thing to save the Bay for the city's greatest assets."

Mr. Meeks, who spends a lot of time on the bay operating a rescue boat, said the sediment from the June thru winter in the way of dredging the silt from the bay, there was going to be a lot of flooded downtown stores next spring runoff."

Mr. Meeks recommended a federal grant be obtained in the form of a winter works project to have the mouth of the river dredged.

Mr. Meeks outlined a plan that would allow boats to be moored on both sides of Victoria Park, rather than just the east side.

"Contrary to city engineer's reports, it is not difficult to gravel that is being used to hold back Moira River waters while crews work.

There is fine gravel that will be impossible to remove. It will all end up at the mouth of the river," said Mr. Meeks.

"Council must pass that resolution," said Mr. Meeks, referring to the winter works project.

Mr. Meeks, a professional diver, stated, "I went down in the harbor and there is about 10 inches of sediment that shouldn't be there, but is because of the construction.

Thieves Hit Businesses

TRENTON (Staff) — Thieves Tuesday struck four businesses in Trenton, in some cases leaving quite a bit of damage in their wake, and others taking nothing but money.

Wilbert Hart, husband of Mrs. Ila Hart, owner of Spring's Home Bakery at 17 Front Street, reports between $60 and $70 cash was stolen after thieves smashed a window at the rear of the shop.

"They must have been small people because a bannister blocks most of the window," he said. This is the shop's third break-in in recent years but no damage was done and no baked goods were stolen.

At Tommy's Restaurant and Tavern, 68 Front Street, the story was a different one. Owner Tommy Theodalion told The Intelligencer "quite a bit of damage was done." Between $180 and $200 in cash was stolen, wires on musical equipment were broken and decorative doors smashed.

Mr. Cooping of Chrysler, 272 Dundas Street East, manager David Smith reports the most serious break-in of the night. Thieves broke a window of the car sales offices, ransacked the building, escaping with between $500 and $600, he estimates. There was his company's first break-in.

Town police report nothing was taken and no damage done when someone broke into the Trenton Public School yards on Ontario Street.

Investigation, headed by Det.-Sgt. Sid Vickers, continues.

City Waiter Suggested Nixon Change Image

By BRIAN AMARON
Staff Reporter

A 1957 visit to Belleville may have sent Richard Nixon on the road to the presidency.

It seems that in July of that year, Mr. Nixon, then Vice-President, sailed from Lake Ontario from Rochester to spend a weekend playing golf and sampling Hastings County cheese.

On the Friday night, he and Senator Harry Byrd of Virginia were sight-seeing along Front Street when they decided to drop into the City Hotel for a refresher.

One of the waiters was Ross Lusk, a well-read man who was certain the visitor came from Washington.

Mr. Lusk, now a crew dispatcher for Canadian National tried to convince hotel manager Bev Turner that a celebrity was in their midst.

"But Mr. Yanover wouldn't believe me and kept saying 'quit spooling me,'" he recalled Monday.

So, taking the initiative, the waiter approached the distinguished looking visitor and asked if he was indeed the Vice-President.

"He looked at me, then his hand shot out. It was like feeding a baby."

Mr. Lusk says the Vice-President was travelling incognito and no advance publicity had been given. He was invited to join the party and discussion soon turned to the recent Canadian federal election in which John Diefenbaker became Prime Minister.

"We talked about this and that," said Mr. Lusk. "Mr. Nixon was very friendly."

Then came the decisive moment.

"I told him he was wearing a poker face," Mr. Lusk recalled. "And you know, he changed his image after that."

Whether the incident had any bearing on Mr. Nixon's political future remains in doubt. But on account of his visit in the July 7, 1957 edition of the Ontario Intelligencer reveals he played 27 holes of golf at Quinte Country Club and took home 50 pounds of Black Diamond cheddar cheese.

Besides Sen. Byrd, he was accompanied by the owner of the yacht, Paul Miller, president of the Gannett newspaper chain, Carl Hallauer, president, of Bausch and Lamb Optical of Rochester, and Rex Smith, VCR - president of American airlines.

Mr. Nixon was quite taken by the golf course scenery, telling the reporter: "It's beautiful. A golfer would like to go some distance to find a prettier course."

The reporter also called Nixon "an easy man to approach" and noted he possessed "a wonderful sense of humor and a fine repertoire of anecdotes and expressions."

But it was Mr. Lusk who had the best story. As well as drinking draft with Mr. Nixon, he also had the honor of breaking his boss's hour of shyness.

"I took Mr. Yanover over to the table and said, 'I'd like you to meet the Vice-President of the United States!' Mr. Yanover bought me a pint after."

Housewife A Candidate

BLOOMFIELD (Staff) — A Picton housewife Gladys Porter, has declared she will seek election to the Prince Edward County board of education.

Mrs. Porter, a former employee at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute, is a former assistant accountant in banking. She and her husband have three children, two attending elementary school and one a student at PECI.

She will be opposed by Picton's incumbent trustees Ruth Hart and Lloyd Seeley.

Taggers Needed

A large number of taggers are still needed for the week end of Nov. 17 and 18, when as much as $2,000 should be raised to support the parade.

Volunteers are invited to appear at the recreation centre on Pinnacle Street from 4 p.m. Friday until 4 p.m. Saturday.

Candidates On Griddle November 30

TRENTON (Staff) - Retiring Councillor E. M. "Ted" Porter has agreed to act as chairman of a traditional candidate's night, to be held Nov. 30 at the Trenton Community Gardens starting at 8 p.m.

The event will give all candidates for elected office in the Dec. 4 municipal elections a chance to meet the voters and face the questions and good natured ribbing of the public.

Dentist's Widow Accepts Award

Mrs. G. Harold Craig of Belleville received a posthumous Fellowship from Dr. Academy of General Dentistry at its 20th annual meeting in San Francisco Oct. 28. Mrs. Craig is the widow of Dr. Craig Copping of Craig who was killed in a plane crash earlier this year.

Dr. Craig, a graduate of the University of Toronto, completed all the educational requirements for admission as a Fellow prior to his accident. Dr. Craig's interests and participation in continuing education led to him being one of the initiators of the First Chapter of the Academy of General Dentistry established in Canada -- The Kente Chapter; and hence a new approach to continuing education in Canada. He became the first president of the Ontario Division, and represented the division as Director and Regional Trustee for District 15 of the Academy of General Dentistry with headquarters in Chicago. Dr. Craig served on many Ontario Dental Association committees as well as the Task Force on Dental Care Delivery established by the Ontario Council of Health.

Dr. Harvey Elford, also a graduate of the University of Toronto, was the first Canadian dentist to receive a Fellowship in the American Academy General Dentistry at the Convention in San Francisco.

Dr. Elliott has been active in continuing education having taken extensive studies in both Canadian and American universities, as well as giving several lectures in various fields of dentistry. He is a member of The American Academy of General Dentistry. The Canadian Academy of Periodontology, and President of The Bay of Quinte Dental Society.

Mural Plan Scrapped

TRENTON (Staff) — Plans for a proposed outdoor mural on Wooler Street's dry goods store have egone back in the pavni pot.

For some time the Trenton Parks Board and Chamber of Commerce were trying to interest the store in having a mural, depicting the travels of Samuel de Champlain in the Quinte area painted on the wall to add a touch of color to downtown, Trenton and serve as a tourist attraction.

Trenton school pupils were to have been asked to submit designs.

But the plans fell through when Woolworth officials surveyed the high cost of painting the mural and keeping it up, a spokesman for the town parks board says.

Letter Praises Rec Department

During the visit the Peterborough students visited the Zwicks Island park and the Dick Ellis' field and related recreational complex.

Mr. Walker said his students' visit was most valuable in that through city recreational director Lorne Williams they were able to gain an insight into the complexity of a municipal leisure service delivery system and the skills and knowledge needed to work successfully and happily in such a department.

The Peterborough students found the Belleville Recreation department was "not on on the right track but right up to date." Mr. Walker's thank you letter said.

Williams Opens Campaign

Loyalist College teacher Bob Williams Tuesday told the PACE organization, "the ward system should be reinstituted in the city of Belleville."

He was accompanied by Stu Meeks, also running for council and Alderman Robin Jeffrey, mayoralty hopeful.

Mr. Williams claimed a prime issue in the campaign was development.

"I'm not talking about slowing things down but getting the issues to the 'grass roots level' and getting more people involved in community-making decisions," he said.

Enlarging on the ward system, Mr. Williams advised that focus be placed on smaller groups, decentralizing major decisions.

"We, the small groups and little people, have to secure the reins of development," he said.

Waterfront, green areas and housing developments, were key interests for Mr. Williams in his address to PACE.

Nixon Landslide

George McGovern was not so much a weak candidate — some observers say he was — as one with a weak platform.

Sincere as he was in his convictions regarding a humanitarian solution to the war in Vietnam, McGovern's policy was viewed widely as not only impractical but as a sell-out to the Communists. The senator from South Dakota, himself a second World War bomber pilot who was decorated for bravery, would have ended the Vietnam war — period, withdrawing the remaining U.S. forces without regard for U.S., South Vietnamese (corruptly governed though they may be) and free world interests.

Americans, war weary as they are, overwhelmingly rejected a prospect that would have seen the Communists swiftly extend their hold over the entire country.

On domestic matters too they were unsure of what course McGovern would take.

President Nixon meanwhile rode the crest of his many achievements and current popularity to one of the greatest presidential victories in United States history. Nixon has displayed courage and statesmanship. He has made many difficult and unpopular decisions which have paid off in large measure and have brought the Vietnam war to the brink of a settlement at least. He has taken these steps through firmness, with a desire to end the war — but at the same time, end it with honor. Prestige counts for a great deal in international relations and it would be a sad day if the U.S. sought to end the conflict other than by a negotiated settlement acceptable to all parties.

McGovern would have cast such considerations aside whereas Nixon, whose experience in politics goes back a quarter of a century and includes some eight years as vice-president (the youngest in U.S. history) under Eisenhower, preferred the path of honor.

Ironically, there were some shaky periods in the opening stages of the Nixon presidency but these were soon erased as he took the initiative in seeking personal contacts with world leaders, including those of China and the Soviet Union. As a result there is a better international understanding today, no longer the suspicion and hate that have marked east-west relations in recent years.

Trenton Plant's Fate

There is no rejoicing in Trenton over the closing of the Cosdos Imperial Mills plant, unless it be among some younger employees who appear to be happy at the prospect of enforced idleness cushioned by unemployment benefits.

It is a sign of the times and one that should provide food for thought for the federal government whose policies have encouraged a caveller attitude toward work and a situation that can have a man earn more while unemployed, courtesy of the taxpayer than by working.

A union official says there are plans afoot to keep the cotton yarn plant operating and we certainly hope these will bear fruit. But how do you keep a place going when unemployment benefits result in massive staff turnover? According to plant manager Clifford Baker, his plant had been operating at a financial loss "because of the staff comings and goings."

Fitness?

If Prime Minister Trudeau's recent words on fitness are to mean anything, a lot of Canadians are going to need weaning off cigarets.

That is the intent of Christmas seals, contributions to which go toward fighting respiratory diseases, many of which in turn stem from the effects of tobacco use.

It is noticeable that men in particular have heeded the warnings of medical authorities and have quit smoking. At a recent service club meeting there were about 80 members present. Of these only about ten were smoking cigarets, and perhaps three or four were smoking pipes.

The same cannot be said of women who are smoking in increasing numbers and quantity — at the wheel of the car, at work, in restaurants, while dying the shopping.

Meanwhile, drop into any restaurant after school is out and practically every last kid in the place is smoking, boys and girls. If this is a road to fitness for young Canadians then many of us are going to have to think again.

Wife of Former Forestry Minister

Jeanne Sauve One of Five Women Elected to Commons

By FARMER TISSINGTON

OTTAWA—Had the election not turned out as it did it is possible another political first was in the making—this one involving a successful woman candidate. There was a record in the fact three women candidates won in Quebec, the first time that province has ever sent a woman to the Commons. But there was also a possibility that one of them—Madame Jeanne Sauve, might have been elevated to cabinet rank.

Madame Sauve was elected in the Montreal riding of Anjou-ac with a more than 14,000 vote margin over her nearest rival, the NDP candidate. She has made a mark nationally as a journalist, broadcaster and as former president of the Canadian Institute of Public Affairs. Had she been elevated to the cabinet she would have followed her husband in this role, the first time that would have happened in our history. Her husband is Maurice Sauve who was minister of forestry in the Pearson administration. He is now active politics and is now a vice president of Consolidated Bathurst, one of Canada's major paper companies.

Incidentally, the election of five women to the Commons is also a new high but federal politics is still very much a man's game. Of the 1,945 men who sought office slightly less than 25 per cent were successful. Of the 70 women who tried to make it, only about seven per cent were winners.

The closeness of the election result emphasizes how important it is to have a Speaker who is an independent. With the major parties practically tied, neither one would want to have one of their number elected as Speaker, possibly putting them in a difficult position in the house. As it is, Mr. Lamoureux ran and won as an independent for the second time and is the obvious choice as Speaker, thus eliminating the need for either major party to weaken its own voting strength. And, of course in a House so evenly divided the job of Speaker will be much more difficult than it has been able to have available a Speaker with Mr. Lamoureux's experience, wisdom, tact and humor.

One of the opposition parties' most scornful descriptions of the Trudeau government during the campaign was that it was "arrogant and complacent." After the shock of October 30, chances are the Liberals will be anything but that in the next and near election. "Humble and worried" will be a more appropriate label.

When Mr. Trudeau spoke on election night of the many broken dreams of candidates he spoke true words. Most candidacies who seek public office usually convince themselves they have a good chance of winning, partly because they usually talk only to their own supporters or because people who plan to vote against them rarely admit it to the candidate's face. Among the Liberals of the last parliament there were a number who aspired to cabinet positions in the new one or who had their hearts set on becoming parliamentary secretaries.

Bruce Howard, the former MP for Okanagan-Boundary, had been mentioned as a potential minister from British Columbia and the retirement of Arthur Laing, of veterans' affairs Minister, had seemed to make this even greater possibility. Mr. Howard was parliamentary secretary to trade ministers and Joe Pepin but suffered defeat.

With the Conservatives making such big gains all the Tory MPs of the last Parliament should have been safe. Yet three Conservative members of the last house who sought re-election failed to make it, all of them losing to Liberals. Had they held their ridings the final totals would have been 113 for the Tories and 105 for the Grits and we would not have had the indecision about who should form the next government.

The three were Ambrose Peddle in Newfoundland whose 735 margin of 1968 mailed to over a 5,000 deficit this time; Georges Valade, the only Conservative elected in the Montreal area in 1968; and Perry Ryan in Toronto Spadina, whose mid-Parliament switch from the Liberals to the Conservative obviously hurt.

Inflation: A Problem That Is World-Wide

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

Inflation, one of the issues which almost overthrew Prime Minister Trudeau in the Canadian election, also plagues West Germany on the verge of its national election as well as the French and the Italians. Britain's Prime Minister Edward Heath announced mini-budget and price controls.

Inflation is an issue we cannot touch, feel or see. But is real enough in the way it cuts into the value of national currencies and transgresses national governments in its sweep.

Like the great plagues of the middle ages, inflation's rampage never honors a party label, or a political system.

Some leaders like Prime Minister Trudeau, or Brazil's military generals who hold supreme power, issue decrees to order its reduction or removal.

But in a subtler way inflation's side-effects, despite such measures reach into individual economies, weary the wage-earner, defy the tired politician, bring down once-strong governments.

In West Germany where unemployment is almost nil, there is an annual inflation rate of about 6.2 per cent. West German food prices are climbing faster than ours. These have tives had formed the new government and York University economist James Gillies had become finance minister, his immediate solution would have been a lower bank rate for greater purchasing power.

But again bank rates have been raised and lowered to increase or dampen spending power. The auxiliary reason has been to ease the increase in unemployment which a strong anti-inflationary policy had brought about.

Mr. Gillies, in the first flush of a Tory victory, like Mr. Heath in his first victory flush in the summer of 1970, would make great and honest promises to balance these perplexing economic forces.

But whatever he did, would be the proverbial finger in the dam. Like our Roman and medieval forbears, we are doomed to cope with a menace which will not go away—economic additions of the social order.

Even the threats of nuclear war and environmental pollution can be met by joint decision over hard-fought bargaining tables. But this solution cannot solve inflation's rampage.

It's control remains the major international problem for which no one has found a solution.

Americans Eat Too Much

Kingston Whig - Standard

Some China physicians recently visited the United States to observe medical facilities. One of them, Dr. Wu Wei-jan, head of the delegation from the People's Republic of China, observed that Americans appeared to him to be too fat. Americans seem to be eating something all the time," he said, adding that the obesity he noticed was probably due to "too many cars and not enough exercise."

Later, during a visit to Massachusetts General Hospital, Dr. Wu noticed during his inspection of intensive care units that many of those suffering from respiratory problems "appeared to be obese" and said that overweight might be the cause of their problems.

The answer was significant. The American doctors told him that there was no data which would indicate that obesity and respiratory failure had any relationship.

Apart from the fact that North Americans generally and not just Americans do "seem to be eating something all the time," the answer given to Dr. Wu's question illustrates what is perhaps the basic difference between western and eastern medicine. Western physicians are trained to concentrate on cure to the neglect of prevention. They are also most loth to admit to concern themselves with what is sometimes called the "whole person" approach to medicine and instead tend to isolate and specialize.

The tendency to over-eat is well known as a form of compensation, a substitute activity for many psychological difficulties. Dr. Wu did not make unique observation when he noticed the eating habits of Americans; but his comments might serve to bring the matter into sharp focus simply because they came from outside. What national psychosis exists which might account for obesity which has become almost a traditional North American phenomenon?

Pits, Quarries, Environment

Brockville Recorder and Times

Preliminary reports of the new official plan and text for the Leeds county area municipalities indicate the township is again going to take a look at some control for pits and quarries. While it is a mile late, it is still needed, although the new regulations passed by the Ontario Legislature provide a good measure of control too.

The Pits and Quarries Act provides for fines up to $5,000 for operators who fail to comply with regulations. The intent of the bill is to get operators to either fill up expired quarries and pits or turn them into something useful. We're not sure about the retroactivity of the bill yet but there should be some provision for old quarries. It is needed in Eastern Ontario.

Many parts of Leeds are gilded with quarries some of them within close proximity to roads and 20 or 30 feet deep. Many have been abandoned for years and are filled with water but whether or not they have "expired" is unknown. Several of these great holes could be used for dumps in a landfill operation.

In its recent weekly news letter the Kemptville district office of the ministry of natural resources drew attention to some of the things that are being done to make worked out pits and quarries an asset. Near Sudbury builders reconstructed as a gravel deposit and after it was worked out the site was groomed and used to locate a new high school complex and athletic field, baseball diamond and grounds. The sloped sides of the old pit were grassed over and used as bleachers for delighted sports fans who now sprawl comfortably during game time.

"In some areas where land is at a premium, this imaginative development of abandoned gravel pits can mean thousands of dollars saved for a community", the report notes.

In order to provide a better picture of gravel deposits in the province, the government is now taking an inventory of the qualities of gravel left in the province. To do this a two-man team is mapping and exploring almost every granular deposit that has ever been uncovered, worked or discovered. Every township by township and the team is now working eastern Ontario. By next spring they are also making an inventory of abandoned quarries.

The purpose of this inventory is to aid planners, developers, contractors, local, regional and provincial governments and ecologists with locations in an attempt to prevent the scattered pits in favor of large projects on a major deposit or around a string of smaller deposits in an area. Instead of small bites, whole areas can be mined, developed and rehabilitated to new uses, similar to the Sudbury experience.

The value in this move and in the Pits and Quarries Act is the fact that it shows concern on the part of government for ecology. And the Act will make sure that if local authorities refuse to regulate quarries and pits, the government is ready to step in and require it for the sake of the environment. It is another area in which local control could have more of their local autonomy.

The poppies still blow in Flanders, o'er the fields that once echoed to the gay young laughter of the carefree Canadian manhood. Today they are trampled beneath the foot of the same foe that these young Canadians battled back in the first flush of victory. But the desecration of this sacred soil by the tyrannic Nazis shall not change the vow that is "for ever part of Canada".

On Sunday, Canada, remembering, will honor their deeds and sacrifice. Every city, town, village and hamlet, will go the prayers of millions of Canadians. The names of the grand men of World War I and that of their gallant sons who have given their all in the present holocaust, will be revered. Bill on Credit Will Join Two Leftover Laws

TORONTO (CP) — At least three controversial bills face members when the second session of the 29th Ontario legislature resumes Nov. 21.

Two of the bills—to give Ontario's 27th dentistrict an independent professional status, which may be amended and to permit the provincial takeover of safety inspection of construction projects—are leftovers from the session which adjourned June 30 for a summer recess.

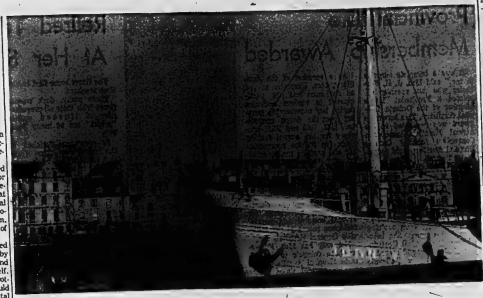
The third, to protect citizens from unfair credit reported by independent agencies, "is expected to be introduced by John Clement, one of four backbenchers making debuts in the session as cabinet ministers.

Mr. Clement took over consumer and commercial relations from Eric Winkler in cabinet changes made last summer by Premier William Davis. Mr. Winkler became chairman of management board of cabinet.

Mr. Clement will have to get through the house six of the 15 bills left on the order paper.

One session, expected to last about three weeks, will also mark the return of Darcy McKeough as a government backbencher. Mr. McKeough resigned last summer as treasurer over a conflict of interest involving a land development project in his hometown of Chatham. His portfolio has been taken over by Charles MacNaughton, formerly manager, treasury board chairman.

The session also is expected to receive a half-dozen major reports, including those of select legislature committees that studied the Ontario Municipal Board, all-terrain vehicles, economic and cultural nationalism, land drainage and the use of educational facilities.



A separate report is expected from a commission headed by Dalton Camp on the role and function of the legislature itself.

Health Minister Richard Potter's bill on denturists would create a new type of dental technologist qualified to fit and sell dentures directly to the public without authorization of dentists, as now required by law.

About 70 denturists currently sell directly to the public in contravention of the Dentistry Act of Ontario.

The minister has warned that a lot of these type of denturists will be put out of business.

An amendment to the bill, now in second reading stage, probably would provide stiffer requirements for qualifications of dental technologist. Dentists have assembled a power lobby against he legislation, expected against the legislation, expected house.

Mixed Blessings

Aberdeen's population view the findings of large deposits of oil off the North Sea coast with mixed blessings. While businessmen see a chance to expand if the city enjoys large-scale growth, local fishermen are worried about possible pollution of the rich fishing grounds from the undersea pipeline which will bring the oil to the mainland. Winter Fair Opens Today

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's biggest farm fair opens for its 50th year today with a few cosmetic touches to make it look every minute of its age.

With the passage of years, the Royal Agricultural Winter fair gradually has changed from a rural showcase that attracted mostly farmers to a rural showcase that attracts mostly city dwellers.

This year, looking older than ever in honor of its 50-year history, the Royal is expected to draw about 300,000 visitors—80 per cent of them nostalgia-hungry urbanites.

General Manager John Meiers only regret is that the fair is not more ancient than it is.

"Well, yes," he said in an interview Thursday, "we're sort of highlighting the fact that this is our 50th year. But you know, we could really make something out of it if it was our 100th anniversary, like some of these department stores are doing."

Daring Dentistry

WINDSOR, England (CP) — Dentist David Tayler visited an unusual patient to relieve a nagging toothache when officials at this Berkshire safari park called on David's services to help Rama the killer whale. The dentist braved the razor-sharp teeth edges of the whale to give an anesthetic. "Rama was very understanding," he said later. "The injection hurt him a bit but he seemed to know I was doing him a favor."

Could Stanfield Dismiss Beson?

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield's campaign promise to fire Edgar Benson as president of the Canadian transport commission sparks tricky legal questions and rekindles memories of political battles fought 11 years ago.

Mr. Benson, whose name became a household word when he was finance minister, was named to the commission by Prime Minister Trudeau Sept. 1, the same day Mr. Trudeau called the election.

With the Liberals abalancing on the thin edge of minority government, Mr. Stanfield repeated his campaign pledge last week: If he forms a government he will demand Mr. Benson's resignation.

The only precedent officials can recall is the Coyne affair of 1961.

As governor of the Bank of Canada, James Coyne had been sniping at government monetary policy for months when prime minister John Diefenbaker's cabinet finally decided to introduce a bill in the Commons to fire him.

Passed by the Conservative Commons majority, the bill was blocked in the Liberal-dominated Senate after Mr. Coyne asked for its defeat so he could retire honorably.

Mr. Coyne later described Mr. Diefenbaker as "the evil genius behind the whole matter."

Officials familiar with the law say it would take a similar bill to get Mr. Benson off the transport commission if he rejected a Conservative government's request for his resignation.

The law says "he may be removed for cause" by the cabinet anytime.

But being a former Liberal finance minister is not considered sufficient cause for dismissal, observers say.

Caouette Urges More Power For Provinces

TORONTO (CP) — Canada will not survive another 15 years unless the provinces are given as much autonomy as possible, Real Caouette, Social Credit party leader, said Thursday.

Mr. Caouette told the Toronto Empire Club that national unity problems will be solved only if the federal government decentralizes with more powers going to all provinces.

Kosygin's Assailant Seeks Refuge in U.S.

DETROIT (CP) — A 28-year-old Toronto hair stylist who attacked Russian Premier Alexei Kosygin in Ottawa last year is seeking political asylum in the United States to escape what he called persecution by the regime of Prime Minister Trudeau.

Gean Matrai said he crossed the border here Thursday and faces a minimum of eight months in jail for violating his probation if he returns to Canada.

The Hungarian-born Canadian citizen, who served three months in jail for the attack and now is on two years' probation, said he does not plan to return.

Matrai said he also was convicted last month of spraying a mace-type substance in an auditorium where a socialist group was holding a meeting.

He and his fiance were both sentenced to two months in jail. He says he was framed and that he was refused the right to appeal the conviction.

Detroit attorney James Wells, who said he is being paid by the Michigan right-wing Breakthrough organization and Canada's right-wing Edmund Burke Society, said he would make a formal application to the U.S. government today on Matrai's behalf.

Breakthrough's Donald Lobsinger, who accompanied Matrai at the news conference, said he considered Matrai a "true patriot, freedom fighter and a dedicated Communist fighter."

When Matrai assaulted Kosygin Oct. 18, 1971, he was a candidate in the Ontario provincial election representing the Social Credit party. He lost. He said he is proud to be a Canadian citizen but added he cannot live amidst "political persecution."

Liberal Wins

MONTREAL (CP) — Mr. Justice Albert Malouf of Quebec Superior Court Thursday declared Liberal Raymond Dupont winner in the Oct. 30 federal election in Montreal Ste. Marie riding.

The official election count had given Mr. Dupont an 88 - vote margin over Georges Valade, the Progressive Conservative candidate.

The judicial recount requested by Mr. Valade increased the Liberal vote from 7,887 to 7,945 while the Conservative vote increased from 7,799 to 7,836, giving Mr. Dupont a 119-vote edge.

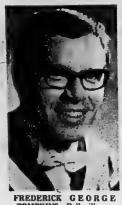
Admirable Award

Provincial Life Membership Awarded

"It was a complete surprise to me," said Mrs. J. H. Forrester who was recently appointed a Provincial Life Member of the Ontario Hospital Auxiliary. This honorable award was presented at the Annual Hospital Association Convention for the Ontario Hospital Auxiliary held recently in Toronto.



Mrs. Forrester has been very active in the Women's Hospital Auxiliary of the Belleville General Hospital. Not only is she a Charter member of this organization but she has been actively involved in the community work evolving around this group. She helped draft the original Constitution of May 1938 and served as President of the Belleville General Hospital Auxiliary 1940 - 1941 and again in 1953 and 1954. (While president of the Auxiliary, Mrs. Forrester was elected Alderman of Belleville.)

In 1858 she was instrumental in having a Private Bill passed in Provincial Legislature which granted the right to representation on the Board of Governors of the Belleville General Hospital.

Retired Teacher Reminisces At Her School's Re-Union

The floors come first to old-time teachers.

Those pesky, dark wooden floors with their all-prevailing odor of linseed oiled "school" not so many years ago.

So permanently etched on the brain were those floors that Miss Myrtle Peck, who began her teaching career in 1918, can't get over the change yet.

"The biggest change in the educational system," she vowed Wednesday evening at Queen Victoria's school reunion, "is the floors. They were always so dark. Now they are so light — it brightens things up so much."

Several of Miss Peck's former students also remarked on the change — gone is the oily scent — schools smell different now.

Miss Peck, one of the centrepieces of Queen Victoria School's 50th anniversary celebrations Wednesday night, taught at the school for 32 years.

We lost a lot when teachers started to be moved around," she said. "We used to know our children and their families, their strengths and their weaknesses. And there was loyalty among the staff."

Miss Grace Tucker preceded Miss Peck by one year. She began teaching primary grades at Queen Vic in 1917 and continued until 1954.

"Once or twice in the early years they experimented with allowing a teacher to take a class from grade one through to grade three," she recalled. "It was good, because you built on your own work, year by year. Of course, if you had a good class you were very happy, but if you had a poor class you were miserable."

Both teachers thought the schools had swung too far toward freedom for the individual.

"The pendulum will have to come back a bit," said Miss Peck.

Good manners she saw as the chief casualty. "But maybe it's the home," she commented.

Some Stay on "Cloud 9"

By DORIS CLARK

How do you stay on Cloud 9?

A young couple sits opposite each other in a restaurant sipping coffee, gazing into each other's eyes.

"Just two weeks and three days now," he smiles. And she smiles back. The wonder of their love, the thought of its early consummation, has them in its grip. They are on Cloud Nine.

Each feels the other to be a perfect person, the grandest person in the world.

The trick is to know how to stay on Cloud Nine for the next 50 years. Because none of us are perfect; and during these first months of actually living together, eating breakfast together, thinking and working together, they are going to hit some rough spots.

If they are wise, if they are mature, if they love enough and unselfishly enough, they will make it.

Dear Doris: In your column you dealt with a letter from a young wife whose husband was so preoccupied with outside interests that he failed to give her any time for joint social activities.

You hit her (among other things) that "when the babies start to come" things might be better. Have you any idea how this sentence sounds? It reminds me of the egg-laying activities of certain insects.

In this day and age there is no reason for people to have babies inevitably. Not is there any reason to believe that children strengthen a weak marriage. And in this overcrowded world is there any room for such a statement?

You of all people should know the misery that results from people having more children then they can support. They are the deserted wives with six children and under notice of eviction. They are the husbands who can't find work. And the babies come — and come.

I am no women's libber. I am nearly 65 years old and I have for years been interested in and concerned about what is happening to the social structure of the world — my world. — Concerned and Elderly.

Dear Concerned: If I gave the impression that babies should be used to strengthen a weak marriage I hasten to say that was not my idea. Nor do I reduce the human race to the status of insects by considering babies inevitable in marriage.

I bet the letter from "Lonely Though Married", in its unredressed form, that babies me that there existed between these two a deep regard. And several have actually gadding husband turn into a willing stay-at-home father, once he discovered how fulfilling it was.

It is great folly for any married couple to use the baby - manufacturing technique in the hope of saving a weak marriage. Or any other form of forceful expression of opinion.

Dear Doris: Can venereal and other diseases be transmitted through blood transfusions? I'm scheduled for surgery very soon and the thought of a blood transfusion disturbs me.

Don't they check the blood donated for things like this? I was told by a friend they did not. I'm too embarrassed to speak to my doctor about this — so would you please answer me through the paper soon. — Troubled.

Dear Troubled: Elementary my dear Watson. Calm y u fears. A blood donor clinic would not think of receiving gifts of blood without first taking samples from the giver and testing them for manifestations of any kind.

I am surprised that anyone in this day and age would make such a statement to you.

(Doris invites comments on correspondence, in care of this newspaper. If you read about a problem similar to the one you have solved, let's let's hear bout it.)

Elegance Back In Fashion

TORONTO (CP) — Elegance, they say, is back in fashion again, and Hardy Amies says if you weren't born with it, you might achieve it, with some effort. The tall, slender, elegant Englishman has been designing clothes for women and for men for almost 20 years. He was in Canada on one of his periodic visits to manufacturers licensed to produce his men's line.

He said in an interview: "Elegance is, in the first instance, a personal characteristic which the good Lord gives you or doesn't.

"Let's talk about people who feel they haven't got it. Poise and grace of movement can be achieved by everybody. If you seek help from clothes, the very best thing is appropriateness.

"The next thing to know is that clothes are made of cloth and that cloth looks at its best falling into its na ural folds. If you are fat, you can disguise it.

"The so-called return of elegance to women's clothes, which delights me, means a return to appreciation of fit.

"Men's tailored jackets, on the whole, have always looked better than women's jackets because the waistline has usually been easier, even in Canada.

"In an e le g a n t ly shaped jacket, you should be able to have it buttoned up and still be able to move around in it."

As, for specifics, Mr. Amies said a woman can be elegant in a cheap dress, but not if she's wearing cheap shoes or carrying an inexpensive handbag.

He said a hat with a short dress is not elegant.

"Even if you're wearing a well - proportioned short direct dress or skirt, the hat puts the costume out of balance.

"Are people still wearing miniskirts? If you want to think how silly a miniskirt looks, just think of someone pushing a pram in a miniskirt.

His own designs now put hemlines "just caressing" the knee, and skirts have a lot of movement, a lot of pleats.

As for men, his line is still long and slender.

Ann Landers

Dancing Causes a Fight?

Dear Ann Landers: Will you please settle something that has caused more fights than I care to count? It's about dancing. My wife and I used to enjoy going to dances together but we have given it up because we always end up in a fight. She claims I am out of my mind. I say she is out of here.

When I dance with a woman I get like she is my sister. When I dance with my wife I act like we are married. I expect her to reserve the slow stuff for me. I think it is cheap for a married woman to dance with other men in any of the following ways:

(a) Cheek-to-cheek
(b) Breast-to-chest
(c) Belly-to-belly
(d) Knee-to-knee

I also believe it is up to the woman to set the rules. Most guys will go along with what they can. How about it? — Fighting in Houston

Dear Houston: Since you obviously consider dancing a vertical expression of a horizontal idea, it's no wonder you and your wife are fighting about it. I see nothing evil about dancing cheek-to-cheek, breast-to-chest or belly-to-belly. That knee-to-knee business however, is new to me. It must be the neatest trick of the year—and quite a few things I learn from my readers!)

Dear Ann Landers: The young executive of today is ambitious, ruthless, tension-charged and eager for success. He's also in a hurry.

If we older men were as outdated, dim witted, and short changed as he seems to think, there would be no organization for him to work for. The fact is that the business is attractive enough for him to want to come into it should vacan something.

I have seen young dynamos in senior organizations and ignore experienced men whose wisdom and experience could be invaluable. They pass for the young doctor who joins older physicians in an established practice. At the Wharton School of Commerce graduate who thinks he's learned everything there is to know, and the Harvard Law School graduate who is impatient with what's in the books but has a lot to learn about people.

We older men realize the world has changed, but that some things never change—for example, the net worth of respect for age and experience, compassion, and the ability to listen.—Memphis Philosopher

Dear Phil: There is a great deal to what you say and I thank you for saying it so well. (Are you listening, students?)

Dear Ann Landers: Should a wife give up her seat in the car, next to her husband who is driving, for a woman who is the same age or younger? I wouldn't mind giving up my seat for an older person, or for a guy who might want to talk to my husband about sports or something even if it meant sitting in the back alone. But what about a wife sitting in the back with one of the children because her girl friend planked herself in the front?—Sitting Not So Pretty

Dear Not So: Obviously you considered this an act of aggression. Some women would not have minded but since you said you should have suggested to your girl friend that she junk herself in the back.

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOHN CONWELL

Does an allowance teach thrift?

IT could, but the lesson is often lost in these days of changing values and customs. Parents like to start teaching their children the advantages of thrift by giving them an allowance. But in too many cases, the children have borrowed on their allowance at all, it seems, the children have grandchildren of their own because so much that they will have grandchildren of their own before they can catch up—something like their parents who have their own problems with long-term borrowing.

Can determination save a marriage?

YES, if a husband and wife are determined to make sure love will have a chance to express itself and grow as their marriage rolls along. If a man, however, lets an iron-willed resolution to make his marriage succeed "no matter what" substitute for love and affection then the marriage might be in trouble. He might be more concerned about his public image as a husband than he is about what his wife thinks of him as a person.

Should a host coax a 'wet blanket'?

NO. If a glum guest can't get into the spirit of the social gathering, the worst thing the host or hostess can do is try to coax him into enjoying himself. The guest will find he is now tense over the fate of others to make him feel at ease. If the host, hostess and other guests will just accept the "tongue-tied" individual, he might just "flow" along with the social activities and find his tension has released its grip.

News Roundup

CP Rail Offers To Move Garbage

TORONTO (CP) — A public hearing will be held into an offer by CP Rail to haul 400,000 tons of Metropolitan Toronto garbage to 2,000 acres of rural dumps, Metro works commissioner Ross Clark said Thursday.

Mr. Clark said CP Rail has preliminary provincial approval to haul one-quarter of the city's domestic and industrial waste, but operational details including shipping and landfill methods will be reviewed by a provincial environmental board.

The commissioner said he expects the rail company will consult municipalities where the railway-owned landfill sites are located. Mr. Clark refused to disclose location of the sites.

Metro Council will discuss first stage of a 15-year contract with CP Rail at its Nov. 14 meeting. The initial contract would be for five years and the company would be paid $6.65 a ton.

Earlier Thursday, James Auld, Ontario's environment minister, said the area from Oshawa to Niagara Falls may some day have to ship its garbage to northern disposal sites.

He said garbage disposal in Toronto is a serious problem and "all hell will break loose" when a township is designated to receive 1,500 tons of garbage a day from the city.

Mr. Auld said townships involved will be allowed to appeal to the government through a hearing before an environment board.

The decision to transport refuse out of the city rests on the difficulty in finding suitable landfill sites within the city and ordered cleanups of incinerators which are used to burn some refuse.

Strangled Man

L'ORIGNAL, Ont. (CP) — A 27-year-old Montreal woman was sentenced Thursday to six years in prison for her part in the strangling of her bachelor uncle.

Lise Parent pleaded guilty to manslaughter in court two weeks ago. She had originally been charged with non-capital murder.

Five Charged

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice Thomas Zuber said Thursday are application by Dare Foods Ltd. to have five strikers at its Kitchener, Ont., plant jailed for contempt of court raises a serious issue.

Exchange Views

OTTAWA (CP) — The leader of a delegation of Chinese scientists says the group's visit to Canada marks the start of "very good co-operation" between scientists in the two countries.

Pei Shih-chang, director of the Institute of biophysics in the Academy of Sciences of China, told a news conference Thursday: "Canadians will have very much to offer" in increased cooperation.

Review Asked

SUDBURY (CP) — Lawyer Elmer Sopha has asked Attorney-General Dalton Bales to "review the conduct" of Assistant Crown Attorney Michael Allen during a provincial court case here this week.

Dudley Morgan, Mr. Sopha's client, was convicted of obstructing police and fined $50 but two other charges were dropped.

Morgan said he wanted to be tried on the two dropped charges so he could testify as to the conduct of police officer Morris Belanger.

"I would ask you to instruct the Crown attorney at Sudbury that charges should be proceeded with if there is a strong insistence on the part of the accused," Mr. Sopha said in a letter to Mr. Bales that was released Thursday.

Cut Welfare

FREDERICTON (CP) — Sweeping changes in New Brunswick welfare regulations are to come into effect almost immediately, Social Services Minister Brenda Robertson announced Thursday.

Mrs. Robertson said the changes, designed to cut down on abuses, will make it virtually impossible for young people to get assistance. Those between the ages of 16 and 21 to receive assistance will be the mentally or physically handicapped, with few exceptions.

Aided by Whites

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The first black elected to Congress from Georgia in more than 100 years says he owes his victory to a coalition of moderate whites and blacks and a city bent on breaking away from its "racist past."

"I think if blacks take the next two to four years to build this kind of coalition, they will be able to pull this off anywhere, North or South," said Rev. Andrew Young, a former aide to the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Workers' Role

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — At its present stage of development, the European Common Market is free to place more emphasis on one of its original goals-the creation of a "European worker" who can cross borders almost at will and play a role in control of companies.

This lesser-known aspect of Market activity-its social and labor policy-was highlighted recently by the Market commission in proposals for workers participation in running major companies.

The proposals were first set out in 1970 as part of a draft proposal for a basic statute for limited companies in the Market but little was done about them at the time.

While limited worker participation already exists in West Germany and Holland, the proposals will cause most stir in Italy and the three entrant countries-Britain, Ireland and Denmark-where there is no such thing.

Office Damaged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Occupying Indians caused more than $20,000 damage to the office of the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA), United States government officials said Thursday. They estimated that employees will not be able to return to work until at least a week from today.

Woman Says Men Slaves

LONDON (AP) — The American male is the most oppressed man in the Western world, says the author of a book that also argues men are really slaves and women their exploiters.

Esther Vilar, 37, author of The Manipulated Man, also thinks that women are stupid and getting more so every day; that men are brilliant but locked into stultifying jobs; that housework is a pleasure and men are deprived of it and that all of this stems from mothers who condition their children into manipulative and slave roles.

The book was originally published in West Germany where it made the best-seller list before it was launched in other countries.

Lawyer to Contest Alderman's Seat

A young Belleville lawyer is among the latest of the growing number of candidates city council election.

Running for the first time is George K. Murray, 38.

Among issues that concern him, says Mr. Murray, are traffic and a "lack of foresight and planning" of civic projects.

GEORGE MURRAY

Speed limits in subdivision areas without sidewalks must be reduced to protect children, said Mr. Murray.

Once Dundas St. is widened to four lanes through the Ieeftph of the city it would become a necessity if action is not taken to reduce — and enforce — speed limits down to 25 miles an hour.

The status of crosswalks must be immediately clarified and traffic rules implemented to protect pedestrian crossings.

Toronto waited too long. Belleville now has a chance to implement a sound cross walk policy before the city becomes too big," he said.

Dundas St. will be a prime example of poor project planning, Mr. Murray said.

"I'm informed that, despite the fact a building boom in the west end is expected in the near future, adequate sewer facilities have not been extended to the west city limits while Highway 2 is considered adequate.

"This will necessitate ripping up the highway at a great deal more cost than had the city used enough foresight to install them now."

Contractor A Candidate

TRENTON (Staff) — Trenton independent. contractor Frank Meyers, 44, of RR 5, Trenton, has emerged as a candidate for council. Born in Sidney Township, the Trenton business property owner wants to see a cut - back in town spending, as well as taxes.

He said he believes the town has been spending money on certain local improvements at too fast a pace, making it necessary for steadily climbing tax rates. "I think we should slow down a little bit so the taxpayer isn't burdened, at least until we pay off a few of those debts."

Charles Hilton, chairman of the Trenton Public Utilities Commission, until Thursday had not announced his intentions to run for reelection to the PUC, although there has been little doubt that he would.

Also previously unannounced were Austin Brown, a former council, both of whom have qualified to seek re-elec- tion as trustees on the Hastings and Prince - Edward Councillor George Greer, Board.

Of the qualifiers, John Forbes, who is seeking re-election to a separate school board representative on the Hastings County School Board, and councilors are incumbent were the only ones to previously announce their intentions.

Councillor Paul Tripp, in making his announcement to seek re-election, also qualified Thursday.

River Route No Escape

Gerald Francis Smith, 16, of 288 Coleman Street was quickly hauled out of the cold rapid current by Constable Denny White.

He and two others, Bradley John Parks, 16, also of 288 Coleman Street, and Robert Kenneth Green, 23, of 245 Coleman, were booted by White and Constable Tom Burkitt in the vicinity of Dixie Lee Fried Chicken at 2:45 a.m. Police allege they were attempting to force a door.

The three have been charged with attempted break and enter.

3 Candidates Certified

PICTON (Staff) — Town clerk Andrew Jarvis said today three persons to date have been certified as candidates for Picton town council.

The candidates who have stated they will seek seats as councillors are incumbent Bessie Ward, Ross Cronkwright, and newcomer Russell Alexander, a retired service station operator.

Mr. Cronkwright earlier said he might make a bid for the office of reeve or deputy reeve. No nominations for mayor, reeve or deputy reeve yet have been certified. Nominations opened at the clerk's office this morning and will close Nov. 13.

Florist Seeks PUC Seat

PICTON (Staff) — Picton florist Christopher Lockyer has declared he will seek office on the public utilities commission. Also making a bid for the three-man commission are incumbent chairman Gordon Nourse and incumbent commissioner David Hickman. The third seat presently is filled by Mayor Margaret Ackerman.

Canadian Weekend

Plays Finish Tonight

TRENTON (Staff) — Tonight is the last night to catch Trenton High School's Theatre 212 presentation of Just For the Hellsvut.

The series of one act plays, mixed with gags, improvisations and vaudeville routines, drew larger than usual crowds to the school last night.

Theatre arts teacher Don Burness was very pleased with the production. "These kids really worked hard," he said, moments before the show began. "But I think they've a special vote of thanks to the backstage crew. With the small amount of equipment they had to work with, it took as much imagination for their effort as for those on stage."

The performance last night raised $50 which will go toward auditorium theatre equipment as will additional funds from tonight's box office.

The five one-act comedies were: George S. Kaufman's The Still Alarm, a tale of two men who kept their dignity and cool during a hotel fire and asserted mass hysteria; Elaine May's Not Enough Rope, which depicts the predicaments of a girl trying to commit suicide despite apartment house interruptions; M. F. Simpson's The Resounding Tinkle, a way-out comedy con glomerating elephants and gum boots with eagles parachuting from the sky; Edward (Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf) Albee's The Sandbox, portraying the difficulties of a family trying to ditch their grandmother on a seashore; and last, but not least, a slightly twisted version of Noah and the Ark.

Local Group Cuts Record

A Quinte-area group of young rock musicians has cut its own record.

The disc features the Band Warehouse, in Reason for Living and Anything at All.

The group, formed about a year ago of musicians from 17 to 22 years, plays at Queen's University and high school dances.

John Bonn Candidate

TRENTON (Staff) — The second non-council member to declare his candidacy for Trenton council in the Dec. 4 elections is Dr. John M. Bonn, 3.31, 28, one of the youngest men in the electoral race.

One major issue Dr. Bonn would like to see eliminated in Trenton is the "emphasis on the east-side, west-side rivalry that threatens to become a major disruptive force in our town's efforts to forge ahead."

Married, with three children, he lives at 189 Victoria Ave., Trenton. A graduate of QUEEN'S University, Class of 1967, he serves as vice - president of Trenton Memorial Hospital's medical staff, is a member of the hospital's board of directors, district secretary of the Ontario Medical Association and a director of the Trenton Country Club.

More Ballots Spoiled

TRENTON (Staff) — An increase by 0.5 per cent has been recorded in the number of spoiled ballots cast for the Dec. 10 elections, Clerk Fred Dowdell - Hastings riding returning officer Mrs. Grace Radcliffe disclosed on Thursday.

A total of 2,950 spoiled ballots were recorded, as against 2,930 more than 1968 election.

She says much of the problem occurred because of new ballots, as was predicted before the election. In a majority of cases, voters marked ballots in other positions than the special circles allocated.

Positions of the three candidates changed, but none noticeably: Re - elected MP George Hees, Conservative, 19,787 official votes, down from 19,818 in preliminary counts; George Cunningham, Liberal, 10,388, up from 10,275; and Richard Lunn, NDP, 3,995 votes, up from 3,930.

Mrs. Radcliffe says most of the increase in the count occurred because of a 100-vote mistake from one poll.

As well, she said even with 0.5 per cent votes this year, only 73 per cent of eligible voters voted, as against 82 per cent in 1968.

Delay in the official count announced because of one ballot box being sent to the wrong returning officer.

The 33,367 good ballots and 2,500 spoiled ones will be kept at the 200 Dundas Street West returning office for ship- ment to Ottawa custody and of the chief electoral officer.

Wel-l-l, I Never!

Mohawks Protest Ads

A delegation of 15 Indian students from Moira Secondary School and from the retraining division of Loyalist College are in Kingston this afternoon picketing Limestone City radio station CKWS for what they claim is an affront to their character.

The students from the Mohawk Indian reserve at Deseronto, headed by Brant Joseph Maracle, are objecting to recent advertisements sponsored by a Gananoque auto dealer and featuring Ethnic humor.

Mr. Maracle claims the advertising specials with reference to the "tossed" rangers and squaws are "prejudicial, slanderous and discriminatory" to the Indian race and are a "further attempt to rob us of our pride and dignity."

He asserts that Indians are tired of having to bear the brunt of ethnic jokes.

The demonstration outside the Kingston radio station was scheduled for 1 p.m. Mr. Maracle, an Indian author and lecturer, said the picketing would continue until the station agreed to discontinue the objectionable advertising specials.

German System Differs

Belleville's German visitors come from a distinctly different environment — politically as well as geographically.

The Oberburgermeister (Lord Mayor of Lahr,) for instance, serves an eight-year term. If re-elected, he can run city council for another 12 years.

Raisherren (aldermen) are the nominees of the local community's major political parties. Four are represented on this exchange.

And whereas Belleville, council is made up of 10 aldermen, Lahr's has 40, each elected for six years.

"We have lots of talk," says Raisherr Walter Dettling, himself a socialist, "but when it comes to the community of Lahr, the person counts more than the party."

Herr Dettler is one of eight civic officials visiting the Quinte area from Belleville's German twin city.

Heading the delegation — which arrived at CFB Trenton last night — is Oberburgermeister Dr. Philipp Brucker, now his second term. He is accompanied by his daughter, Cornelia, four Raisherren, the city manager and a high school principal.

With a population of 37,000 civilians, Lahr has approximately one representative for every 900 citizens. That figure contrasts with Belleville which has one alderman for every 2,500 persons.

Despite the large number of politicians, each Raisherr is required to sit on two or three civic committees, as aldermen do in Belleville. The result is that "some officials are on hand to discuss welfare, traffic and other local concerns than is generally the rule in Belleville committees.

The city itself, situated in the Black Forest, in southwestern Germany, dates to the second century A.D. when a Roman settlement was first established.

The modern community has its origins in the 1200s, as the deed to the monied Geroldeck castle testifies.

Through the years, Lahr was an important trading centre lying close to the French border, but since the last century industry has taken over and the prospect of housing a large FIAT manufacturing plant in the near future promises to accelerate the city's boom.

On January 1 of this year, Lahr annexed seven surrounding municipalities, giving it more room to grow and a larger sphere of influence.

The number of Canadians now in the city totals 18,000. The visitors have no voting rights but have certainly contributed largely to the prosperity of the community.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1972

Increases Outnumber Decreases in Proposal

Basic residence telephone rates in the Belleville exchange would go up five cents a month in 1973 and seven a month in 1974 if the Canadian Transport Commission approves increases asked by Bell Canada today.

The proposed rate increases were included in separate applications one to take effect in 1973 and the other in 1974.

In addition to basic rate increases, the 1973 application asks increases in service charges, long distance rates and for extensions, while the 1974 application also calls for an increased pay phone rate and a new 25 - cent charge for some calls to directory assistance.

E. G. Thompson, Bell manager in this area, said the increases allowed Bell last May are being largely offset by increased operating costs because of inflation.

The Bell application asks for an increase the present 111 new residence phone installation charge in two stages to $22 in 1974.

Increases proposed for 1973 for long distance would apply only to the initial charge period and not on calls within Bell territory; two cents for customer dialed; five cents for operator assisted station to station and 10 cents for person-to-person calls.

Pay phone rates for local calls which haven't changed in 20 years, would double to 20 cents over a 15-month conversion period beginning in 1974.

Bell is also asking for approval of a five year plan to go into effect in 1974, to make four-party service the new standard in rural areas.

Increase in 1974 for residence customers, ranging from 95 cents to $1.65 a month would depend on the number of telephones in the exchange local calling area.

But the news is not all bad. Beginning Jan. 1, 1974 Bell intends to eliminate regular monthly charges for some special equipment used by people with speech and hearing difficulties.

The charges, which currently range from 30 cents to $2.15 a month, refer to volume control sets used by the hard-of-hearing.

Under the Bell proposal customers using special equipment would no longer pay the recurring monthly charge. New customers would pay the regular installation charge, plus a one-time $5 charge to offset some of the initial costs involved in providing a special service.

Summer Courses Prove Popular

Loyalist College's summer school program in Bancroft emerged successfully from its trial run this summer and is on the way to becoming an annual event.

Called Holiday Arts 72, it attracted a total number of summer residents and tourists. About 224 of the 254 registered were summer visitors.

"This re-emphasizes the fact that successful operations in Bancroft must depend on the large summer population rather than the limited number of permanent residents," said C. Bastedo, director of extension for the college.

The college used the technical wing of Centre Hastings High School and employed 12 instructors. Courses offered were: horsemanship, basic climbed techniques, c e r a m i c s, ceramics, metal jewelry, geology, textiles, art, plastic casting, candlemaking, greenware and glazing.

The staff of the Holiday Arts program operated a large craft marquee during the Bancroft Rock Hound Gemboree Aug. 1 to 5.

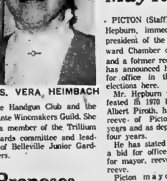
Cost of the summer operation at Bancroft was $16,000. Total income, including provincial grants and fees came to $10,681, leaving a deficit of $5,319.

Vera Heimbach In Council Race

Mrs. Vera Heimbach is offering herself for election as an alderman in the Belleville civic election.

She is running for public office because she says people are not adequately represented at the present time.

"I mean the middle-class wage-earners, those whose interests centre on home, church and family," she said. "They are receiving cursory treatment and I think it's time every man and desire to represent them."



Mrs. Heimbach is opposed to piecemeal rezoning and in discriminate introduction of highrises into residential areas.

"By the time the planning board comes through with an official plan there won't be anything left to plan," she says.

Mrs. Heimbach came, to Belleville six years ago from Winnipeg, with her husband and three children.

A graduate of the University of Manitoba in political science, she has several years experience in social work with Family Services and has also had experience in large and small family - owned businesses.

Since coming to Belleville she has been active in church and community work with the Belleville Horticultural Society, the Lower Trent Valley Conservation Area, the Belleville Handgun Club and the Quinte Winemakers Guild. She is a member of the Trillium Foundation committee and leader of Belleville Junior Gardeners.

MRS. VERA HEIMBACH

Hepburn May Run

PICTON (Staff) — Bernard Hepburn, immediate past president of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce and a former reeve of Picton has announced he may run for office in the upcoming elections here.

Mr. Hepburn who was defeated in 1970 by newcomer Albert Pirodo, had served as reeve of Picton for eight years and as deputy reeve for four years.

He has stated if he makes a bid for office he will run for mayor, reeve or deputy reeve.

Picton mayor Margaret Ackerman has announced she will seek re-election and deputy reeve James Bird has declared he will run again for office but may seek the reeveship. Reeve Albert Pirodo is reportedly interested in the mayoralty race but may again run for reeve.

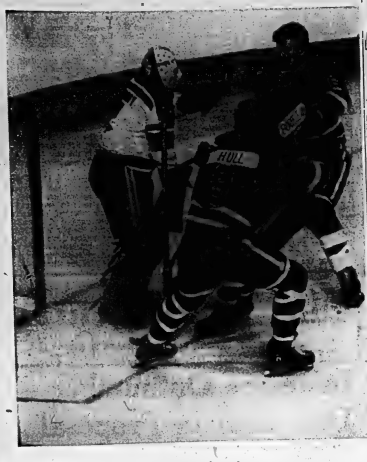
If deputy reeve James Bird seeks higher office, councillor Ross Cronkwright expects to make a bid for the position of deputy reeve.

Former Picton mayor H. J. McFaland said he has considered running for mayor and will do so if he feels he has the confidence of electors. It is rumored his nomination papers already are being circulated for signature in Picton.

Picton news editor Jack Evans has declared he will run for a seat as councillor.

Bell Canada Proposes Information Charge

Bell Canada is out to discourage calls for directory assistance for numbers that are already listed in the telephone book.



And to make the discouragement as pointed as possible, Bell is aiming at the pocketbook with a proposed charge of 25 cents on calls to directory assistance for each number listed in the directory.

The company has applied to the Canadian Transport Commission for permission to make the charge.

Bell says the proposal associates the charge with the cost of providing directory assistance.

More than 680,000 calls a day were placed to directory assistance operators in 1971 and at least 70 per cent of them were for numbers already listed in directories. And further, studies indicate a minority of customers, about 10 per cent make over half of all DA calls.

Bell Canada says the 25-cent charge would discourage indiscriminate use of DA service and at the same time give DA operators more time to handle calls from people who really need help.

No Goal for Hull -- Yet

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bobby Hull is still looking for his first goal in the World Hockey Association, but there are few in the new professional hockey league who doubt it will be long in coming.

After all the Golden Jet, who terrorized goalies in the National Hockey League with his booming slapshots, has only played two games in the WHA, and in each he has picked up an assist.

His second assist came Thursday night when Hull's Winnipeg Jets downed Ottawa Nationals 4-1 before 5,041 fans in Ottawa. The win moved the Jets into a three-way tie for first place in the Western Division with Los Angeles Sharks and Alberta Oilers, who dumped the Sharks 7-3 in Edmonton in the only other scheduled game.

The 33-year-old Hull, who signed this year as player-coach of the Jets, played his first game Wednesday night after a ruling by a U.S. district court judge in Philadelphia called for a preliminary injunction preventing the NHL from enforcing its controversial reserve clause.

The Jets got goals Thursday night from Larry Hornung, Norm Beaudin, Steve Cuddie and Dunc Rousseau. Beaudin's goal at 10:45 of the second period was set up by Hull and it broke a 1-1 tie. Bob Leduc got Ottawa's only goal.

Another former NHLer paced the Oilers to their win over the Sharks before 2,800 fans in Edmonton. Jim Harrison, a centre with Toronto Maple Leafs, scored two goals and assisted on two others as the close checking Oilers blunted the Sharks' attack.

The Sharks opened the scoring at 0:50 of the first period, but Harrison and the Oilers controlled play after that.

Bruins Bury Detroit

If there is any reason for Boston Bruins' apparent slow start this season in the National Hockey League, it is not a lack of scoring punch.

The Bruins, defending Stanley Cup champions, have been victims of sloppy defensive play all season, due mainly to the defection of some key players to the rival World Hockey Association and the absence of Bobby Orr, still recovering after a knee operation.

But there has never been anything wrong with their scoring and they demonstrated this again Thursday night by overpowering Detroit Red Wings 8-3 in one of three NHL games scheduled.

In other games, Philadelphia Flyers outlasted Chicago Black Hawks 5-3 and Buffalo Sabres and California Golden Seals played to a 2-2 tie.

Despite Boston's fourth place in the NHL's East, the Bruins are the highest-scoring team in their division—in fact, in the whole league.

In 15 games they have scored 66 goals, six more than either Montreal Canadiens, first in the East, or Los Angeles Kings, first in the West.

But their defensive record has been awful. They have given up 57 goals, second worst in the league and only three less than New York Islanders, one of the two expansion teams in the NHL this season.

The loss of Gerry Cheevers, their top goalie, and forwards like Derek Sanderson and John McKenzie to the WHA, have hurt the Bruins, and the absence of Orr's defensive skills is showing in the standings.

Phil Esposito led the way Thursday night, scoring two goals and assisting on three others against Red Wings.

The goals by Esposito, the NHL's defending scoring champion, were his ninth and 10th of the season. His ninth goal, a backhander less than two minutes in to the opening period, appeared to ignite the Bruins.

Mike Walton scored on a long shot a few seconds later and Esposito scored on a power play to give the Bruins a 3-0 lead before five minutes of the first period.

Ken Hodge, playing on a line with Esposito, had five assists.

The Red Wings, who now have a record of seven wins, five losses and one tie after winning their first six games, got goals from Mickey Redmond, Guy Charron and Len Fontaine.

Philadelphia scored three times in the first eight minutes of play and held on for their win over the Black Hawks. Centre Rick MacLeish scored three goals for the Flyers, the final one pulling the game out of danger after the Black Hawks had cut the Philadelphia lead to 3-2.

MacLeish scored his first two goals in the first period and Bill Clement made it 3-0 for the Flyers before the Hawks cut the margin to 3-1 on Jim Pappin's goal at 18:02 of the first period.

Oaks Awaken at Wrong Time

Autumn is a peculiar time of year for oaks to be coming alive, but that's the problem that the Belleville Quintes will face tonight.

Oakville Oaks started out the season miserably, but have come to life in recent weeks to fashion a 3-7 mark in the OHA Senior A league. "They were a better club last year than their record showed," said Lionel Bolly of the Quintes. "I'd rather have faced them at the start of this season than right now. They have been doing pretty well recently."

Despite the fact that Oakville has been resurging, there will be a couple of factors in the Quintes favor tonight. One is that the Oaks have been a perennially poor road team. Conversely, the Quintes have lost only one home game (9-6 to Galt) enroute to fashioning a 4-5 record this season.

A number of individual battles are evident for tonight's contest. Hank Monteith of the Oaks is currently in second place in the scoring statistics while teammate Dave Nicholson is fourth with 19 points. Nicholson has 10 goals and nine assists. Monteith has 7 goals and 11 assists.

Another battle will be between Oakville goalie Ken Wilson and Quinte netminder Ron Jury. Wilson has a 4.00 goals against average while Jury has a 4.20 mark.

Tickets for the game are on sale for the first time at the Quinte Arena tonight from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Game time is 8:30 p.m.

RON JURY

Nicholishen, a veteran OHA performer with Orillia before joining Oakville late last season, has collected six goals and 11 helpers. O'Donnell (five goals, 12 assists) and Godson (4-13), along with Peter Kennedy of the Kingston Aces, also have 17 points.

Another individual duel is a goal where Ron Jury of the Quintes and Oakville's Claude Vallieres spot similar statistics. Jury has allowed 25 goals in five games for a 5.00 average. His mark places him seventh among Senior A netminders, just behind Taillefer's 4.20 mark.

Tickets for the January 5th meeting between Belleville and a touring Russian team will be on sale for the first time at tonight's 9 p.m. contest.

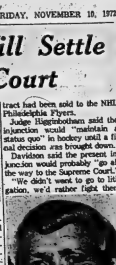
WHA Will Settle Out of Court

OTTAWA (CP) — The World Hockey Association said Thursday it is willing to settle differences with the National Hockey League out of court.

But it warned that if the NHL insists on continuing court action to preserve its controversial reserve clause, the WHA will seek to invalidate all NHL contracts.

WHA president Gerry Davidson made the offer and issued the warning at a news conference here in wake of an injunction granted by a Philadelphia district judge preventing enforcement of the clause.



The clause, which ties a player to his team for life unless traded, sold or released, has held former NHL players like Bobby Hull from playing in the WHA.

Philadelphia Judge A. Le Higginbotham issued the injunction on the application of Johnny MacKenzie, who joined Philadelphia Flyers from Boston Bruins. MacKenzie's contract has been sold to the NHL Philadelphia Flyers.

Judge Higginbotham said the injunction would "maintain a status quo" in hockey until a final decision was brought down.

Davidson said the present injunction would probably "go all the way to the Supreme Court."

"We don't want to go to litigation, we'd rather fight them

JOHN MacKENZIE

(NHL) on the ice. It would be to our advantage to drop litigation, win, lose or draw," he said.

Asked about the possibility of a common draft between the WHA and the NHL, Davidson said that his league "would rather shoot for all the players."

Bobby Hull, whose way to play with the WHA Winnipeg Jets was cleared by the U.S. injunction, said he was excited with the court's decision. It would enable him and other players to make the WHA comparable to the NHL.

Petes Sink Sudbury

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Peterborough Petes regained second place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series by beating Sudbury Wolves 7-3 Thursday night.

The game featured a bench clearing brawl in the third period with 10 minutes in penalties being called—56 for each side. Referee Tom Browning handed out four game misconducts to each team.

The fight began with a verbal exchange between Sudbury's Greg Neeld and Peterborough's Colin Campbell. They started fighting and both benches cleared. It was 15 minutes before order was restained.

The Petes held a 3-1 lead after the first period and led 4-2 after two. Sudbury managed only 10 shots on goal in the last two periods.

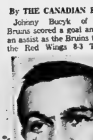
It was the only contest of the night in the series. Tonight, St. Catharines visits Ottawa, the Wolves meet the Rangers in Kitchener and London entertains the Petes.

Bruins Improving

HALIFAX (CP) — Nova Scotia Voyageurs skated away with a 5-2 win over Boston Braves in American Hockey League action here Thursday night, moving into a first-place tie with Providence Reds.

Both have 17 points, while Boston, with 16 points, holds second place in the Eastern Division of the league.

About 2,798 fans watched Nova Scotia team mates Rodrigue Rota and Yvon Lambert score two goals each while Dave Gardner netted the fifth goal for the Voyageur victory.



Ron Andersen and Mike Bloom scored one each for Boston, the team Nova Scotia beat last season in the American Hockey League's Calder Cup.

Nova Scotia outshot Boston 40 to 25 in the game, which saw referees hand out seven penalties, of which two were major for fighting.

Bucyk Among Leaders

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Johnny Bucyk of Boston Bruins scored a goal and added an assist as the Bruins trounced the Red Wings 8-3 Thursday night.

JOHN BUCYK

Bucyk now has eight goals and 16 assists to put him into second place in the National Hockey League scoring race.

Canadian Filly Considered

CHERRY HILL N.J. (AP) — Rarely has a two-year-old filly been considered for Horse-of-the-Year honors in the United States, but there have been exceptions.

La Prevoyante may be that exception. The sensational filly from Canada will seek her 12th straight victory Saturday at Garden State Park in the $190,-829 Gardenia Stakes.

John Starr, La Prevoyante's trainer, describes the horse as "doing everything so easily it scares you."

She never has been pressed, and Starr would like to see her seriously challenged, but not too much.

Starr has been among Canada's leading trainers during the last 20 years. He's had two fillies who were honored as Canadian Horse of the Year-Wonder Where and Fanfreluche— and a number of other Standouts.

The trainer says he never has required La Prevoyante to put herself out in morning workouts. The fastest he remembers her going other than in a race was a half-mile trial in a shade less than 0:48 before he brought her to the United States.

one behind Bucyk and two behind leader Gil Perreault of Buffalo Sabres, who managed to hang on to a slim one-point lead even though he was kept off the score sheet in Buffalo's scoreless tie wi h Californias Thursday night.

Cahill Fired From Argo Post

TORONTO (CP) — Three wins and 11 losses this season, That, briefly, was the reason Toronto Argonaut owner John Bassett gave Thursday for firing Leo Cahill, head coach of the Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference for the last five seasons.

Cahill, whose Argos dropped from Grey Cup finalists last year to a disappointing last place this season in the EFC, was acclaimed by his peers in the Canadian Football League as Coach of the Year in 1971.

But Cahill said Thursday he lost his job because Bassett felt "it would be a happier situation if the Argos had a new head coach."

"That was the only reason given," Cahill said after his dismissal, which came during a 90-minute meeting with Bassett.

"He said it was based on our 3-11 record. If that's all there is to it, he's 100-per-cent wrong."

Bassett said that apart from closing The Telegram, a newspaper he formerly owned and which ceased publication last year, firing Cahill was "the hardest job I had to do."

"Cahill is my kind of man," Bassett said. "I have a great deal of admiration and respect for him. I don't know enough about football to evaluate his coaching ability and I was judging him solely on his three wins

"I may be proved totally wrong in firing Leo. If I'm right, I'll look like a genius."

Cahill's firing drew comment from at least one CFL coach. Jack Gotta of Ottawa Rough Riders, said:

"He was a hell of a coach, . . . a great competitor . . . and he filled the ballparks. . . . What more did they want?

"It makes you wonder what the hell you are doing in a racket like this."

Cahill, 44, must have been thinking the same thing.

"It's like being in war," he said hours after his firing. "I knew I was gone last week but you find it hard to believe you will be fired. I still don't believe it. Maybe it will come to me in the middle of the night."

Bassett said the decision to fire Cahill was his as chairman of the board of the Argonaut Football Club.

"I've read a lot of nonsense about the four young men, Mike Jon Cohen, Craig Eaton, Michael Burns and young Len Lumbers having a hand in this. That's absolute nonsense, I asked my son about it. He said they had not discussed it."

There also were reports of friction between Cahill and John Barrow since Barrow's appointment as Argos' general manager in May, 1971. However, Bassett said that Barrow, a former standout defensive tackle with Hamilton Tiger-Cats, had nothing to do with Cahill's departure.

"Mr. Barrow was not consulted on this in any way," Bassett said. "I did not ask his advice or recommendation."

Bassett, assuming he will be criticized because of Cahill's popularity with the Toronto press said:

"I expect press reaction will be bad and that will cost me a lot of of sleep—about five minutes, perhaps."

'It Makes You Wonder': Gotta Salutes Cahill

OTTAWA (CP) — Coach Jack Gotta took time off Thursday from preparations for Saturday's Eastern Football Conference semi-final with Montreal Alouettes to mourn the firing of Toronto Argo coach Leo Cahill.

"It makes you wonder what the hell you are doing in a racket like this," Gotta said after Riders went through an afternoon drill.

Gotta said Cahill was a personal friend and a fierce competitor. His teams were exciting and filled parks across the country.

"What more do they want?" he asked.

Gotta himself was on the hot seat last year. After finishing last in 1970, the Riders just managed to slip into the EFC semi-finals.

This year Riders won 11 of their 14 games and were rudged from first place because of their season record against Hamilton Tiger-Cats who were awarded top place.

Gotta is believed negotiating with Riders for a long contract since his three-year pact expires this year.

"He jokingly said, 'Jack, you're next year.' Gotta said when asked about his future plans.

Montreal linebacker Jerry Campbell was expressing confidence that Riders would get past Montreal Saturday and beat Ticats in the EFC finals.

"I play percentages," Campbell said. "There isn't a club in the Canadian Football League capable of knocking us in four straight games.

"Of course, I didn't think anyone could do it even three times. But Hamilton did and we've got the law of averages on our side if we can get into the conference finals."

Heavy rains this week ended abruptly Thursday and a plastic cover was lifted from the Lansdowne Park playing surface. It revealed a large patch of the field with no grass cover.

With rain forecast overnight Friday and perhaps on game day, it will be muddy going for Montreal's 5-2 power runners such as Moses Denson.

Because of a special Remembrance Day telecast Saturday, the opening kickoff will be 2:25 p.m. EST on the CBC network.

Mailmen Off Jobs Four Hours

TORONTO (CP) — Workers at the main Toronto post office were back on the job today after a four-hour wildcat walkout Thursday night to protest what they consider slow contract talks and poor working conditions.

About 200 men, employed in the traffic division where mail is shipped and received stayed off the job until their shift was over at midnight.

Those replacing them at the shift change were left with a backlog that "looked pretty grim," said Arnold Gould, national director of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW).

A post office supervisor said early today that the backlog was being cleared and it "won't be too bad" but "the early runs will be hit."

Trucks loaded with mail picked up from street letter boxes were lined up bumper-to-bumper when the walkout hit the cavernous warehouse.

Mr. Gould said in an interview that the walkout was not sanctioned by the union.

"We must have told them to go back to work more than 100 times," he said.

He said the workers were angry because they had not been kept up to date on union bargaining with the treasury board in Ottawa.

In addition to being "sick and tired" of delays in negotiations on a new contract, some of those who walked out complained about working conditions and overloaded mail bags they had to handle.

Mint Shut When Grant Withdrawn

TORONTO (CP) — Silver Shield Mines Inc. of Toronto has halted construction work at its silver refinery-mint development at Cobalt, Ont., and is reviewing the project's financing following cancellation Tuesday of a $726,000 development grant by the federal department of regional economic expansion (DREE).

Company president Norton Cooper said in a letter to shareholders he has instructed lawyers to "issue a writ and prosecute our claim against the government."

He indicated the mining operations would continue in Cobalt, but said that "mint facilities will now be located permanently in Toronto." The mint is operated under the corporate name of Jacques Cartier Mint Inc.

Mr. Cooper said it was only because of the DREE grants the company decided to build the silver refinery at Cobalt. Earlier feasibility studies recommended a Toronto location.

In Cobalt, Mayor W. J. Matthews said the DREE decision to rescind the grants was "a death blow to the community."

Snowmobile Fees Opposed

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP) — Snowmobiles used off the road in Northern Ontario should not be subject to registration fees the Ontario legislative committee on snowmobiles and all-terrain vehicles was told Thursday.

The committee heard a stream of complaints about the $10 annual licence fee levied this year on snowmobiles by the provincial government. Previously the fee was $4 for two years.

Don MacFarlane of the Porcupine Rod and Gun Club of Timmins suggested that snowmobilers who use their vehicles on public roads should pay registration as do car and motorcycle owners. Those who operate their vehicles in the bush should not, he said.

He did not say how it could be determined that an unlicensed snowmobile would not be used on the roads.

Jury

MONTREAL (CP) — Jury selection for the kidnap trial of Jacques Rose was completed Thursday and the trial was adjourned until Monday. It will proceed with 11 jurors instead of the usual 12 because a juror already sworn in was dismissed. Under recent Criminal Code amendments a trial can proceed with as few as 10 jurors. Rose, 25 is charged in the kidnapping of Pierre Laporte, Quebec Labor minister.

Canadian Film Has High Hopes

KLEINBURG, Ont. (CP) — Canadian film-makers have taken 361,000 gallons of water, added four Hollywood stars to swim in it, and hope the resulting movie will bring a flood of fans to the box office.

The Neptune Factor, a $1.5 million underwater adventure film which Nova Scotia-born Daniel Petrie begins shooting Monday, also features the most dazzling display of technology ever seen in this rural village north of Toronto—so far that matter, probably on any movie set anywhere in the country.

Co-produced by Toronto's Quadrant Films, The Neptune Factor is a mainly Canadian venture, with a $200,000 investment by the Canadian Film Development Corp., $50,000 from Famous Players, and some from private sources.

Toronto-born Gordon Stulberg, president of 20th Century-Fox, which invested $700,000, has informed his staff around the world that nothing short of "another 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" is the expected result.

FEATURES EARTHQUAKE

Actually, the movie is described as a futuristic drama, and it concerns a romance between a young marine biologist and an aquanaut, an earthquake in the ocean depths, and a specialized underwater rescue unit.

A lot of action involving Hollywood stars Walter Pidgeon, Yvette Mimeux, Ernest Borgnine and Ben Gazzara takes place in a 292,000-gallon sea tank erected on the parking lot of the arena in nearby Woodbridge.

While the stars flail around in the tank, they will be filmed by a special 35-man camera crew. Cameramen handling under - water equipment had to take a course in diving, part of which was behaviour written examination and a "free fall" in waters off Halifax.

Jack McAdam, a Toronto set designer with 10 years' experience at the CBC, has masterminded a bundle of electronic gadgets used in the movie, including a cassette TV set, a ship-to-shore communications network and an advanced chemical processing unit. He also produced detailed plans for mock-ups of an ocean lab and a mini-submarine.

The set alone cost $375,000.

The Kleinburg sound stage is almost filled with an assortment of technical marvels which include an authentic mock-up of an underwater habitat, a steel reproduction of a decompression chamber; reproductions of a mini-sub's interior and exterior, and a "ship's deck" fronting a garage laboratory complete with a pre-programmed computer and chemical-testing gear.

Mr. McAdam said the mini-sub exterior will be submerged in the pool at Woodbridge while cameras record the action through special two-inch glass imported from England.

"We built our own pool because we shot exterior scenes in Halifax and underwater sequences in Freeport in the Bahamas and we knew we couldn't match the color of the Freeport water with that in Halifax," McAdam said.

"We can match it if we control the water and give it special lighting when cameras are rolling."

Roughriders, Esks Evenly Matched

EDMONTON (CP) — If regular-season encounters are an indicator, there's a good possibility that Sunday's Western Football Conference sudden-death semi-final at Clarke Stadium will be a contest of skill and fair, decided in the final minutes of play.

Edmonton Eskimos and Saskatchewan Roughriders tangled three times during the 1972 campaign and in each case the margin of victory was two points. The clashes were marked by rough play and questionable time-keeping.

The Eskimos, who finished second in the WFC, won the first game 31-30, preventing the triumph by recovering a last-minute Saskatchewan fumble.

But they lost quarterback Bruce Lemmerman, who suffered a shoulder separation when he was hit by Bill Baker, Saskatchewan's six-foot, four-inch, 250-pound defensive end. To that point Lemmerman had won seven straight games, a string that stretched back into the 1971 season when the Eskimos finished in last place.

The impact of Lemmerman's injury, the first of many for the Eskimos was reduced when his replacement—Tom Wilkinson—responded with an outstanding performance that guided the Eskimos to a 10-6 finish, their best won-lost record since the 1961 season.

Wilkinson's adept signal-calling was an unexpected bonus from a quarterback who had been bouncing around the Canadian Football League for several years and had been unable to find permanent employment with Toronto Argonauts and British Columbia Lions—the clubs that finished last in their respective conferences in 1972.

Bobby Taylor, Edmonton's temperamental flanker—also made his presence known in that first game. Disgusted after a pass was ruled incomplete, Taylor threw the ball into the face of Saskatchewan coach Dave Skrien, who had stepped onto the field to contribute to the discussion about the official's ruling.

Clyde Brock, a Roughrider lineman, left the Saskatchewan bench to reprimand Taylor for his attack on the coach and was thrown out of the game.

Saskatchewan won the second game, 14-12, another rough-and-tumble affair that ended when Dave Cutler of the Eskimos missed a 30-yard field goal attempt.

In that game, Wilkinson was knocked out of action early. Dave Syme, a Canadian rookie, took over and emerged with a broken nose after a crushing get-together with Baker. Baker was later fined by CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur.

On the last play of the game, Saskatchewan quarterback Ron Lancaster was the victim in some over-enthusiastic hits by Edmonton defenders, igniting a bench-clearing incident that was restricted to some pushing and shoving.

Charges of uncalled-for roughness flew back and forth.

"You keep letting that bull go on and you're going to have a riot," said Eskimo general manager Norm Kimball, referring to Baker.

"A guy tried to git my eye," said Lancaster. "That's dumb."

Baker insisted he never deliberately sets out to hurt an opponent.

The third game was relatively mild after which the Eskimos won 25-23 on the strength of Cutler's six-yard field goal, a CFL record. But it wasn't without controversy.

The Roughriders made a desperate stab at a comeback, recovering an on-side kick with what they thought was eight seconds remaining. But time ran out.

Skrien protested that the clock had been allowed to run for three seconds after the kick off play had been whistled dead, thus cheating Saskatchewan out of one more play.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

SATURDAY, NOV. 11 ...

Aries (March 21 - April 19): Collect all that's coming to you while it's feasible. Domestic incidents require extra time to deal with contradictory opinions.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Almost any group effort encounters difficulties, bickering. You expecting too much neglecting the needs of others.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20): Your resources aren't enough for some of today's well-offered speculations. Leave loved ones space for several changes of mind.

Cancer (June 21 - July 22): Endless rounds of conversation settle little or nothing. Doing essential chores quietly establishes a context which will contain differences.

Leo (July 23 - Aug. 22): Pride leads you into taking on more than you can manage. The rest of the weekend is spent disentangling yourself from results.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Ventures run head-on into difficulty, delay. Use ingenuity to work out an alternate pathway. Switch programs for the weekend.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You have potential special favor, promises of support, but let well enough alone wherever you can. Don't rush.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Take advantage of probable interruptions to ask questions, learn why formal or official matters go as they do.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your approach to money and its replications is strewn with unclue optimism, impractical ideas. Acquaintances are not much help.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Scrambles arise over almost any little gesture, can go on to quarrels if you let them. Show your most peaceful side.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): First see that you expect too much, on too short notice. Then seek a more direct approach involving fewer people.

Pisces (Feb. 19 - March 20): Fresh contacts inspire re-linking of old schemes, basic changes which open previously closed doors. Finesse nobody but yourself today!

Gonorrhea at 15 Made Her Sterile

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 23 and planning to be married soon. I've made quite a few mistakes in my life, one of which was a case of gonorrhea when I was 15. This later caused an ovarian abscess.

I'm sure my tubes have been permanently damaged, as we have been keeping together for 5 years without birth control and no pregnancy has resulted.

My fiancé accepts the fact that I may not be able to get pregnant and he has been wonderful about it.

What are my chances of getting pregnant by artificial insemination, using my future husband's sperm? Can the sperm be introduced directly into the womb? Would this be safe? How would I arrange to have this done?

As I say, my fiance is willing to accept this but I don't feel that I can. I think it would be unfair to him if I were only a chance of having his child—P.D.

I won't preach—but I will hope that others aged 15 or so will see your letter as evidence that there is real reason for the concern over venereal disease.

To answer your specific question, artificial insemination is a means of inducing pregnancy when the husband's sperm can't do the job.

It is not a substitute when a female is unable to provide an egg which can be fertilized.

Whether your trouble is that the Fallopian tubes have been closed by infection, so the ovum can't get through, or whether ovarian failure themselves have been damaged so they can't release an ovum in a proper way, might be determined by medical examination—but it might prove to be an academic matter. That is, perhaps nothing can be done about it anyway.

In other words, if the trouble is with you, then artificial insemination will be of no use at all. ■

Dear Dr. Thosteson: In your article on arthritis you told a questioner not to use Mexican or Canadian injections, but didn't say what the difficulties would be. What are they?

I didn't condemn all arthritis medications just because they happen to be Canadian or Mexican. I warned against the ones that are illegal in the United States and are "bootlegged" across the border, de used by people who go there because they can't get the treatments legally in the U.S.

Not all these bootleg concoctions have the same consequences, but some deaths have been traced to them. In other cases, blood is implanted. In many, the medication involves doses of cortisone which are effective briefly, but when continued can cause many disorders, ranging from "moon face" swelling, to fractures of bones, to mental disturbances. So be on your guard; get your doctor's approval before using such drugs.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: We often have fresh fish and if any is left over, I refrigerate it to eat warmed up in a day or so.

My husband will not touch it and says that it will poison me. I find this hard to believe, but can't help but wonder.—Mrs. M.

I should think your husband might begin to wonder, too, since you are living proof that it hasn't poisoned you.

Thorough cooking and adequate refrigeration are, of course, necessary to prevent serious deterioration, but that's a good rule for any food, not just fish.

When you then cash the last heart, discarding a club after East parts with a diamond. West cannot afford a diamond discard, for you could lead one to the eight and force him to ruff it with the ace. So West discards a spade instead.

Now you apply the pressure by East by cashing the K-A of spades. On the ace, East must discard from the J-10 of diamonds and king of clubs. He can't spare the king of clubs, so he discards a diamond. In that case you lead a diamond from dummy, covering East's jack with the queen, and win the last trick with the eight of diamonds.

Hijack Hits Toronto

CANADIAN PRESS

Three men armed with guns and grenades and demanding $10 million ransom hijacked a Southern Airways jet on a marathon flight from Alabama to Canada during the night. Then after rejecting an offer of $500,000 during a landing in Toronto, they ordered the plane flown back to the southern United States.

This morning, more than 12 hours after it was commandeered, the plane was reported circling over Knoxville, Tenn. An official said efforts were being made to round up additional ransom money, but he said there had been no request for landing clearance from the plane. Federal and local lawmen were on full alert.

Shortly before 9 a.m. EST, airport officials in Knoxville said the plane had about two more hours fuel supply.

Police in Knoxville said airline officials were trying to gather ransom cash there and in Atlanta, the headquarters of Southern.

The plane was circling in a holding pattern about 100 miles north of Knoxville. When the DC-9 left Toronto at 6:14 a.m. EST, police said it was going either to Knoxville or to Oak Ridge, Tenn., site of a giant Atomic Energy Commission installation. Airport authorities said that there is no landing strip at Oak Ridge, 20 miles from Knoxville, capable of handling a DC-9.

As a precautionary measure, officials at the Oak Ridge station said nuclear reactors were shut down and the facility evacuated.

"We are trying to get the money and parachute pickup here to get the passengers off the plane," a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration at Knoxville's McGhee Tyson Airport said. There were 30 other people on the plane, including four crew members.

Authorities also said relatives of the hijackers had gathered at the airport to try to persuade them to surrender.

One of the hijackers is reported to be from Oak Ridge, and the other two from Detroit.

Norman Bellinger, airport manager, said the trio remained some 200 yards while the plane was holding above the airport at 32,000 feet.

Police and airline officials at Toronto who negotiated with the hijackers said the three men were armed with guns and grenades.

Insp. William Snarr of the Mississauga police said the men received only fuel. Food, coffee and parachutes, which the hijackers had demanded earlier, were not delivered.

The plane was parked on a runway about 500 yards from the main terminal during its 75-minute stopover at Toronto. No one, except one man who refuelled the plane, got close to the aircraft. The door of the plane never was opened and the hijackers were not visible at any time.

One of the passengers was unconscious when the jetliner landed in Toronto at 4:58 a.m. and it was reported that he was an elderly man who had suffered a heart attack.

Ransom Demand Record

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The largest hijacking ransom in aviation history, $10 million, centred on Toronto International Airport early today.

A Southern Airways DC-9, bound from Memphis, Tenn., to Miami, was taken over by three hijackers over Birmingham, Ala., and diverted to Toronto via Detroit and Cleveland.

The aircraft circled Toronto while negotiation of the hijackers' demands was under way.

The previous known record ransom, $5 million, was paid by the West German government Feb. 25, 1972, for the release of a hijacked Lufthansa 747. Among the passengers on that flight, originating in India, was Joseph Kennedy III, son of the late Senator Robert F. Kennedy.

The early morning drama over Toronto International Airport was the latest of several commercial hijackings that either originated in Canada or involved the Canadian air territorial rights.

Nov. 12, 1971, an Air Canada DC-8 bound to Toronto from Vancouver, was hijacked at Calgary and a ransom of $1.5 million demanded by the lone hijacker.

After nearly eight hours, during which the airliner criss-crossed the skies between Calgary, Great Falls, Montana, and Regina, the man was clubbed down by one of the crew members.

Paul Joseph Cini, 27, of Calgary was subsequently sentenced to life in connection with the hijacking.

Peace Parleyed

SAIGON (AP) —Gen. Alexander Haig, President Nixon's special envoy, met again today with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu and prepared to fly back to Washington.

The U.S. embassy said Haig, accompanied by U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker, went to Independence Palace in late afternoon for what apparently was to be a final meeting of the two-day visit.

A senior South Vietnamese official confirmed that Haig carried a personal letter from Nixon to Thieu, and reported it reaffirmed the U.S. commitment to military and economic support of Saigon and said, the United States would oppose neither a coalition government nor a political solution on South Vietnam.

The official said the letter told Thieu the Nixon administration fully understands that the National Council of Reconciliation and Concord which is proposed in the eight-point ceasefire agreement, would be only an "administrative structure" and not a coalition government.

Dispute over the meaning of the draft agreement's language on this point has been a major obstacle in the negotiations so far, with Thieu contending that it would allow the Communist side to impose a coalition on the Saigon government.

But North Vietnamese peace negotiator Xuan Thuy told Agence France-Presse in Paris Friday there was nothing to be changed in the draft agreement's provision for a post ceasefire "administrative structure" composed of representatives of the Saigon government, the Viet Cong and neutralists.

Down Chopper

SAIGON (AP) — Communist forces shot down a big South Vietnamese helicopter Friday moments after it took off from its base on the central coast. Field reports said 27 government soldiers were killed and 41 were injured.

The twin-rotor CH-47 Chinook was hit by anti-aircraft fire 43 miles northwest of Qui Nhon as it was ferrying infantry to a landing zone for a sweep operation.

Canada Not Asked

SAIGON (Reuer) — The Canadian delegation to the International Control Commission in Vietnam described today as "not completely accurate" a report that Canada—along with Indonesia, Hungary and Poland—have agreed to control a ceasefire in South Vietnam.

No such formal request has yet been received by Canada although there have been some approaches on the matter," an official said.

Wheat Patience Pays

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's reluctance to sell its wheat surplus at the low rates prevailing in recent months was rewarded Friday when a 62.7-million bushel sale to China was announced at a record high price.

Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Wheat Board, said a news conference after the announcement that Canada had persuaded the United States to absorb the low price market over the past few months in spite of the fact that Canadian wheat in storage totals about 600 million bushels.

"We have slowed down our selling for a very significant time while the Americans were still selling at the price."

But now with a Russian crop failure creating a sellers' market, China has paid about $2.38 a bushel compared as with deliveries under the previous Canada-China contract at about $1.70 a bushel.

Exact prices are kept secret by international grain dealers to facilitate their bargaining with other countries.

The latest China sale brings total Canadian volume to the Asian country to more than 145 million bushels this year.

Commons Strength Stalemated Again

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau's Liberal government lost its slim Commons edge over the Conservatives Friday, as a judicial recount overturned a Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin's federal election win in Drummond, Que.

The stalemate leaves Mr. Trudeau in the same position he was three days after the Oct. 30 election, when he announced he would meet Parliament with a minority government.

There are other recounts scheduled, however, and the scales could still tip either way.

The present Commons standing gives the Liberals and Conservatives 108 seats each.

The New Democrats have 31 seats and there are 12 Social Crediters, including Jean Marie Boisvert, 29-vote winner in Drummond over Mr. Pepin after Friday's recount, and two independents.

Meanwhile, Mr. Trudeau must deal with the knotty problems of planning a legislative program that will meet with the approval of what may be a hostile Commons, while re-shuffling a cabinet reduced by seven by defeats and resignations.

With Mr. Pepin's loss, the election toll of ministers stands at four. The other losers are Labor Minister Martin O'Connell, Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson and Pat Mahoney, minister of state.

Remembrance For Everyone

WINNIPEG (CP) — R. G. Smellie, Royal Canadian Legion national president, says anyone who believes in peace—including German and Italian war veterans—should be permitted to march in Remembrance Day parades in Canada.

Mr. Smellie, a Winnipeg businessman, said in an interview Friday his opinion will be unpopular with some people but added that it is wrong to continue fighting the Second World War.

Height Costs Hair

LONDON (Reuter) — Tall men are more likely to lose their hair prematurely than short men, says a report by a London clinic published Friday. A survey of 2,000 men by the Roney Clinic, specializing in scalp diseases, showed 36.2 per cent of British males over five feet 10 inches tall were balding. And 29 per cent of balding men were six feet tall or more.

More Bombs Mailed

A wide alert was on today in several countries after a fresh wave of deadly letter bombs mailed in India turned up in Western Europe and dozens more were intercepted in India itself. Fourteen of the tiny bombs impersonated in envelopes flooded London, five in Geneva and postal officials in India intercepted about 50 more.

Acupuncture Grant Made

TORONTO (CP) — The Physicians' Services Inc. Foundation PSI has awarded Dr. Wolfgang Soperel of the University of Western Ontario $18,000 and Dr. D. V. Catton of McMaster University $6,900 to study the use of acupuncture as a pain reliever.

Premiers Meeting Often

MONTREAL (CP) — Premiers Robert Bourassa of Quebec and William Davis of Ontario met for three hours Friday, their third such meeting since Mr. Davis took office a year ago. In separate news conferences following the meeting both premiers said fiscal reform is the prime provincial resources to finance programs under provincial jurisdiction took up most of the discussion.

Makarios Plot Target

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Police have declared an island-wide alert and carried out extensive searches after uncovering a plot to assassinate President Makarios, the pro-government newspaper Apogeymatini says.

Guards Discontent

NAPANEE, Ont. (CP) — Guards at Millhaven penitentiary still are dissatisfied with conditions at the maximum-security institution bu plan no further collective action, a spokesman for the guards said Friday.

"It's up to the individual man now what he's going to do," he said.

Last month the guards booked off sick, leaving only 10 or 15 men on duty at times, in support of their complaints that penitentiary officials were not maintaining adequate disciplinary procedures at the prison.

Denture Program Fitted

TORONTO (CP) — The provincial health minister is drafting qualifications which would let some denturists fit and sell false teeth directly to the public.

But Health Minister Richard Potter said Friday that many denturists, including some who were now dealing directly with the public in contravention of the law, will not meet the government's standards of training and experience.

At present, dentures may be legally sold only by dentists, who charge about $250. Denturists dealing with the public in spite of the law charge about $150.

Money Not Power Issue

MONTREAL (CP)" — Negotiations between representatives of Hydro-Quebec and its 8,500 striking workers are being blocked by disagreement over its non-monetary clauses, a union negotiator said during a break in talks Friday night.

He said talks are not going "extremely well" as Laine Minister Jean Cournoyer said earlier in the day.

The 15 clauses deal with issues such as seniority, union jurisdiction and French-language superiority.

Early this morning there were 232 grievances filed with arbitrators across the country, affecting 5,529 customers or 10,000 people, a Hydro-Quebec spokesman said.

The Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), representing the strikers who walked off the job Monday, is waiting for Hydro to break the deadlock with a single package proposal to cover the 15 clauses, he said.

Bell Denied

OTTAWA (CP) — David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, indicated Friday that the NDP may appear before the Canadian transport commission (CTC) to oppose Bell Canada's latest application for rate increases.

He said the company is "taxing Bell customers for expansion."

"But the atmosphere isn't too good."

Yvon Dansereau, government-appointed mediator, has said talks will continue until a negotiated settlement is reached.

A resolution was passed in the national assembly Friday urging both sides in the contract dispute to settle their differences and end the strike which has caused power failures across the province to go unrepaired since Monday morning.

Mr. Cournoyer headed off the third request this week by Parti Quebecois members for an emergency debate in the national assembly. He said talks were going well and negotiations should be encouraged so he would not have to intervene.

Keynote Speaker Paints Grim Picture

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
— Staff Reporter

The Quinte district in 1984 — what will it look like?

The culture of Quinte 1984 may be blurred, but to journalist - broadcaster Roy Bonisteel one thing is certain — she ares will be under a dark cloud.

In an admittedly pessimistic kickoff speech last night, Mr. Bonisteel challenged th o s e participating in a seminar on the future to become pioneers in defending m a n against the tyranny of technology.

The host of CBC-TV's Man Alive series set the mood for debates that will continue all day today at Loyalist College. The college and United Community Services are co-sponsors of the sessions involving more than 100 people in discussions of the way they want their community to look 12 years from now.

Fields to be covered are education, religion, tourism, environment and industry, agriculture, the family leisure and politics.

"A future wholly dominated by technology can easily be an inhuman future," said Mr. Bonisteel as he painted his picture with a dark palette.

Education will remain unchanged.

"We have been deluded into thinking that change has already taken place. We've only been led in."

Because parents have been misled into thinking education is radically different, "many of the more conservative wouldn't dare suggest anything new for the next 12 years."

"The other reason there will be no change is that the book-burning institution will brook no interference from anyone, especially parents. Professional educators are like the vestal virgins in the temple, they alone know the holy word — the secret rites."

Education will proceed as it always has, but the obvious hand of authority has now been cloaked in a velvet glove.

The system turns out adolescents, "via a production line, to fit into our economic system with standardized ideas, standardized tastes, with the achievement ethic stamped on their backs like a trademark, to be good consumers for everyone. It is expedient that the child becomes a means to an end."

The church in 1984 will be the same old "denominational ally — locked, four — wall structure."

Mr. Bonisteel referred to the "irrelevancy of a stagnant church," one that has not prepared its people for the scientific, technological and ecological changes of the times.

Large church gatherings should be replaced by small group meetings with a sharing of mind and heart. The church should become involved in social and political issues on a humanitarian basis.

There will become a minority movement in society.

Everyone of housing will continue to fall behind needs, with Canada now standing fifth among industrial western nations in the ratio of housing completions to increases in population.

"In criticizing funding for public and private housing," Mr. Bonisteel remarked that "many persons in Europe look on the Canadian system as socialism for the rich and private enterprise for the poor."

Chief need in the health field is "caring units".

"If the health - handicapped person is without a family, he must manufacture a caring unit for him. Hospitals should be for relatively short-term illnesses."

For environment and industry Mr. Bonisteel had scathing comments.

"As societies grow richer, their environments grow poorer; as the army of objects expands, the vigor of life declines; as we acquire more leisure to enjoy our surroundings, we find less ground to enjoy.

"We deplore what is happening to our environment, but at the same time the search goes on for more and more industry to locate here — dictated by greater tax concessions, free land and attractive municipal services. Will anybody believe that we care about the use of poisons on our crops when our local 4-H Clubs stress the use of chemicals through their training programs for rural youth? Will anyone believe we care about our beautiful natural resources with we allow the ravaging of our Sandbanks? Will anyone believe we share the concern of Mallon of Fleming residents about atmospheric and water pollution caused by airplanes when each year we bow and worship the sonic boom at Trenton Air Force Day?

As for agriculture: "The Quinte area was at the time an attractive and productive agricultural area. Spilling out from all cities and towns, subdivisions and commercial enterprises have placed the arrows and the marshes with asphalt and concrete.

The family now and in the future will function only to provide companionship and emotional support for its members as all the other traditional functions are taken over by outside agencies.

Canadians have yet to discover real leisure is, and fill the increasing time off the job with activities around the home, clubs and hobbies.

Mr. Bonisteel asked his listeners to look for one critical areas: the state of the Quinte trail, the musical training in schools, the deplorable state of library facilities, the lack of child care centres.

As for the final category, politics, Mr. Bonisteel re-iterated the common view: politics is a dirty business, all politicians are the same, out for themselves, in there to line their pockets.

"The question is not whether or not these statements are true. It is whether or not they are going to accept them as true and continue operating under these assumptions."

The idealists, the representatives of vested interests and the reality with case histories to back up their opinions attacked Mr. Bonisteel briefly after his speech. They will continue the barrage this Remembrance Day as panels of experts wrangle with the issues he raised.

Two Councillors Will Run for Re-election

TRENTON (Staff) — Interest in Trenton's forthcoming municipal elections has taken a step forward Thursday, as the last two remaining councillors have announced their candidecy.

They are Paul Tripp and Stan Ketcheson.

Councillor Ketcheson has served for the past four years on council, 13 years with the Trenton Board of Education. He promised to make a statement on election issues sometime next week.

Councillor Tripp, first elected in 1965, is chairman of the Trenton Industrial Commission, a member of the Quinte Planning Board, a member of the Lower Trent Conservation Authority, and also a member of the school board for three years.

Having considered running for the office of mayor in the upcoming municipal elections, Councillor Tripp told newsmen prospective industrial interests have been consuming much of his time. "I think I can serve my town better if I can look after these interests as chairman of the industrial development commission," he said.

Right now he is negotiating with no less than five companies, three of which he considers "very good prospects." One company, that he declined to identify pending confirmation, could bring Trenton 75 additional jobs.

Among the projects being supported by Councillor Tripp is the removal of all railway lines from downtown Trenton, thereby opening routes for future road arterials, the projected rerouting and straightening of Highway 33 at the entrance to the town, dredging of the Trent River, a project for the widening of Dufferin Avenue, support for town clerk G. Harry's salary gration that the sewage plant be moved 1,400 feet into the bay onto fill-in land, to link Department of the Environment restrictions on building construction in the immediate vicinity of the plant, plus continuation of the town's industrial growth program.

Commenting on this week's announced shutdown of the Cosmos Imperial Mills plant here, Councillor Tripp is optimistic that new owners will be found for the 47 - year - old plant. "I've usually found it is easier to attract business to an existing factory, an empty shell, than for a new site. The Cosmos plant is ideal for warehousing, or a manufacturing concern, what with its rail and road accesses," he said.

During the last eight years, he says, between 800 and 900 jobs were created by new or growing industry. Councillor Tripp says it is essential to keep attracting business to Trenton. He cited the case of Cosmos Imperial and that of Knox Gelatine, that closed down this year, as prime examples.

"It's an easier burden to bear when one close; down. The more pants we've got, the bigger the labor market and demand." He said with good industrial prospects and a labor market, laid off workers have job opportunities and business is attracted.

Marmora Merchants Seek More Protection

MARMORA (Special) — Prompted by a rash of burglaries in recent months, businessmen here have asked village council to take action to bolster police protection in the community.

As a first step, a meeting will be arranged at which merchants will make a case for added surveillance to the officer in charge of the Madoc Ontario Provincial Police detachment. Failing decisive action, businessman Jack Jones recommends carrying the case to the attorney general's department.

With 12 burglaries in four months, merchants here are incensed at the police response. Reeve Jack Reynolds says that council has contacted the OPP twice in recent weeks asking for more police patrols, particularly at night. Police patrols have not met the expectations of the Marmora merchants.

The mounting list of breakins and theft incidents includes:

— the theft of $1,200 worth of liquor, cigarettes and bar fixtures from the Canadian Legion branch here. This incident in July marked the fifth time the branch has been broken into since it opened in mid-1971.

— three separate break-ins at Drummond Building Supplies.

— a $1,200 haul from Jack's Bargain Centre.

— the theft of $2,500 in merchandise from Cassidy's Furniture Store in August for which four youths have been charged but not yet tried.

— an incident at Earl Prentice Public School in which thieves made off with $1,000 in goods including a typewriter, movie camera, amplifier and radio.

Area Residents Are Honored

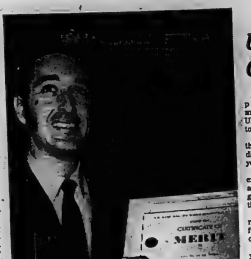
Five area residents were honoured this afternoon at Government House, Ottawa.

In an investiture ceremony, Governor General Michener admitted Mrs. J. Eady of Belleville and Mrs. Josephine Beasley of Picton to the Order of St. John. Three others, Mrs. Leslie Tolley of Picton, William James and John Hodgson, both of Belleville, were promoted to Officer grade in the order.

Mr. Eady joined the St. John Ambulance Brigade in 1961, taking an active role in competition work and became superintendent of the award-winning Cadet Division three years ago. Mrs. Beasley is a familiar figure in the Picton area where she has rendered over eleven thousand hours of voluntary service.

Those promoted to Officer grade all have long service records. Mrs. Rose Tolley joined the Brigade in 1953 and for ten years was superintendent of the Nursing Division before joining the Quinte Corps staff. Mr. James saw first aid service in Britain and for many years was in charge of first aid at Canada Cement, Point Anne. He has been an instructor and examiner and for over fifteen years has been an official of Belleville Branch.

Mr. Hodgson began in first aid work forty years ago and for the past thirty years has been connected with brigade work. He has been superintendent, initially of the Belleville Ambulance Division, then of Quinte Corps and now is an Area Staff Officer.



Fork-lift Found

Vernon Wood has his fork-lift back.

Mr. Wood, an RR 1, Trenton landscaper, came to work Wednesday morning and found his means of livelihood, a Massey - Ferguson double fork-lift tractor, missing.

But a man walking his dog near the site of the new Green church on Avondale Road Thursday spotted the tractor and called city police.

The police suspect children playing near Centennial Secondary School moved the tractor.

Job Well Done

Joseph Campbell, one of 15 volunteers manning fire-fighting unit in east Sidney township, puts extra touch of lustre to merit certificate for job well done. Firemen raised $1,100 for muscular dystrophy cause — among highest total ever achieved by volunteer canvassing for first time.

Sidney Firefighters Top Fund Raisers

Volunteers of Sidney township's east fire department have received a certificate of merit for fund - raising efforts for the Muscular Dystrophy Association of Canada.

The 15 volunteers manning the unit raised a $1,154 in a door-to-door canvass around the east end of the township.

"It was the first time we ever campaigned for anything, we were astounded at the response we received," said firefighter Joseph Campbell, spokesman for his fellow volunteers.

In a letter accompanying the certificate, J. W. H. Campbell, association president, said the amount was one of the highest we have ever received from a volunteer fire department campaigning for the first time."

Bubbly on Bus Planned

A champagne bus flight is on the agenda for the Canadian Advertising and Sales conference planned for Kingston next June.

The conference is the largest annual gathering of advertising personnel in Canada and is coming to eastern Ontario for the first time since the delegates met in The Thousand Islands 20 years ago.

Organizer Bryan Olney, a teacher at Loyalist College, explained that the flight should live up to its bubbly name.

"We'll meet people flying into Ottawa and drive them to Kingston. On board we'll have lots of champagne and, if there are enough people, a band.

The conference, with 200 people expected, is scheduled for June 7-9. Both the Men's and Women's Sales and Ad Clubs of Belleville have been invited to attend and help with arrangements.

Land Split Adds Street

MARMORA (Special) — A property subdivision has led to a new street in Marmora.

Vaughan Glover has proposed to subdivide his property, lying between Highway 7 and Norwood Rd., open up a new street and sell six lots.

The new street will be named Savage Crescent in honor of Miss Miriam Savage. She was village clerk and clerk - treasurer for many years before her retirement and subsequent death in 1971.

The existing portion of the road has been called Norlene St. and has two residences on it. Mr. Glover asked council to request the department of transportation to move a Norwood Rd. sign because many people take it to be a directional sign for Norwood village.

Council has been trying for several months to get the water extension undertaken to restore torn-up roads to their proper state. Reeve Jack Reynolds said the village is holding back $25,000 of the contract price until the affected roads are repaired. Earl Clemenger has complained to council that the road allowance in front of his house, torn up 18 months ago, is still in unsatisfactory condition.

UNICEF Hallowe'en Collection Opposed

A Belleville public school principal says there is more than one way to help UNICEF, and asking children to "beg" is the wrong way.

So firm are his convictions that the school he administers did not participate in this year's campaign, or last year.

He and his school are the exception to the rule as far as Belleville public schools go, all of whom participated this past Hallowe'en.

Most public schools in fact recorded slightly increased figures for UNICEF donations over last year.

Complete figures are not yet submitted.

This principal said "I do not criticize the ethic of UNICEF but the manner in which young people are used to canvass funds."

He suggested that it would be smarter and safer to have children participate in activities in the protective confines of the school to raise money, rather than "go begging on the streets."

The issue is the safety of the children carrying around the pounds of change in a cardboard box.

"In my school, two or three years ago, several instances cropped up of children being intimidated regarding the money they were carrying. These instances were accompanied by telephone calls from parents the following school day," he said.

"I haven't tried to influence my staff in my feelings towards children and UNICEF but the consensus at that time was to put a stop to it once and for all and call off student participation," he said.

"To the best of my knowledge, this attitude continues to this day."

If it is not "intimidation" from older children it is the youngsters' temptation to steal from their own collection box, he says.

The principal admitted, "you can't be too sensitive listening to an account of intimidation."

"If a child in my school genuinely wanted a collection box for the night I would see that he got one," he said. "To the best of my knowledge, no such request was made."

He did agree that the UNICEF campaign in the city is well run. No incidents were reported to city police this year, or to the UNICEF committee.

Offering an alternative, he said the city should take the campaign over.

"Possibly set a realistic figure and then levy a small tax to all residents of the city to obtain it," he said.

Loyalist Program Arranged

The Bancroft office of Loyalist College has its winter interest programs arranged for the people of the area.

After some difficulty, the northern office has secured an instructor to teach bagpiping and the course will begin within a few days.

A weaving course is also planned for the winter months. Leathercraft will be taught by Barry Donnelly and Mrs. K. Dahlke of the Victorian Order of Nurses will instruct in home care nursing. This course has proved a popular one.

William Eakins will again teach sculpture, a course he offered during the summer under Loyalist sponsorship.

Date Confirmed

TRENTON (Staff) — A change in date has been noted for the Trenton Town and Country Camera Club's annual exhibition of the Toronto Camera Club's International Salon of Photography slide show.

Some notices gave the date as Nov. 18, but a spokesman for the Trenton club Thursday said the date should read Thursday, Nov. 16, at the Trenton High School at 8 p.m. Admission is $1 for adults, 50 cents for students.

Propaganda Line

The British army in Northern Ireland apparently has been having some success of late in rounding up suspected terrorists.

But in republican Irish eyes this no doubt comes under the general heading of a "campaign of cold-blooded British murder and terror" as put forth by a spokesman from Dublin interviewed in Belleville recently.

Readers who follow the reports from Ulster must judge for themselves the veracity or otherwise of such a statement.

Meanwhile the man from Dublin, who described himself as a freelance journalist and member of the Irish republican movement, might cast his mind back to just one day last summer — just one day in the life of the people of Belfast. It was July 21 and between the hours of 2.10 and 3.15 in the afternoon when 19 bombs went off in various parts of the city. Nine people died — seven civilians and two soldiers — and 130 were injured. Seventy-seven were women and girls, 53 men and boys. The youngest of those who died was a 14-year-old boy.

A Dublin newspaper, The Sunday Independent, which is not known exactly as a supporter of things British, had this to say following that terrible afternoon: "These are dark days for Ireland. We live in an age of cowardice, with the guilt spread evenly between the highest and the lowest in the land.

"We fostered the men who planned the murders of innocent men, women, boys and girls in Belfast. We fed these people with propaganda. We took advantage, when we could, of their exploits. And because we are not a morally courageous people, we never seriously tried to stop their terrible excesses.

"We must break the paralysis that leaves the good name of the Irish people in the hands of unscrupulous men. And we must find a way to make restitution for our failings. ."

Let no one be fooled then by these travelling propagandists. The Sunday Independent for one, which ordinarily is a supporter of Irish republicanism, does not swallow their spurious arguments.

Tete-A-Tete

So you have read that engaging piece by Israeli newspaper mogul Rothbilt about his encounter with a fetching young Arab delegate at the United Nations. Rothbilt was so smitten he straightaway asked the lady if she would join him for coffee. "After I have finished my speech," she replied.

Predictably, she blasted the Israelis but later apologized to Rothbilt, saying she didn't mean all those terrible things, "but you know it is politics."

Said Rothbilt, after an hour's conversation, "we could have signed a secure and durable peace on the napkin, if only it were up to us."

Ah love . . .what it does to people We are reminded of some young Greek friends in the period following the war. They are all dispersed now — in the Argentine and goodness knows where else, but they included George and several other Greek student friends and Doris, a German. And George was speaking to the girl in his friendly, joshing manner, and with no trace of malice. "Ah Doris, our ex-enemy friend," and she took it in good part for she was that kind of person — bright, intelligent and without guile.

If only politics and nationalism and prestige and other red herrings did not intrude so much on human relations, life might be so much better and the world a more compassionate place.

Christmas Spirit

In the real spirit of Christmas is the effort by Bill and Jean McMaster of South George St. in rounding up gifts for youngsters victimized by the war in Vietnam. They are doing it with the aid of friends near and far and with the assistance also of a Montreal adoption group. Through this agency the McLeans, who have a 22-month son of their own, are adopting a four year-old Korean boy. The gifts they have been instrumental in gathering will mean a little more cheer for those whose lives have been badly affected by war. Also vital to the project is CFB Trenton — the gifts will be part of a shipment from the base next month to Saigon.

Trudeau Gets the Message

Post-Mortems and Talk of A Leadership Change

By RICHARD JACKSON
OTTAWA — Postmaster Lavoie of the House of Commons — yes, like the Senator, has his own Post Office — who has been watching elections since the early days of Mackenzie King, was conducting his own knowing postmortems on this most astonishing one of them all.

You have to listen to Postmaster Lavoie and regard his opinions as those of a longtime pro.

For while, as postmaster, and a public servant, he must, at least on the surface, be politically neutral, he does not have to be detached or disinterested.

Nor is he.

He sizes it up as much as an individual election in each of the 264 constituencies as a race between the leaders.

Robert Stanfield went into the campaign as a slow, plodding, sincere, terribly earnest man, lacking in color if not in humor, at odds with some members of his own Conservative caucus, and generally discounted by far too many people, it deceitfully seemed, as lackliffe the spark that lights the flame of power.

Pierre Trudeau was into it by sounding like some Roman patrician eating grapes peeled by his humble servants and descending reluctantly and with evident distaste to respond, usually philosophically, to the clamoring questions of the rude multitude.

David Lewis was the passionate populist, reeking with rectitude, for nine monotonous weeks denouncing Industry as if all its thousands of individual Canadian shareholders — and voters, by the way — as unspeakable leeches on the public purse.

Only Real Caouette, the eternal folk hero, the gallantly unborn won't - give - up crusader for a lost cause, looked good and had style sympathy if not necessarily support.

So, with such unattractive leader images doing them little good, most candidates — and particularly those Members of Parliament seeking re-election — were on their own as seldom before.

For there were some considerencies where the leaders were not only unwelcome, but cordially invited to stay away.

The survivors among those MPs seeking re-election were the politicians not the statesmen.

Or so Postmaster Lavoie assesses them.

They all come to Ottawa initially as political innocents from abroad, the National Capital being, strangely, in Canada, a sort of private world in itself, off the mainstream of industrial and commercial life, preoccupied, self-centred.

Postmaster Lavoie has watched generations of them come and go.

And some go sooner than others. These are the ones who, moving into the parliamentary system, let themselves get caught up with the imagined glamour and supposed importance of committee work — especially that of external affairs, science and technology, a red other admirably high level matters which they fancy gives them prestige.

These become the "statesmen," the gentleman politicians who grow remote from their constituencies and the people back home. They are far too busy with the "important things" in Parliament to be bothered by mundane bread-and-butter views of the people who sent them to Ottawa.

And those people, they discover to their surprise, are not so dumb that they do not quickly realize they are regarded by their Honorable Representative in Ottawa as tiresome bores.

The survivors among the campaigning parliamentarians are the politicians who never forget that the people who sent them to Ottawa are paying them $26,000 a year and expect them to put in nine or 10 good months' work a year doing what they are paid to do — attend to the needs and wants of the home constituency, and forget about foreign affairs and the concerns of Faraway Places.

The politicians spend at least a week of every month back home finding out what their people are thinking and saying and what they want.

And, so when they come back to Ottawa they know what is going on among the 80,000 or so voters who live in their constituencies, what to do about it, how to go about trying to solve the problems, cope with the concerns, and leave their people with the clear impression that they are getting their $26,000 worth.

Lest We Forget

Unsatisfied Judgment' Law Under Fire

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

On Sept. 18, we purchased a car and six days later on Sept. 27, it was hit broadside by a driver whose licence had been suspended, who had no insurance and who was driving a car registered in the name of a man from outside the area.

Our car was a write-off according to two independent mechanics who estimated the repairs to cost more than the car was worth. An adjuster from the insurance company where we have our insurance, registered a claim on our behalf and obtained estimates of the damage (although the insurance company is not directly involved since my husband was in no way at fault).

About two weeks after the accident, we received a letter from the department informing us that our claim had been received and that the other driver and former owner had been notified of the claim and had 30 days to decide what they intended to do about settlement. No reply was received by the department from either the driver or the former owner within the 30 day time limit allowed to register a denial of responsibility for the accident. (We have been unable to ascertain whether ownership had been transferred, although there is a 6 day limit for registering such change of ownership.)

In the meantime, we have had to rely on taxis and a rented car to provide transportation to and from work while waiting the settlement from the Unsatisfied Judgment fund. The expenses for this interim transportation have exceeded $200.

We have been informed now that only the expenses incurred during the first week after the accident will be considered. We have also had to make two bank payments on the car that was wrecked!

The local adjuster representing the unsatisfied judgment seems in no hurry to resolve the claim. He has not obtained an estimate of damage and has not contacted the driver who is now in jail as a result of the accident. He is not certain whether ownership had been transferred or whether the driver is indeed the owner.

The money the Provincial government collects for the unsatisfied judgment fund is supposed to be for the benefit of the person who is innocently a victim of an accident caused by an uninsured driver. Why, then does this department not settle with the innocent party and then take whatever action is necessary to reclaim the costs from the negligent driver and owner of the uninsured vehicle?

In this case, the driver was charged and is already serving a jail sentence.

The Unsatisfied Judgment fund is apply named — why isn't not the innocent driver be penalized by deliberate delay in settling such claims? How does one go about speeding up the processing of such claims when dealing with an unconcerned and slow-moving Provincial government the injured party employs the services of a lawyer when the persons working in this department are receiving government salaries to resolve matters concerned? Why? These cases?

MARION ANDREWS

Opera Star Honored

Kitchener - Waterloo Record

Among the recipients of honorary degrees at last week's University of Western Ontario convocation was Jon Vickers, the Saskatchewan native and Orangeville district resident who is one of the world's foremost operatic tenors.

It is good to see that Western chose to honor in Mr. Vickers at this time, when he is still a sought after performer around the world. There is, however, an unfortunate irony in the fact that a Canadian too wanted to hear him sing would have to go to London, England, or perhaps Salzburg, or Buenos Aires, or New York.

The chance of hearing him do opera in Canada again is not high, and in Toronto, Ontario's only operatic centre, it is slight indeed. For Mr. Vickers refuses to pack and choose his productions, was once offended by comments in the Toronto press and has since refused Canadian Opera Company offers. This is a great pity, for the COC's program plans include those of the Wagner works for which Vickers is famous, and others also in his repertoire. We can hope the memory of the slight will not be permanent, and the CDC find it possible to come up with an offer enabling Canadians in this area to enjoy again one of the truly great performers in what is, at its best, the grandest of the arts.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO
November 11, 1952

Belleville, in conjunction with the Dominion and the Empire, today bowed her head in solemn tribute to her gallant sons who gave their all for civilization in two world wars. Industry and business paused in their stride at eleven o'clock to observe two minutes' silence to honor the memory of those who "went west". Hon. Major Archdeacon Arthur Smith, rector of St. Thomas' Church and padre of the 9th Anti Tank Regiment RCA (AIL) conducted the service. He was assisted by the Rev. S. E. Larman, Hellaway Street United Church who read the scripture lesson and senior Captain F. W. Brightwell of the Salvation Army who offered a re-dedicatory prayer. The invocation was given by Major Smith. Then in a solemn hush, the haunting notes of "Last Post" echoed in the morning air from a quartet of RCAF trumpeters. A brief silence, then the "Reveille".

Fourteen years after the World War ended, Rain prevented the carrying out in full the ceremonies attending the 11th anniversary of Remembrance Day in Belleville and being held at the War Memorial in the park, the service was held shortly before eleven o'clock in the armouries. The ceremony at the east end of the hall was conducted by Major the Rev. A. B. Payne, Chaplain of the Argyll Light Infantry, and Vicar of St. Thomas' Church, assisted by the Rev. Robert Hall, pastor of John Street United Church, a veteran of the war.

The annual church parade of the 13th Regiment headed by the Pipe and Regimental Bands was held Sunday to St. Thomas' Church. The sermon was delivered by the Chaplain of the Regiment, Archdeacon G. H. Bearnish, the rector of the church.

Bridge Street Church Sunday School celebrated the 100th anniversary of its organization. The pastor, the Rev. J. P. Wilson, conducted the service and addresses were made by the school superintendent, Mr. Fred S. Deacon, Judge Coltsworth of Toronto; Judge Deroche; Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, assistant superintendent of the school; Mayor Charles E. Hanna; Mr. David Price and Mr. W. Vandervoort of Toronto. Mr. Fred Sprague sang a pleating solo.

Remembrance

By LAURA ANNE SIMPSON

Remembering the silent armies marching through the sky;

Once so full of life and laughter —

Men too young to die.

Will all those lives be sacrificed in vain?

Or will we make an all-out effort to attain the peace for which they fought and died?

Will we let Governments for profit

send forth our youth to kill and die, and innocents in pain and anguish cry?

Oh Nations of the World awaken!
Remember those who died —
and for their sake

Make this One World, One Brotherhood of Man!

To live in peace and love, in God's great Plan.

A Question of Time

Party Doubts About P.M. and Prospects of Another Vote

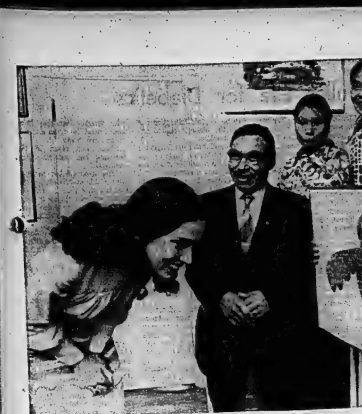
By FARMER TISSINGTON
from The Intelligencer's
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The Conservatives have established the reputation as being the party of the sharp wheeler dealer and the shifty talker on the polls. Turning against their leader after failure to win a majority in the Commons became a tendency of a party unknown before and during the Diefenbaker era. But the tactic is not confined to the Tories, apparently. It was amazing with what speed some Liberal leaders abandoned after the Oct. 30 results were known.

Mr. Trudeau, whose chairman (remember that word!) helped elect so many Liberals in 1968, was under attack within minutes after the ballots had been counted. Several Liberal candidates, even including some who won, were muttering about the necessity of calling a leadership convention. Ross Whicher, the editorial victor in Bruce, was one of these, expressing a personal preference for John Turner. Judging by his speeches in the Commons, Turner, often sounds as if he is in the wrong party, but his reputation is also malleable. His 1,000 vote margin in 1968 was reduced to about 600 this time without any great motivating Conservative opponent.

In straight political terms, the election results with their regrettable polarization of party interest between English and French-speaking Canadians, more nately, the question in Liberal ranks if the party can afford to keep alternating its leadership between the two founding races.

If things go according to the Conservative game plan, it is only a matter of time before [illegible] take over the government with a working majority. One veteran Conservative expressed the opinion he was not concerned about the immediate future as to whether the Liberals met Parliament or turned the government over to his party right away. It can be left for only a matter of a few weeks or months before another election — and a clear-cut Conservative win.



If the pattern of 1957 and 1958 is repeated, he has good reason for such optimism. Canadians will recall the Conservative 112 seat total of the narrow 57 win and how it exploded into the record 208 sweep the next year. The Tory problem may well be how to avoid such an embarrassment of riches again for that 30 seven point national party problems that eventually led to the disaster of 1962 and 1963.

But it is just not possible to orchestrate the margin of an election victory as one starts to run its sweep and force can easily get out of hand. There is also the belief, for instance, that Canadians wanted to administer a slap on the wrist to Mr. Trudeau and his government on Oct. 30 but their reprimand fell somewhere in a swift kick in the pants instead.

Judging by the many close vote totals of Oct. 30 there are a large number of seats where even a further moderate swing to the Conservatives would reverse the result and Tories would pick up seats from both Liberals and New Democrats. And this does not take into account Quebec where gains would be inevitable, based again on the 1972-38 results when Quebec elected nine Conservatives — 37 — and then jumped on the bandwagon and elected 58 the next year.

If the Conservatives do form a government and Mr. Stanfield has trouble finding a minister of finance, perhaps he could do worse than choose the Tory winner who managed to stay within his personal campaign budget during the election. Anyone who did that successfully in the lead and excitement of preceding votes could be trusted with handling the nation's finances.

Press gallery pundits have been coming in for some needling about their election predictions. Perhaps there is a message somewhere in the fact that two reporters who came closest to calling the correct party standings never left Ottawa during the campaign.

Anonymous Ones Won War

By REV. GORDON C. SMYTH

How prone people are to be forgetful and unappreciative of the past. The apparent failure of two world wars to provide mankind with peace has bred a spirit of frustration, if not of defiance, that makes headlines after every Remembrance Day.

However, a former Moderator of the United Church of Canada, Dr. Robert B. McClure, put the matter succinctly when he said. "Never was national policy changed by carrying placards, throwing ink or paint. These methods require a very minimum of effort and thought, and result in a minimum of effectiveness. The true rebel is the one who is dissatisfied with things as they are and wants to build a better world. He is not one of those with long hair and short brains, or tight pants and loose morals."

It is not without significance that Queen Elizabeth leads the peoples of her far-flung Commonwealth in honoring, not those some tomb with a well-known name in Westminster Abbey but in Trafalgar Square, and places a wreath before the tomb especially erected to the sacred memory of "The Unknown Soldier".

Children and young people may smile as they ask their father or grandfather how he won the war. But he did, with others like him. Every ship relied on the integrity of each of its comrades. It was on the alertness of each sentry that every battalion depended. It was on the individual pilot's skill that every air operation hung. It was the anonymous ones who won the war.

They went forth from farms and villages, cities and towns, offices and factories, high schools and universities. They went forth in ones and twos, went forth in thousands upon thousands. Their names made little print in the press, beyond statistics. Only a few were decorated with the Military Cross. Fewer still received the Victoria Cross.

But they went forth. More particularly they went, forth, in the Second World War, to stem the tide of anti-Semitism that was taking the lives of 6,000,000 Jews. They went forth that clergymen could speak as they wanted to speak, professors lecture as they wanted to lecture, editors write as they wanted to write, workers band together as they wanted to unionize. They went forth in order that the perverted mythical Nordic racial superiority might be ended.

If there has been any failure — and indeed there has — it is not on the part of those who offered their lives to stem and finally turn back a tide of totalitarianism that would have largely submerged the world. Dishonor on us should not keep either us or the rising generation from pausing on November 11th in grateful remembrance of them.

The final Remembrance Sunday service that I conducted in a Toronto pastorate found me going into the sanctuary earlier than usual, to be sure that everything was just right on the pulpit. I thought. I was alone, until I heard a movement: off to the side. I turned in curiosity and saw an elderly woman standing in front of the memorial plaque on which I knew was written the name of her only son.

I went down and spoke with her. Almost apologetically, she said: "I've always come a little early on this Sunday. I've managed this year too." She has since died. Who is left of her family to stand where she used and love.

"I attack at dawn," stated the first VC of the Second World War. Warburton Lee, outside Narvik reported to the British Admiralty that night was coming, a snow storm raging, and a much superior enemy inside the fiord.

The Admiralty signalled back. "We leave the decision with you." "I attack at dawn," was his terse reply. Thus Warburton Lee and his anonymous company sailed into victory and death.

Because all such did what conscience told them to do, because each one was dear to somebody back home, and because all of them were dear to the heart of God, let us remember them in thankfulness and with a new sense of responsibility towards the God before whom we too must appear at length, and towards the world which they left behind in the faith that all God's children would yet learn to live in liberty, justice, brotherhood and to stand?

Controversy Builds On Ordaining Women

LONDON (Reuter) — Controversy is breaking out in the Church of England over proposals to ordain women as priests.

The General Synod of the church is to study an official report next month urging it to consider ordaining women.

While trying to give a balanced view of both sides of the case, the report attacks traditional church attitudes and age-old interpretations of the Bible, which have weighed against bringing women into the priesthood.

The author of the report, Christian Howard, a leading churchwoman, admits to being in favor of the reform.

Leading clergymen assisted Miss Howard in the production of the report, which criticizes barriers erected against women invading what has hitherto been men's territory.

"Viewed objectively, the barriers appear anomalous and absurd," it says. "The tragedy of discrimination is that it weakens the human race as a whole."

St. Paul, in his epistles, says that women should keep silent in churches.

"If there is anything that they desire to know, let them ask their husbands at home. For it is shameful for a woman to speak in church."

The report noted that "Jesus' relationship to women was in considerable contrast to the customs and conventions of His day."

The report suggests that the real reasons for not accepting women as priests may be more sinister than those usually advanced.

"Is it women's sexuality which is experienced as the real bar to priesthood?" it asks.

"The symbolism which accompanies womanhood is often gentle and humble, but it is also demonic," the report says, referring to witches always being identified as female.

"Are there hidden parts of us with which we have never come to terms, which are being trounced by the thrusts of women priests?"

If Sweden's established Lutheran Church provides any example, no major changes in the attitude of the Anglican Church to women will take place within a long polluted wrangle. Women were only ordained in Sweden in 1960 after a fight lasting nearly 40 years.

The climax of the political infighting came in September, 1957, when the Scottish church assembly, the Kyrkomoetet, refused the ordination of women. Government intervention followed, and a freshly elected Kyrkomoetet reversed its predecessor's decision the next year. Even so, Swedish bishops only became prepared to ordain women two years later, in 1960.

An inevitable breakaway church, opposing women's ordination, was immediately formed.

In Swedish law only an overall majority among bishops, clergy and laity is needed for a change to be accepted in the church.

In England, however, changes require a separate majority in each governing body of the Anglican Church: in the house of bishops, the house of clergy, and the house of laity.

Legislation, therefore, may be even more difficult in England.

"Will you come with us on a trip to Australia?"

Such was the question Mrs. Victor Summerfield, 75 Victoria Ave., and Mrs. Fred Bennett, of Campbellford, asked Mrs. George S. Smith, 12 Eastwood Park Drive, who in her early eighties, without hesitation, answered:

"I'd love to go. I've always wanted to go there!"

Two weeks later, these three friends turned a dream into reality, as they flew over the blue Pacific (leaving Belleville, September 21, '72), for a three week tour of Honolulu, New Zealand, Fiji Island, Australia and Tahiti.

Mrs. Smith, who taught school in Winnipeg before she married her late husband, is the mother of Dorothy (Mrs. Ayers Hughes of Guelph), son Garry of Toronto, and son Robert (9 Eastwood Park Drive), whose wife, Jean, is Belleville's well-known alderman.

While on tour, Mrs. Smith kept a diary, "I have always kept one,") of their trip in which she recorded and revealed events and impressions. With her kind permission the following are excerpts from her interesting diary which reveals a youthful outlook and keen awareness of the world about her:

Honolulu:

"We went on a sight-seeing day-time trip to Pearl Harbor by boat. At night, we sat out on the balcony of our room on the 21st floor of our hotel overlooking the harbor . . . taking in the hustle and bustle and bright lights from all over the city. A wonderful panorama!"

New Zealand:

On a bus tour of the countryside:

"Frame houses all around the foothills. Sheep ranches everywhere, along with Guernsey cattle. Grass very short and it looks so smooth; just like velvet. Some dandelions and tiny white daisies.

We travel on the left-hand side of the road. The wheel of the bus on left-hand side also. Roads are as two-lanes and made of small crushed rock. Lambs get through the wire-fencing and wander along the sides of the road. They are not afraid of the big buses. A railroad track runs alongside. The tracks seem to be narrower than ours. Do not see too many chickens on the ranches . . . * 200,000 acre farm is quite common in the foothills."

A bus tour in the mountains:

"We are in the mountains, going around them . . . watching sheep grazing on pampas grass . . . am very well and standing the trip well. There are 22 in our crowd. Stopped at 10 a.m. for tea and cakes. Travelling through forest of National Park. Sheer drop at side of roads. Hanging valley is completely covered by fog. The growth on rock is profuse. Rushing falls coming down sides of mountains, on both sides of road. Beautiful! Breathtaking!"

On a boat cruise to Fiji:

"Left on a boat cruise to Fiji for a couple of hours or more. Saw some large ships on their way to somewhere on this vast ocean. Makes me think of 'Mutiny on the Bounty' so much! I can imagine just how the prisoners must have felt packed in those ships down in the hold. The book will be so much more interesting to read the second time when I return home.

"Here comes a couple of players to strum on their banjos! All black people — Maoris. The men all wear bright skirts. They are sitting beside me, strumming away and singing.

"One has an ordinary wooden packing-case with a string coming out from a hole in the top of the box and attached to a round stick which he places on top of the box to stretch the string taut. This he strums with his fingers. . . .

Australia:

"Here in Melbourne. Hope I can see Madam Melba's Memorial which was erected in memory of this famous singer. She toured Canada when I was in my early teens. . . West through St. Mary's Church, the oldest church in the city. Beautiful park. Three tiers of lattice work reaching to top of hill covered with flowers and flowering shrubs . . . Passed Government House. Red-shingled roofs on most homes, one-storey high with slightly peaked roofs. Congested shopping areas. The city is spread over 57,000 acres of land. Not too mountainous. . .This is a very thriving city. The bus-driver mentioned Madam Nellie Melba!

"Friday — no fish on the menu! . . .The bus director just announced he was pleased to say they were keeping up their record of a "Smith" a day being carried on their bus line. That was me! I was the only Smith in the bus!"

Concerning a tour of the countryside:

"We travelled on. There are sheep and black Angus cattle in the fields. . . Saw the name Cattanach on a little store at Ecrua! Nearly missed it at that! My brother-in - law's name was the same — real Scotch from Scotland!

"Saw more 'ghost trees' again. When the leaves fall off, the trunks and branches are very ugly, and after dark they appear very white and stark and thus the name! They terrify one coming on them after dark. There are some beautiful pieces of driftwood along the roadsides . . ."

Canberra (the Capital):

"Went through the Art Gallery . . . and the Parliament buildings. Our own are nicer! Population 130,000. . ."

Tahiti:

"Have a wattle hut. Has a cement floor. There is a pool in the centre of the group of huts . . . the posts which hold up the wattle-roofs are wound with fresh pampas grass. They sweep the cement floors with browns of bunch-grass. Hibiscus, magnolias and other flowering shrubs are everywhere. . ."

Belleville:

"So glad to get home! There is certainly 'No place like home'!"

Mrs. Smith expressed a wish that she might return sometime "for I did so enjoy it, and now that I know something about those places, I would appreciate them that much more. I would urge all who like to travel — to go!"

Your enthusiasm is contagious. Mrs. Smith—and again thank you.

College Hill UCW Annual Bazaar Held

College Hill UCW held their annual church fall bazaar Thursday afternoon. Colorful leaves designated the booths which offered a variety of Christmas decorations, toys, pastries, jams, baked goods, and gift suggestions.

Convener and president of the College Hill UCW reported most of the baked goods which were heaped on their booth had disappeared by 2.30 (half an hour after the bazaar began.)

This year, an added attraction for all was the Boutique Booth which was laden with colorful decorations and a bouquet of huge flowers overlooking the assorted articles convened by Mrs. Myrtle Bushell and Mrs. June Moorcroft.

Another attraction was the CGIT Booth, attended by Mrs. Emma Armstrong and Mrs. Margaret Vessey. Each year, the CGI girls make and contribute their various home-made articles for Christmas. This year, red felt Christmas stockings, little felt notepads and sewing kits made of felt also in colors were presented.

The baking booth was under the charge of Mrs. Hollie Townsend, Mrs. Lela Belcour, Mrs. Mary Parks, Mrs. C. Carman, Mrs. Jessie Dodd, Mrs. Rhetta Marriott, Mrs. Dorothy Reeves and Mrs. Latchford.

The needlecraft booth was convened by Mrs. Leona Bailey, Mrs. Alida Watson, Mrs. Grenrod and Mrs. Florence Watson. The sweets booth was tended by Mrs. Bessie Clarke, Mrs. Hazel Treverton and Mrs. Ada Fair. An always interesting arrangement, the what-not booth was convened by Mrs. Vivian Lepore and Mrs. Violet Elliott. Doll clothes which had their part in this bazaar caught the eye of each girl. Mrs. Olive West and Mrs. Theda Woods supervised this booth.

The autumn theme was carried through from the bazaar room to the tea room downstairs. Two arrangements of dried flowers in golds, browns and oranges were centred at the front of the tea room. Individual tea tables carried the same color theme.

Mrs. Catharine MacIntosh received guests while Mrs. Annis Dickens was hostess.

Fuller Life for Diabetics

TORONTO (CP) — The diabetic who looks after himself can usually lead a full life. In his case, looking after himself involves his diet, his exercise, insulin, urine tests and coping with people who don't understand.

Elizabeth Laugharne says it helps when the diabetic himself understands what he must do and why that there will be problems, but that he need not be an invalid.

Mrs. Laugharne directs the Tridec program, designed to teach diabetics how to live with their condition.

The Tri - Hospital Diabetics Education Centre has been operating out of the Women's College Hospital for a year. It is a four-day program put on by a teaching nurse, Mrs. Laugharne; a dietitian, Marjorie Hollands, and a social worker, Sandra Gentles. They work with patients referred by doctors.

Mrs. Laugharne said about 400,000 people in Canada have diabetes and about 300,000 know it.

Mrs. Laugharne said: "There aren't any chronic can be helpful. Education can keep the diabetic out of crisis situations.

"The diabetic doesn't get a list of forbidden foods as you might if you had an ulcer. It's the thinking man's diet.

"Diabetes is an inability to cope with carbohydrates in food, really. We have to start at square one and teach nutrition and how it affects them, particularly.

"This is really an awful thing to ask people to do, tell them that for the rest of their lives they're going to have to stick to a controlled diet."

The most commonly affected people are age 45 to 60, though diabetes can affect people at any age.

Mrs. Laugharne said diabetics have more heart attacks than non-diabetics, they may have circulation problems leading to gangrene, may suffer blindness or loss of sensation.

"They feel fear, hostility over the diagnosis. We get some frightened people."

That is where the social-work part of the program comes in. Mrs. Gentles works with groups after they have heard what the nurse and dietitian have to say.

"They can react to the teaching and express their feelings.

"The group helps to deal with problems of isolation the diabetic might have. The old ones can help the new ones, talking about how to deal with eating out, with special occasions.

"People don't understand. They'll press food on a diabetic: 'Just one piece won't hurt you.'

"Employers discriminate against them because they consider them sick. They can't get group insurance.

"The group can help them accept things that would not be acceptable from non-diabetics."

Mirror of Your Mind

By JOHN CONWELL

Does grief cause depression?

OF the countless causes of chronic depression, mourning or grief is way down the list, except when guilt or other extenuating circumstances is a contributing factor. As a rule, though, defining circumstances is more likely to afflict a person that needs professional attention than someone when he is happy, not when he is sorrowful. Indeed depression has been known to engulf a person who is supremely happy yet worried because he thinks happiness won't last.

Should parents be free of nurses?

YES; but if that were a prerequisite of parenthood, there would be no population crisis. Parents who have neuroses, though, should be aware of their condition. They should see to it, too, that their children's emotional development is not adversely affected. In many cases, a parent's neurosis will be felt by a child who cannot cope with it, though his mother or father may be able to function in spite of such a problem.

Can a man safely correct his wife?

CERTAINLY. First, though, a husband should never correct his wife in public. If she makes a boo-boo, he should try to ignore it or else create diversionary tactics so it won't be noticed too much. Second, if he does correct his wife privately, a husband should do it without arousing her resentment. This is a tall order, but he can do it if he himself is convinced that they love each other enough to be completely honest with one another.

Successful Living

Important People Are Courteous and Organized

By DORIS CLARK

Some years ago, I had a job which involved telephoning 100 businessmen once a month to notify them of the time and date of a meeting. I found, that the more important the man, the more time and courtesy he had at his disposal.

Now take the president of an automobile company. I always got through to him immediately, he listened to my message and thanked me by name for calling. He never seemed too busy for this trivial call, although he must have had many more pressing matters on his mind.

Some of the smaller ones would have me call back three or four times before listening to my message; then would be abrupt or sarcastic!

It seems those who get the most accomplished are able to organize themselves and carry out their duties with good humor. Those who take their own importance too seriously often doom themselves to mediocrity. — Dorothy Turcotte.

Dear Doris :My can Davey, who is just 14, is very worried about the little sores and pimples which are appearing around his chin and nose. He is an army cadet, and takes great pride in looking clean and neat in his uniform, but he needs some help right now with his complexion problem.

I told him keeping his face clean would help and that night he scrubbed it until it was all red and sore. I suggested he should also wash it during the lunch hour at school, but he disliked the idea of doing this because of the thought that other boys would tease him. Just Mum.

Dear Mum: Cleanliness is the ticket. Acne beats the kind of skin which exudes grease, as a means of throwing off impurities. Sometimes the pores get clogged and infection sets in.

Skin specialists recommend frequent washings — sometimes as many as four or six per day. This is to keep the grease down, the pores open and blackheads and pimples

Ann Landers

'Rent a Girls' Screened

Dear Ann Landers: I would like to add something to the discussion in your column about the "Rent-A-Girl Services."

Recently on a TV talk show the director of such a service and one of the girls was interviewed. The director explained that the men who were interested in the services were carefully screened. If their application for female company was accepted they had to sign an agreement that they would pay for meals, entertainment and transportation, and that no sex was expected. If a customer starts to behave in a manner that suggests he would like to violate the agreement, the girl has the right to leave immediately. (The fee of course paid for her company in advance).

Many wives in the audience agreed that they would rather have their travelling husbands take a girl out to dinner and sightseeing than have him prowl the bars alone or go drinking with the boys.

I understand your husband does a lot of out-of-town business. How do you feel about this?—D.R.S. Loraine, Ohio

Dear Loraine: If my husband couldn't think of anything better to do than refer a girl, I'd be deeply disappointed.

Dear Ann Landers: This is for that knucklehead who complained because his wife was too lazy to learn French, read up on the campaign issues and take his aunts to the hospital guild meetings. Don't you realize that by the time you get to your office your wife has just started to do the breakfast dishes and think about what to fix for the two kids who are coming home for lunch? Before she can even think of straightening the house, the baby needs to be fed and the pre-schooler is asking to go to the toilet. She throws in a load of laundry, the dog needs walking, the phone is ringing, and she remembers that she promised to bake cookies for a school fund-raising affair. It hasn't even occurred to you that you thought about dinner yet. Somehow she must get to the store and buy a birthday gift for her six-year-old to take to a party—and the child's dress has to be pressed by 3 a.m.

This is an easy day. The tough days are when one of the children has to be rushed to the hospital for stitches in his head, or the pipe breaks and floods the bathroom, or someone starts a small fire in the playroom. Guys like you give me a gigantic pain in the neck.—Dizzzgusssted

Dear Dizzz: Several women wrote to say the same thing—and some men as well. Most of them who referred to the pain in the neck left elsewhere. About two feet lower. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: I have an embarrassing problem and didn't know what to do about it. It seems silly to go to a doctor because I am not sure that it is a medical thing and I hate to take up a doctor's time.

I am 17 years old. I perspire under my arms something terrific. I've tried every known deodorant and nothing helps. I wear cloth armshields under my dresses and still the sweat pours off me and makes rings under the armholes. I have never known anyone who sweats like this and I would like to know what is the matter with me and what I can do about it—if anything.—Soaking Wet

Dear Soaking: You have hyperhidrosis, which is nothing more or less than excessive sweating. It is caused by strenuous exercise or intense feelings of one kind or another.

See a skin specialist about medication. There are several things you can do to reduce the wetness, and sometimes it can be eliminated completely.

SLICK TRICK

• Sweaters speed-dry on a folding card table drying rack. To make one, saw out the top of an old card table to leave a rim about two inches wide, and nail on a new top of plastic screen. Drying air circulates through screen and sweater, and rack folds conveniently for storage.

SLICK TRICK

• To restore red fireplace bricks to their original rich color, use boiled linseed oil. After washing bricks and allowing them to dry thoroughly, apply the oil with a brush, sparingly, so it will be completely absorbed.

prevented. If he can't wash at school, could he use one of the little saturated paper towelets (put up in small envelopes) to give his face a good wiping off?

In any case, he can wash his face morning, after school and evening, which is probably considerably more than he is doing now. He should use a complexion brush, with a gentle circular motion so that the little bristles can get at the pores and cleanse them. Since the whole scalp is involved in this, he should shampoo twice a week.

With perseverance he can prevent permanent scars.

For all persons concerned with acne, whatever sex or age, my leaflet "Acne—What To Do About It" can be helpful. Write for it in care of this newspaper, enclosing 35 cents for the leaflet and an eight-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Doris: About retirement: My sister has retired and remarried. She spends half her time travelling around the world. She is in glory when travelling.

As for myself, I am much too tired to envy her. Should I resent retirement with my faculties intact, I shall be grateful merely to throw the alarm clock out of the window and be allowed to sleep like Rip Van Winkle. — An Ardent Fan.

Dear Fan: Sounds good — for a career woman who is working overtime. But you won't sleep daytimes — not after the first few weeks.

You'll want something interesting to do, or I'm a monkey's aunt.

The important thing is for you to get enough rest right now as you go along; or you may never reach that happy state where you can choose whether to sleep or move into a second career.

(Have you asked Doris about your dilemma? Perhaps she can suggest a Canadian resource that will help. Write to her in care of this newspaper.)

CP News Roundup

All Anik Systems Go

OTTAWA (CP) — Anik 1 is "going extremely well" and its performance in the temporary elliptical orbits is "exactly as anticipated," Telesat Canada officials said Friday.

The next step for Canada's telecommunications satellite, which was launched Thursday, will be the apogee motor firing (AMF) about 6 p.m. EST Sunday, said R. F. Chisnick, vice-president of engineering and operations for Telesat.

The firing will stop Anik in its orbit at the apogee or "far point" from earth and cause it to assume its fixed position about 22,300 miles above the equator.

Once fixed, Anik will act as a microwave relay station in space. It will bounce signals from Telesat's 27 earth stations and provide a telecommunications network ready by available to all points in Canada.

Strike It Rich

HALIFAX (CP) — With assurances of labor stability and financial arrangements completed, Premier Gerald Regan announced Friday that a $233 million oil refinery will be built in the Canso Strait area of eastern Nova Scotia.

Canada's largest refinery, with a capacity of 200,000 barrels a day, will be built by a company headed by New York industrialist John M. Shaheen, who is also head of another company constructing a 110,000-barrel-a-day refinery at Come-By-Chance, Nfld.

Smoke Up

TORONTO (CP) — Rothmans announced Friday an increase in the wholesale price of cigarettes similar to those announced earlier in the week by Imperial Tobacco Products Ltd.

Rothmans did not say how the increase would affect retail prices but Imperial said its price adjustment will "probably" mean an increase of about two cents a package.

Imperial's increase is effective Nov. 30, the Rothman increase Nov. 27. The increase will make the wholesale price or 1,000 cigarettes $18.79 for regular and $19.22 for king size, up 37 cents each.

TWO HOURS

After preparing foods containing eggs, meat, milk, poultry or salads with dressing serve them within two hours or refrigerate.

Admits Potential Danger

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — A concentration of newspaper ownership is "potentially" undesirable, the general manager of The Canadian Press told the Irving combines trial Friday. But he added, "It would depend entirely on the direction of the newspapers involved."

K. C. Irving Ltd. and three Irving publishing companies are charged in New Brunswick Supreme Court with creating a monopoly of all English-language dailies in the province. Prosecutor Hoyt finished his case Friday after calling 25 witnesses since the opening Oct. 17. The trial resumes here Monday.

Rhodesians Celebrating Independence

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Rhodesia marked the seventh anniversary of its seizure of independence Friday, facing the prospect of renewed negotiations to settle its unilateral declaration of independence dispute with Britain.

In a radio-television address scheduled for tonight, Prime Minister Ian Smith, who led the break from British colonial rule on Nov. 11, 1965, could shed some light on chances of a fresh attempt to negotiate a settlement of the long-deadlocked quarrel.

Following tradition, Smith rang in the new year of independence at midnight, and in a brief address to a crowd of 500 people at a UDI anniversary ball, said:

"May we grow from strength to strength."

In his speech, Smith paid tribute to Rhodesia's friends who had stood by her and supported her through seven "momentous and historical years."

"We've espoused a common ideal—namely, that of trying not only to preserve, but to encourage and perpetuate Western civilization and the standards that go with it and that we all cherish so much."

Despite international trade sanctions, observers say this with higher prices expected for landlocked nation has fared remarkably well.

The gross domestic product rose by 43 per cent between 1965 and 1971, after allowing for inflation. This increase to $1,328 billion from $1,087 billion represents an annual rate of 5.3 per cent.

Balance of payments—the country's biggest problem—could well be offset next year

Oils Spills Tracked By Dust

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP) — General Electric Co. said Thursday its researchers have developed a method of "tagging" seagoing oil shipments with magnetic dust so that pollutors causing oil spills could be identified.

GE's research and development center proposed that oil being loaded onto tankers be tagged with ferrite particles containing iron, zinc and nickel. Each batch of dust would have slightly different magnetic properties GE said, and the properties could be registered as a code.

GE said simple analysis techniques then would permit identification of a polluting vessel at the site of an oil spill.

Stocks Spurt

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market spurted to peak levels Friday, with the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closing up 7.00 at 995.26, an all-time high. Analysts said President Nixon's re-election and hopes for peace spurred the bullish performance.

Enos David Will Not Run

Alderman Enos David, veteran of 20 years in Belleville civic life has made it official. Since last summer the veteran alderman, who has seen long service on school board and city council has intimated that he would not stand for re-election this year.

He has now definitely confirmed that he will not run.

That is looking back over his many years of public life.

Ald. David likes to feel that in some ways he has contributed to a better Belleville.

The retired appliance store owner first saw public service on the Belleville Board of Education of which he served as chairman for one term.

ENOS DAVID

It was during his membership on the board that the idea of a combined urban-rural high school board, taking in the city and surrounding area, was first broached.

The result was the formation of the former Bay of Quinte High School Board in 1952 which was the first such urban-rural board in the province of Ontario.

From board of education Alderman David went to city hall, seeing election first as alderman in 1955 for a two year term. During his first term on council Alderman David was responsible for bringing in the recommendation that eventually saw the city manager form of government established in the city.

Alderman David was re-elected to council in 1957 and, his served continuously for the past 10 years.

During that period he has served as council member on the hospital board and also on the county board of health, and while he never served on parks he is happy about the present development of the city's park system.

Looking ahead, Alderman David said he favors some type of metro government that would see orderly services development for the whole Belleville area.

"It is going to come eventually," he said.

Already he said there was a joint board of health for the county and city there is a board of education looking after the entire county; there is a county welfare department and city - county ownership of the Belleville General Hospital.

He said a metro form of government may not be politically acceptable at the moment but it made sense economically.

Looking back, Alderman David said the city had made progress over the years.

"I have enjoyed every minute of it," he said.

Corke A Candidate

The outspoken ladies' wear merchant has served two terms on city council, from 1960-1965 and for the past three years.

Not one to make pre-election promises, he said:

"Within my wide experience in business and municipal affairs, I would like to continue to serve as alderman."

Mr. Corke is also chairman of the Belleville Industrial Commission and finance chairman of the Board of Belleville General Hospital. He is a member of the Quinte Rotary Club and the Belleville Subordinate Advisory Committee.

BEN CORKE

Originally from Winnipeg, Mr. Corke worked for a retail store chain in northern Ontario for 16 years and with the Bank of Montreal for seven.

He came to Belleville in 1954 and immediately established himself as one of the city's leading merchants. Past president of the Downtown Businessmen's Association, he owns three Front Street ladies' wear stores, Georgia Stone, Marianne's and McNabb's.

A member of the Rotary Club, Mr. Corke is also a past chairman of the United Appeal.

Air Crews To Reunite

TRENTON (Staff) — The Canadian Forces Base here will play host Saturday to a three-day reunion of the 1937 aircrew graduating class of Camp Borden.

In early summer, 1937, 200 young men arrived at the RCAF Camp Borden training school, 90 miles north of Toronto. At that time, the air units were still directly under army commanders in each district. Many of these men were still serving when unification of the forces came into effect in the 1960s.

As graduates of the three-month basic training course, nine months specific training, the class scattered to various RCAF stations from coast to coast.

Members of the class reunited in 1957 and again in 1962, most of them having seen service in training stations, repair depots and active squadrons in Canada, World War Two pools, and unser NATO and United Nations peace-keeping operations.

Streets Closed

TRENTON (Staff) — A one block section of Albert Street, between Palham and Stanley will be closed for the weekend, during sewer installation work. As well, a four-block stretch, from Campbell to Flindall on Dundas Street East, is now closed during road widening and sewer installation operations.

Lord Mayor To Meet Davis

The head of the visiting Lahr delegation will meet personally with Ontario Premier William Davis.

Lord Mayor Dr. Philipp Brucker will visit Mr. Davis while the group is in Toronto Monday for a Queen's Park luncheon.

1872 - - That's Young

Ratsherr Walter Detlling of Lahr points to dates on an old record book in the Hastings County building archives. Both he and Adolf Kohler, Lahr's city manager, found the records relatively modern. Lahr's first recorded document is the deed to Geroldseck castle — dated 1250.

The Intelligencer

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1972

Meyer May Be Lahr Link

Belleville may have a historic link with Lahr.

When the visiting German delegation was inspecting old documents in the Hastings County archives Friday, they came across a map of early Belleville. On it was the location of Meyer's Mill, the city's first industry, built by Captain John Walden Meyers sometime around 1790.

The name struck Oberburgermeister Dr. Philipp Brucker who noted that Lahr's present miller is a man named Meyer. Dr. Brucker and host Mayor J. Russell Scott speculated that Belleville's Capt. Meyers may have been a descendent of the Lahr milling family.

But an expert on Belleville history thinks such a link would be hard to confirm.

"There are an awful lot of Meyers in Germany," says Mrs. Helma Mika, who with her husband Nick compiled Mosaic of Belleville, a documentary of the city's growth.

She says Capt. Meyer's family may well have been German, even though he emigrated to Upper Canada from New York State.

"Unfortunately, little is known about him, she said — he had anything to do with Lahr, it would be hard to prove now."

Both mayors agree, though, that such a link would be the crowning touch to the twinning of the two cities.

Death Intervenes

A death in the family has forced Alderman Ben Corke to abandon his role as chairman of the civic committee that is playing host to the visiting Lahr delegation.

Mr. Corke left today for Winnipeg to attend the funeral of his sister, Mrs. Kathleen McCord, who died Friday, two days after a riding accident. He will return Monday.

Area Men Honored

Two local men, William Thorup of 6 Platt Crescent, Belleville and Frank Hodgen of RR 2, Roslin, have been awarded the highest degree in the York Rite Right of Freemasonry, becoming Knights of the York Cross of Honor. Only 400 of the over four and a quarter million freemasons in North America and the Philippines receive the distinction annually.

Bus Free

Belleville Transit Commission is providing a 63-passenger bus free of charge to transport the eight-member Lahr delegation and city officials on their tour to Barrie, Marmora and other points Saturday, says manager Lewis McMullin. City firemen will act as chauffeurs during the officials' stay.

Contest Winners

Queen Alexandra School had a new creest and a new school song for its 60th birthday. The winners of the contest held in conjunction with the anniversary celebrations were chosen this week as part of the pupil - oriented festivities and activities commencing this month. Chris Westes' design with 1912-1972 incorporated in the crest will be made up for sale later. Pam Woodley was the winner in the school song contest.

Stockton Speaker

Well-known dinner speaker Noel Stockton, will be the guest speaker at the Royal Canadian Legion, Trenton Branch 110 Remembrance Day dinner, to be held Saturday, Nov. 11 at the legion building.

"I hope the communication lines continue through our student exchange, labor unions, Rotary Club and other bodies present in both cities."

Dr. Brucker had a pre-Remembrance Day message for the gathering. After laying a wreath on Belleville's cenotaph only an hour before, he said:

"Both World Wars should not be forgotten, because when one looks to the future, one should also keep in mind the lessons of the past. We wanted to express the fact that we are aware of the men who, for their fatherland, were called upon to lay down their lives."

He hoped the foundation of peace would be laid soon when the two cities begin their student exchange.

"I believe youth are first to learn to understand together. In the future it will be far easier to avoid problems," he said.

Dr. Brucker presented the city with a painting of an ancient church located near Lahr.

Following a luncheon at the Royal Canadian Legion, live guests were taken for a tour of the Hastings County building.

Warden Carman Gibson introduced several county officials and explained the machinery of running Hastings before giving over to a question and answer period.

Dr. Brucker was particularly anxious to know how the county allotted building contracts. He was told they usually went to Hastings employees rather than to contractors because the county could then avoid the contractor's profit margin.

"But if you give it to tender, the contractor has to pay taxes and that would make up the profit," replied the doctor of philosophy.

County officials scratched their heads for a moment, then noted that many projects done by outside labor are the work of Toronto firms.

"In Germany, if a company comes in and stays for more than six months, they pay taxes," replied Dr. Brucker.

The officials agreed such a system has its merits.

In the evening, the delegation was treated to dinner at the Belleville Armory. Host was Major John Innis, Commanding Officer of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Joviality Is Keynote Of German Visit Here

Belleville's newest citizens received a mild scare yesterday after Mayor J. Russell Scott welcomed them to the city. But it was all in fun.

The eight visiting delegates from Lahr — in Canada until Thursday — were studying their certificates of citizenship at a city hall reception when the mayor commented:

"What they really mean is that you are privileged to pay taxes here."

Lahr's Lord Mayor Dr. Philipp Brucker replied he'd be happy to contribute once he was home, to which Herr Adolf Kohler, Lahr's city manager retorted, "He'll pay mine too."

Joviality seems to be the essence of the second half of what both mayors hope will be the twinning of the Canadian and German cities.

The visitors were greeted by a large turnout of community representatives, all of whom could the infectious German spirit of friendship and laughter.

Hastings MP Jack Ellis, representing the federal government, noted that the four visiting city councillors belong to different parties and commented:

"I wonder how you manage with four parties. Look at the problems we're having with three."

Mayor Scott also presented the men with cufflinks and Dr. Brucker's daughter Cornelia with a bracelet. The jewelry was fashioned from Bancroft agate.

The mayor told the delegation:

"I hope the communication lines continue through our student exchange, labor unions, Rotary Club and other bodies present in both cities."

Dr. Brucker had a pre-Remembrance Day message for the gathering. After laying a wreath on Belleville's cenotaph only an hour before, he said:

Hovercraft Tested At CFB Trenton

TRENTON (Staff) — With twin rotary engines and full throttle, and special air cushion inflated, a Bell Aerospace System 20 ton hovercraft, valued at $1 million, hit the waters of the Bay of Quinte at CFB Trenton Friday.

The prototype craft was being tested by Northern Transportation Corporation, a Crown corporation, for the Ministry of Transport. At the base, a simulated patient carrying stimulator was driven onto the hovercraft for the tests. The purpose, explained Captain D. Duffield, a hovercraft pilot with the coast guard in Ottawa, is to determine how smoothly the craft will travel over remote areas.

Based in Port Hope, the crews have been testing the hovercraft on choppy Great Lakes waters for the past several weeks.

Carrying a two - man crew, the hovercraft can reach speeds in excess of 40 knots, carrying 20 tons of cargo in addition to its own weight of 20 tons and travel 320 miles without refueling.

When the trials conclude in October of 1973, the 65 - foot by 35 - foot boat, that rides on a cushion of air contained in a special air cushion complete with ducts and valves for pressure control, will be offered for sale to the ministry of transport for the million dollar price tag.

Only one other hovercraft of its type is made by Bell aerospace, general manager James L. Decker said Friday.

One of two built by the London, Ontario area firm, the hovercraft weighs 20 tons, carries 20 tons and can cruise at 40 knots and has a range of 320 miles.

BCI 'Bad Cats' Blank Moira In COSSA Junior Final

By AL ZABAS
Staff Sportswriter

Whistling, joyous cheering, and the banging of battered red helmets on the roof of the home bound bus resounded in the ears of the victorious BCI "Bad Cats". The Collegians junior football team came away from OSD field with a 26-0 shutout win over Moira Trojans and the COSSA football championship for year '72.

The Collegians' win over the Trojans makes it their second of the year. BCI defeated Moira in the Bay of Quinte finals 13-0, which catapulted them into COSSA semi-final play against Kenner Secondary. Kenner fell to BCI 27-0, earning for the Trojans the playoff their sixth straight win and the finals berth.

The first half of the contest went as BCI defensive coach Casey Soden had predicted. It was a defensive battle. Both teams were stingy in parting with yards, as BCI's fullback Bruce Sutherland gained only 35 yards rushing in the half. Dan Gutaskin, the Trojans' back who played both ways throughout the match, gained even less.

The first scoreboard marking came from BCI, coming from a Larry Wilson single at the end of the first quarter. BCI's major came from Sutherland who crossed the Trojan line behind the blocking of Brian Roach. The half ended with a BCI 7-0 lead.

The Collegians provided the scoreboard with a purpose in the fourth quarter, as Sutherland began the attack on Trojan defenses with a 35 yard boot for a single. Larry Olson followed with a touchdown catch from quarterback Russ Simonds.

The BCI defence held firm in the fourth quarter, as it had throughout the game when with third and inches, the Collegians stopped the Trojans on BCI's 29 yard line. Here Sutherland took over, accepting a handoff from Simonds for a 30 yard gainer along the side lines. The end result of the series was pass to Glenn Watson in the end zone for the "Bad Cats" 21-0 lead. Quarterback Simonds carried BCI's final touchdown over in a quarterback keep.

BCI's main offensive weapon in the match was fullback Sutherland. Despite an ankle injury acquired in practice, he chalked up 185 yards rushing, and 63 yards from pass-ing plays, mostly gained in the second half. Rick Hounslow, Simonds, and Roach moved the yards stick for 40, 35, and 23 yards respectively for the Collegians.

The key to the BCI victory, however, rested with the defence as the Collegians stopped Dan Gutoskie and Rick North from gaining any substantial yardage. Wes Moult, Hounslow, Chris Lachman and Bruce Mikken kept the Trojans to a virtual stand still.

Of his own defensive squad coach Dave Sneddon said, "we were happy with the defensive team for the first three quarters, but the fourth ".

When asked, BCI offensive coach Ken Smith attributed the success of the "Bad Cats" to "the extremely balanced nature of the team.", Russ Simonds had a good arm and good receivers in Larry Wilson and Gord Wilcox. Rugning backs Bruce Sutherland and Brian Roach moved the ball along the ground, but could also catch. Coach Smith said in conclusion that "it makes it easier to coach when they want to play."

North Loses on Pounds

Moira's fullback Ricie North, in an off-tackle run, tried valiantly to gather some yardage, but the BCI Collegians brick wall defensive line held out against the Trojans. BCI junior footballers walked away with the COSSA championship with a 26-0 victory over Moira Trojans, in Friday's match. Moira, who defeated Peterborough's Adam Scott for the COSSA championship in 1969, failed to move the ball against the Collegians, while BCI's Bruce Sutherland, North's counterpart had an outstanding day.

Quinte Coach Bows Out Winner As Saints Win COSSA Crown

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Editor

Rick Locke's coaching swan song was short, but sweet. Very sweet.

It took Ken Vos only 11 seconds to write the lyrics. The tune, that took a little longer, but the Quinte Saints managed to compose it.

RICKE LOCKE

Locke, coaching in what he claims is his final game at Quinte, bowed out with his second consecutive COSSA senior football championship. It came at the expense of Adam Scott Lions who were edged 22-19 by the Saints in a thrilling Central Ontario senior final.

Vos played the key role in Quinte's victory. The big interior linebacker watched the second - half kick-off settle into his hands and 11 seconds later crossed the Adam Scott goal with an 85-yard touchdown return that gave the Saints a 13-13 lead — the first time that they had led in the football game.

The head Quinte coach, who sited difficulties in maintaining his duel role of phys-ed teacher and football mentor as the reason for his retirement, compared this year's win with his initial COSSA victory in 1971. "Last year it was pretty well decided by the second half, but this game had everything — blocked punts, interceptions — everything. The boys had to come back and they did a great job."

The Saints indeed had to come back, trailing 13-0 in the first quarter, as Adam Scott displayed the talent that brought them an undefeated season enroute to the Kawartha championship.

Fullback Cam Patterson, a standout throughout the contest, plowed over from the one-yard line to give the Peterborough school an early 6-0 lead. Later in the opening quarter it was Craig Wood tallying a converted major from five - yards out to up the count to 13-0. The play had been set up when Bill Armstrong intercepted a Rick Meagher pass on the Quintes 40 and the Lions marched to the five on the running of Patterson and Bob Wasson.

Meagher turned things around for Quinte in the second by heaving a 25-yard scoring pass to flanker Steve McDowell who made a brilliant, diving catch on the goal line. He later passed 10-yards to John Masterson and added the convert to make the score 13-13 at the half.

The electrifying 85-yard touchdown by Vos tended to obscure his other efforts. He spent much of the second half in the Adam Scott backfield pressuring quarterback Jim Pollard on blitzes as well as picking off a key interception and filling in offensively when needed.

"Ken was hanging back in the first part of the game and letting the runners come to him. That's one of the reasons they were running the ball so well. In the second half he started playing the kind of football that he's been playing all year for us," said Locke who coaches the Saints' defence.

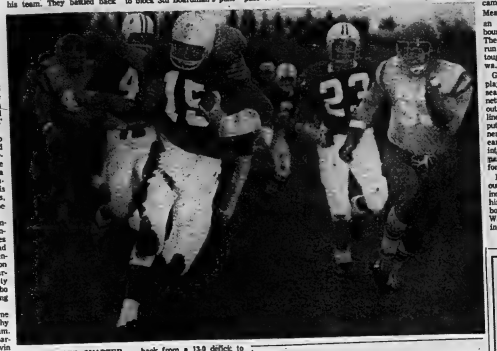
Meagher jumped Quinte into a 22-13 lead with a 30-yard field goal in the fourth quarter, that proved to be the winning points. "He's just a super ballplayer," said offensive coach Paul Paddon of his quarterback. "He can pass, scramble, kick — anything he has to."

Paddon, who calls the offensive plays via shuttling flankers, drew some accolades from his own from the head coach. "He teaches fundamentals as well as (Jack) Sisson did," said Locke in comparing the Ottawa University graduate to the man who fashioned a great coaching record at Quinte.

Losing coach Bill Bourne complimented the winners by saying, "They're a good team. They played fine football, particulary number 70 (Kevin Joudrey), number 22 (Paul McQuaid) and their quarterback." At the same time he felt that, "they didn't run us off the field. We missed with a few passes and they got a few breaks."

The Adam Scott coach certainly wasn't overestimating his team. They battled back in the fourth quarter when Steve Pepper broke through to block Stu Boardman's punt and set the stage for Pollard to throw a 32-yard touchdown pass to end Dave Eves. The Lions' receiver caught the ball on the rebound off two defending players in the end zone for the final points of the 22-19 game.

One of Quintes' "breaks" came on the next series when Meagher fumbled the ball on an end run only to have it bounce into McQuaid's hands. The Saints were then able to run out the clock on some tough inside running by Joudrey.



Guard John Coody, who played for Adam Scott last season, and tackles Eric Tugnette and Mike McKenna were outstanding on the offensive line. Defensively it was as Vos put it, "a team effort." Corner linebacker Dave Taylor earned special recognition by intercepting a third quarter pass to stall a scoring drive for the Lions.

For Adam Scott the standouts were Patterson for his inside running Pollard with his slick work with Peterborough's option sweeps and Wasson who played both ways in the game.

Locke retired with four Bay of Quinte Championships and two COSSA titles in his five seasons as head coach.

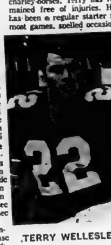
ADAM SCOTT QUARTERBACK Jim Pollard winces as he is tackled from behind by Paul McQuaid of the Quinte Saints in Friday's COSSA senior football final. The Saints battled back from a 13-0 deficit to edge the Peterborough champions 22-19 for their second Central Ontario championship in as many years.

Wellesley Whips Injury Jinx

From the Ottawa Bureau of The Intelligencer



OTTAWA — Terry Wellesley does the 4-yard sprint in 4.6 seconds. He used to be clocked at 4.5 but he doesn't really think he is slowing up. It just that he is putting some weight on his six foot frame and is now up to 210 pounds.

The 23 - year - old Ottawa Rough Rider half-back, a resident of Belleville for seven years, is looking forward eagerly to the play-offs confident that the Riders can get past Montreal in the Sudden death semi-final played today in Ottawa and upset the favored Hamilton Tiger Cats in the home - and - home eastern final of the CFL.SN S

In an interview with the Ottawa bureau of The Intelligencer, Terry recalled his years in Belleviflem Born in Hamilton, the Wellesley family moved to Belleville when Terry was 13 as his fathern an Ontario Provincial Policer officer, was transferred to thec Belleville detachment.

He attended Quinte Secondiary School and in loyi wasc selected to attend the Rough Riders' high school camp after starrino for his school team. Granted an athletic scholarship, he attended the University of Colorado in 1968 and 1oy9 and then transferred to Tennessee Tech for his senc ond year. He returned to Ottawa in 1970 and made the Rough Riders as a rookie running back, and started in 12 of the xr games that season. His best game was against British Columbia Lions when he scored three touchdowns.

The following year was not a happy one for Terry. He injured a knee in a predseasone game, tearing both the cartilage and ligaments, which forced an operation. However, he managed to get back into the line-up for the last half of the 1971 season but was used sparingly.

TERRY WELLESLEY

This year Terry has matured and is happy that the knee has held up remarkably well and has not given him any trouble. Outside of a couple of charley-horses, Terry has remained free of injuries. He has been a regular starter in most games, spelled occasionally by Skip Eaman and they sometimes alternate to bring in plays from coach Jack Gotta on the sidelines.

Terry's mother died last year and his father was transferred again, this time to Oakville but Terry visits Belleville from time to time as he has several close friends who live therem He used to be employed by Wilson's Sporting Goods in Belleville. He plans to look for employment this winter although has no definite plans at the moment. His thoughts are on football now and then he plans to get married in the spring to an Oakville girl, Gini Shilves. c

"We should be able to beat Montreal in the semi-final as we have beaten them three times this season," said Terry before today's game. "but it is a little hard to get the players up for a game when we are so heavily favoredm I don't have any predictions about the Hamilton series. They are a good team but we can beat them. We've got a good ball club and the spirit is greatm" s

Terry's chief asset is his speed and in school he ran the 10o yards in 9.8 seconds and has been rated one of the fastest men on the Riders this year, only a step behind speedster Hugh Oldham. So far he has scored seven touchdowns and was upset that another one scored against the Toronto bergos was called back. As a slotback he is used principally as a wide receiver and assistant coach Jay Fry says Terry has a great pair of hands. Sometimes he runs the ball from scrimmage although the bulk of this work is done by Art Cantrelle and Allan Thompson.

JUST ANOTHER OF OUR NEAT IDEAS

For one thing, there's a lot more inside, Inside. We're giving you plenty of legroom up front. And fantastic headroom.

We've also done a nice thing for your nose. Our new windshield is pushed way forward, and curved. It's actually 42% larger.

For comfort, the seats, too, are curved.

And for safety, inertia type seatbelts buckle up as standard equipment.

The padded dash is completely redesigned. To be read in a flash.

Getting in and out of the back seat of the Bug is now pretty easy even for non-athletic types.

And we've had some very fresh ideas about air. And how to circulate it. Our remarkable improved ventilation system even de-fogs the side windows.

Altogether, the interior of the 1973 Super Beetle is so radically different, you'd have a hard time knowing it was a Beetle, except for the steering wheel insignia.

There remain, however, certain things that will give you the clue that you're driving a VW.

Economy. Dependability. Our good old never-give-up character.

The beauty of the new inside may be its beauty. But the fact that it comes in the car it does, is the most beautiful part of all.

Few things in life work as well as a Volkswagen.

Bobcats Still Unbeaten on Road

Belleville Bobcats preserved their no-loss road record last night, as they defeated Markham Waxers 3-1. The win places the Bobcats in a second place tie with the Waxers.

Centre Rick Meagher provided the Bobcats with the clinching goal in at 19:12 of the third period, as he tucked the puck in to Waxer's open net.

Wally Dainard opened the scoring for the Bobcats, as he beat Waxer goalie Mike Locicero at 5:18 of the first period. Markham's Terry McMillan tied it up 1-1 with his first period goal.

Andy Ricketts, who played his first game with the Bobcats Friday, scored in the second with a Mark Coates assist, to break the tie and give Belleville a 2-1 lead.

In a close hard hitting contest, with only nine penalties called throughout, the Bobcats outshot the Waxers 48-36.

Rollins Tied

The Rollins Minor Peewee All-stars managed to tie 3-3 with the Brockville Panthers at Wellington Friday night.

Andy Plane had two goals to his credit. His second came with Rollins' goalie out, and 20 seconds left in the game. Belleville's other goal came from Stephen Pearce.

Oakville goalie Claude Taliefter's prone position in Senior A hockey action last night was not caused by slippery ice, but by a fine save made on a Belleville Quinte centre Doug Senior shot. Oakville defenseman Ray Dupont looks off into the corner for the deflected puck. Taliefter minded the nets consistently for the Oaks in their 10-4 defeat of the Quintes.

Oaks Late-- Quintes Later

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Editor

Oakville Oaks showed up 17 minutes late for their scheduled 9 p.m. starting time Friday night.

They needn't have worried about the delay however, Belleville Quintes didn't make an appearance until 43 minutes and 46 second, after that.

That was the time it took for the Quintes to muster enough resistance to make the label of a Senior A hockey game stick, and by that point, it was a case of far too little; much too late.

The Oaks skated around, over and through the Quintes to build a 10-1 lead before the home team was able to get untracked with three unanswered goals for a final count of 10-4.

Oakville coach Leg Duff could sympathize with the Quintes. His club had suffered a six game losing streak at the start of the season before coming on to win four of their next five games including last nights Hockey is a game of mistakes and forbes and tonight everything was going for us," said Duff.

He feels that his team's recent surge is due to the fact that "we're working better as a team," and also that, "we're skating when we're standings around we get murdered."

The Oaks in general and Ken Knutson in particular were in high skating gear Friday. They fashioned a 3-0 lead at the end of the first, increased it to 8-1 after two periods before coasting home with the xp-i win.

Knutson was the driving force in Oakville's attack netting four goals. The left winger started things rolling at 2.12 when he picked up a loose puck along the boards and dished a 35-foot slapshot into the top right hand corner.

He added his second consecutive marker by working from the corner to beat Ron Avery with a backhand and upped the count to 3-0 by counting from the slot at 13.23.

A pair of second period goals by Hank Monteith made the score 5-0 before Lionel Baffy beat Oaks' goalie Claude Taillefer with a low shot from 15-feet out.

In the final frame, the Quintes finally came to life as Greg Marchen blasted a point shot past Teillefer's glove hand at 12.46. Al Ferguson on a rebound and John McConnell with a deflected shot from behind the Oakville net scored the loses obbs' goals.

Goalie Ron Jury couldn't be faulted for the high score as the winners only outshot Belleville 35-25 but had much better scoring chances. Jury's only serious blunder came on the sixth Oakville tally when he raced to clear a loose puck only to bank it onto the stick of Yvan Faunier, who shot it into the empty net.

Doug Perry, playing his second Senior A game saw several shifts on the Belleville defence. While he was caught up the ice on Oakville's eighth goal which resulted from a 3-1 break it was at least an aggressive mistake. He was trahped in the opposing end while taking a run at an Oaks' defenceman.

Coach Wayne Brown of Belleville lied one comment about the game . . . "I don't want to talk about it."

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

SUNDAY, Nov. 12

Aries (March 21-April 19): Diversion is the main idea—get out of familiar ruts, find a new place to go, share some favorite pastime, invite visitors.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Be alert and prepare for your observance of community customs. Let your attention be devoted to building better personal relations.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): You're on the opening edge of a fresh cycle of emotional expression. People you don't know well have much to offer.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): A day dedicated to loved ones brings good cheer—something to remember and something to work on for several days to come.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Gather congenial people about you. Find out more of current circumstances rather than try forcing any special arrangements.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 23): Playing it safe comes naturally; follow impulse rather than habit. Sharing home enjoyment with good friends is preferable to travel.

Libra (Sept. 22-Oct. 22): Bridge the gaps between people who can aid each other. Offer amends in any matter you may have inadvertently let drift.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Let outside demands wait, get going early and deepening relations with those you love. Settle details on group or family plans.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Short-range projects in nearby places promise well. Be sure to fulfill your community's opinion on you.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): From relations formed over a long period arise all the monetary contacts or openings or whatever you really need later.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Letting well enough alone gets to be a fine art. Give your friends a rifle suggestion, see how they develop leadership as a group.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Religious ceremonies turn out occupy satisfying. Share your personal joys and aspirations with those you love.

MONDAY, NOV. 13

Aries (March 21-April 19): Whether you see friends as peacemakers or busybodies, they are with you today. Let them do their bit, join them socially.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Influential people are obstacles to be avoided or by-passed. Your hard work builds a strong cornerstone of your quality.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Your attention tends to be scattered; more delicately balanced features of life and your career expression.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Skip the way-out speculation but move to improve your financial strength. Expect little help from those who have more resources.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Stress on personal contacts keeps you busy. Find time for fundamentals, a word to distant friends and meditation for guidance.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 23): Group effort is worth your contribution, compliance. Diligence brings you out near the top honors. Seek special diversions.

Libra (Sept. 22-Oct. 22): Your ability shows in creative endeavors. People of greater authority need careful courtesy. Odd questions find abrupt answers.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Charity continues to begin at home. You are in no position to help anyone until you've adequately taken care of your own.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Amid a long dreary spell you may suddenly come alive with a good idea and the energy to put it into effect.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Decisions on personal affairs take precedence, distract, you from business until you get them worked out.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Pick up your share of the work quickly, help put together what remains of the weekend's unfinished business.

'Contamination' Balks PBI Test

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Some 30 years ago my wife was operated on for her thyroid. She began taking thyroid pills.

Last year a PBI was taken and it showed contamination. The doctor told her to stop taking the thyroid pills as her blood was contaminated.

What does this mean? When will it become normal? What are the ill effects of contaminated blood?—L.S.F.

The PBI (protein-bound iodine test) simply showed your wife's blood was "contaminated," but only in the sense that something was interfering with the chemical analysis sought. It does not mean she is "contaminated" in the sense that we usually think of and use the term.

Certain medications, iodine for example, may possible contaminants that can throw off test results. Even iodine from iodized salt or mixed vitamin-mineral preparations can cause this "contamination."

Most likely, her doctor has ordered her out of the thyroid medicine so that he can get the readings he desires in a subsequent test. Four to six weeks is the usual period of abstinence before the new test can be made —minus the "contamination."

It's a case of a word meaning one thing in medical talk and quite another in everyday conversation.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am desperately trying to breast-feed my five-week-old son but I don't have enough milk. Is there anything I can do or take to increase the milk supply? I want to nurse him so much, but the way things are, he is not getting half the milk he needs. —S.M.

Assuming that you aren't starving yourself, there is no known method of arbitrarily increasing milk supply. Sucking stimulates the process of feeding the baby—is the only way.

I'm all in favor of breast-feeding, so do your best, but consult your doctor about supplementary feeding with a formula which can be done, and has to be done at times, because some women just can't produce enough milk.

The baby's nutrition is the important thing. Chief clues to whether he is getting enough are weight gain and his general behavior.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My son, 17, underwent surgery for a hernia on one side. All his physical activities are now curtailed and he has been cautioned by his doctor to be careful not to develop a hernia in the same area or the other side.

Although he has never been athletically inclined, he did enjoy bowling, attended a weightlifting class. Odd ear-gearing and had a part-time job that entailed some lifting of cartons.

I do not want him to grow soft and flabby or to live in fear, and would appreciate some advice on normal physical activities in the future.—R.B.

For two or three months after surgery he should be careful of any activity that puts a strain on the lower abdomen. Weightlifting certainly should be eliminated.

Lifting the cartons would depend on their weight. If it can be done easily, all right. Bowling and gardening would be fine.

How long did his doctor say to limit his activity?

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can a 3-M.M.

No. That's not what it's designed for.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1♦	2♦	3♦	3♥
Pass	4♠	Pass	4♥
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead — seven of diamonds.

It is not easy to find the winning line of play in this deal where South wiggled his way to four hearts on the bidding shown.

West led a diamond. East winning with the ace and returning a diamond. Declarer ruffed, played a club to the ace, then trumped a club on which West's king fell.

There was no reason South could now do to make the best of a bad break in the trump suit of trumps he would be limited to eleven tricks, since neither the clubs nor the spades could successfully be established. And if he didn't draw two rounds of trumps, but tried instead to crossruff the hand, he would eventually find West's queen of trumps an insurmountable obstacle to completion of his goal.

Actually, South could have made the slam, after ruffing the diamond at trick two, had he immediately cashed the A-K of trumps. East would have been forced to part with his last diamond on the second trump lead, in order to keep spades and clubs both under maximum control.

He then could have led the ten of diamonds from dummy, planning to ruff, if East would have been forced into a fatal discard:

If he discarded a spade, South would establish his spade by ruffing two of them in dummy and in that way put an end to the matter.

If he discarded a club, South would cash the ace of spades, ruff a club, cash the ace of spades, ruff a spade, and then ruff another club to establish dummy's club.

Either way, East would have no bee to the pressure put upon him. The apparently innocuous acts of ruffing the ten of diamonds would be more than East could successfully withstand.

Atlanta Answers Hockey Questions

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

If there was any question hockey would survive in the south, it has been dispelled at Atlanta.

The new National Hockey League franchise, which hadn't won at home but previously managed three ties in five games at the Omni, their new ice palace, broke the proverbial ice in a big way Friday night.

The Flames scored four third-period goals to swamp the visiting Minnesota North Stars 5-1 and move into a fourth-place tie with Pittsburgh Penguins in the NHL's West Division.

It marked the sixth victory of the season for coach Bernie Geoffrion's young Flames and came with 12,066 fans in the 16,378-seat arena.

Hockey is new to Atlanta, but the conglomerate of veterans and youngsters put together by Geoffrion and general manager Cliff Fletcher has produced an exciting game that has caught the imagination of the Georgia capital.

The Flames already have nearly 7,000 season subscribers, and if the fans of the operation hasn't been surprise enough for team management, their lofty position in the standings is.

"Sure I'm surprised," Geoffrion says. "We told young hockey players and molded them.

"I'm very strict on discipline. I want hard work. I just have to make them believe they're good. I have young players. They're very talented.

"I push them and I want them to believe in themselves then they play for me. If not, they go."

One of the big shooters on Geoffrion's Flames, Bob Leiter, is hardly a rookie. But the 31-year-old veteran is playing like one after years on the fringe of the major circuit with Boston Bruins and Pittsburgh.

Leiter scored twice against the North Stars and brought his season's total to nine in 18 games. He scored only 14 in his first full season with Pittsburgh last year.

While the Flames are a surprise fixture in the West race, the division leaders, Los Angeles Kings, hope to stretch their unbeaten string tonight in Montreal against the Canadiens, leaders in the East.

The Kings, with eight straight wins and a tie, are three points in front of Chicago Black Hawks and Philadelphia Flyers. The Flyers are at home against Buffalo Sabres tonight while Pittsburgh entertains Vancouver Canucks. Toronto Maple Leafs visit St. Louis Blues. California Golden Seals are at New York Rangers and New York Islanders at Minnesota.

The Flames return to the Omni Sunday against Vancouver, Montreal is in Boston, Los Angeles visits the Rangers, Detroit Red Wings are at Chicago, Pittsburgh in Buffalo and California at Philadelphia.

Barrie Beats Germany

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Barrie flyers handed the west German National its third defeat in the final game of a four-game series against Ontario Hockey Association Senior A clubs Friday night.

The Flyers bounced the west Germans 6-2, scoring four goals in the second period to break a 2-2 deadlock.

The Flyers took a 2-0 lead late in the first period. The West German team tied the score, getting both their goals in the first two minutes of the second period.

The Flyers then replied with four unanswered goals before the end of the period to complete the scoring.

The Flyers outshot the visitors, who return to Germany Sunday, 38-37 before a crowd of 2,703.

Eagleson Unfair?

OTTAWA (CP) — The World Hockey Association has filed an unfair labor practice suit against the National Hockey League Players Association and its representative Allan Eagleson.

WHA president Gary Davidson told a news conference here Thursday Eagleson has received "certain benefits" from NHL management.

He said that Bobby Orr Enterprises, who Eagleson is associated with, had received benefits from the NHL because Orr Enterprises controlled some television rights to the recent Canada-Russia hockey series.

"In the United States if you have labor representatives who receive benefits back from management it invalidates your contract," he said.

He said the WHA would seek to invalidate all NHL contracts because Eagleson, as representative of the players association, had received benefits from management.

Hijackers Mad

Day of Fear Spent in Sky

MIAMI, Fla. (CP) — Their 28-hour, 3,000-mile flight of terror ended, passengers aboard a hijacked jetliner have returned from Cuba with bizarre tales of three "deranged" black sky pirates.

They also had words of praise for the Southern Airways crew which landed the crippled DC-9 on a foam-covered Havana runway after a flight that took it as far north as Toronto.

Another Southern DC-9 returned the 27 passengers and four crew members to Miami and finally to their original destinations Sunday after an attempt by FBI sharpshooters to halt the hijacking failed Saturday night and forced the emergency landing in Cuba.

All three hijackers were taken into custody by Cuban officials at Havana. Passengers said Cuban authorities also confiscated ransom money demanded and collected by the hijackers from Southern. One figure for the ransom total was $2 million but this could not be confirmed.

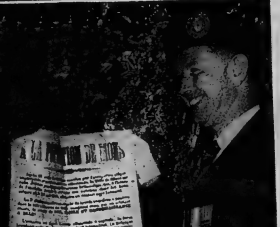
"Everyone thought they would be dead in an hour," said passenger Gale Buchanan at a Miami hospital recalling how FBI agents shot out four of the plane's tires as it prepared for takeoff after a refuelling stop at Orla , Fl.

Four Hurt

Buch , 35, of Auburn, Ala., who suffered a sprained knee, was one of four persons injured during the hijacking. Co-pilot Billy Johnson, 37, mayor of College City, Ark., was shot in the shoulder by one of the hijackers.

Buchanan said the hijackers acted in a bizarre manner during the circuitous, three-nation flight. He said they alternately handed out fistfuls of ransom money, forced male passengers to remove their pants and shot the co-pilot after threatening to put a bullet in your head.

The hijackers, reported to be armed with guns and grenades, had demanded a $10 million ransom for the plane and its passengers. An undisclosed amount of money was given to the sky pirates during a stop at Chattanooga, Tenn., Saturday. Southern refused to say how much money had been given to them.



There also were several other unanswered points:

—Were the hijackers screened for weapons when they boarded the Southern jet at Birmingham, Ala., shortly before they commandeered the plane Friday night? Southern said metal detectors were being used, but they said they had been told not to reveal whether screening devices had been used on the hijackers. A Southern ticket agent told The Associated Press, however, that all passengers had been screened.

—Will Cuba return the ransom money and the hijackers to the United States? Havana radio made no mention of their possibility. The Cuban radio had not mentioned, either, the possible return of four other hi-

Catholic Veterans Form Own Army

BELFAST (AP) — Another private army is emerging in Northern Ireland, this time composed of former Roman Catholic servicemen who say they are banding together for protection from the Protestants. The province remained relatively quiet Sunday night, but police said a man was shot in the head and seriously wounded in the countryside outside Belfast. The Catholic Ex-Servicemen's Association, which claims 20,000 members, announced Sunday it is forming active "defensive" units to patrol areas of Belfast. Members of the new force will wear uniforms but the association said they would not be armed.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — When police and firemen responded to an alarm at an apartment Saturday, they knocked on the door and somebody inside said: "We were baking some cookies and they burned." Police smelled a strange odor and decided to investigate. The found brown chunks and crumbs on the oven. But, it wasn't the remnants of burned cookies. Narcotics investigators identified the substance as hashish. About 30 pounds of hashish, valued at $48,000 in street sales, was found in the apartment, police said. Airline Pilots' Strike Is Possible

TORONTO (CP) — The FBI air-sky who shot out the tires of a hijacked airliner on the weekend performed a "fully dangerous and irresponsible act," the president of the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association said Sunday night.

Chris Simpson of Montreal, president of the 2,000-member association, said in an interview that the shooting at the aircraft took off from Orlando, Fla., was hazardous because rubber from the tires might have been sucked into the engine intake, killing the engines and causing the DC 9 to crash.

The aircraft, with 27 passengers aboard, landed safely at Havana. The passengers were unharmed but the co-pilot was shot in the shoulder by one of the hijackers.

Captain Jackson called for detection equipment at airports to check passengers and their luggage and said another worldwide strike may be called by the International Federation of Airline Pilots to its meeting in Mexico City next month unless action is taken to stop hijackings.

"Airlines are simply not going to fly. If countries and governments are not going to be concerned with passengers then ever members are going to refuse they're going to make it safe by simply not operating.

"This is a very real possibility right now unless nations get together and sign a new

Haig Will Report to Nixon On His Mission to Saigon

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's special emissary to Saigon returns today amid widespread expectation that adviser Henry Kissinger soon will be sent for another peace negotiating session in Paris.

Gen. Alexander Haig was due to report to Nixon following his homecoming after two days of talks with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu and short stops in Cambodia and South Korea. The U.S. embassy described the talks with Thieu as "cordial and constructive."

Nixon returned to Washington from Key Biscayne, Fla., Sunday night for a few hours' stay before proceeding to his Camp David, Md., retreat.

Kissinger weekended in New York, seeing a Broadway play and a professional football game after which he mingled in the locker room with quarterback Joe Namath and others of the New York Jets who had beaten Buffalo Bills 41-3.

Just when Kissinger will head for Paris to meet again with North Vietnam's Le Duc Tho remains a secret. Administration officials maintained their air of confidence, however, about moving toward final accord on ending the war.

Kissinger said Oct. 26 that remaining issues could be straightened out in "one more negotiating session lasting three or four days. Since then, administration officials have left open the possibility that Kissinger may need more than one parley with Tho.

Hanoi envoy Xuan Thuy announced a further Kissinger-Tho meeting in a Paris interview during the weekend, though he held to North Vietnam's position that the session should be devoted to procedures for signing the proposed nine-point pact—not altering it.

Haig's Saigon visit was a further Nixon move to overcome Thieu's objections to the peace plan.

Hydro May Lose Present Autonomy

TORONTO (CP) — A provincial government committee proposed today that Ontario Hydro be stripped of its autonomy and made a Crown corporation answerable to the government and the legislature.

In an 80-page report, the committee, under chairman John B. Cronyn, also suggested that the proposed corporation include representatives of consumers, and that environmental and other costs be part of the fee consumers pay for electricity.

Adding environmental costs would add to the costs of power and eliminate Hydro's current policy of providing "power at cost."

The report, unveiled by Premier William Davis at a news conference, said Hydro policy should be directed at development.

The report of the eight-member committee, which began its study last winter, also proposed that Hydro establish ad hoc citizen committees to provide for public participation in decisions to locate generating and transmitting facilities.

The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario is a fully autonomous utility supplying power at cost. Its sales have doubled every decade since the early 1920s, and the commission forecasts a growth in demand for electrical energy to 45,000 megawatts by 1991 from 12,950 this year.

In a dissenting opinion, committee member Andrew Frame disagreed with the proposal to replace the commission with a Crown corporation, saying such a move would make the utility less responsive to public demands.

He also disagreed with the recommendation to give Hydro authority for distribution of electric power, now vested in the municipalities.

MPs Told to Play It Tough

NDP to Decide Commons Strategy

TORONTO (CP) — The New Democratic Party was looking at its first post election caucus today to decide its strategy for the next session of Parliament after getting caucus advice Sunday to stand tough against the minority Liberal government.

The party's federal council met behind closed doors here Sunday to assess the recent election campaign, and the decision to call a balanced Parliament, and decided that then, should be no compromise with the government, even at the expense of another general election.

In the process, Leader Davis Lewis received what he termed an "overwhelming expression of confidence."

The federal council, comprising of some 30 party members from all 10 provinces, spent the entire day looking back over the campaign, suggesting some changes for the future and, there particularly, deciding how the 31-member Parliamentary caucus should conduct itself when Parliament opens.

"The message was absolutely clear," said one delegate. "There is no way we can compromise party principles, even to save the country from another election."

He said that several delegates, particularly those from the West, argued that the party would suffer irreparable damage if there was any suggestion of a compromise.

The council ordered its financial committee to start looking into another fund-raising drive for a possible early election. The meeting was told that the party completed this campaign some $40,000 to $50,000 in debt—better than many predicted.

"We are better off than we think," Mr. Lewis told reporters. "We can always raise more money."

Today's caucus meeting was described by some MPs as a "carry-over" from the Sunday session when non-elected party members offered opinions on how the MPs should act in the new session.

"And the advice is clear," said one MP. "We are going to have to eliminate the myth that we are afraid of an immediate election and will hold the Liberals in power.

"We are going to be a lot tougher than many people expect."

Mr. Lewis said that after today's meeting it might be possible for him to "make a more refined statement" on the party's aims.

FBI Shot Out Tires of Jet

jackers who commandeered an Eastern Air Lines Jet to Havana last month. The four were Charles Fuller, a former employee of the U.S. commerce department; his two sons, and a fourth man.

FBI Silent

—Why did the FBI order its marksmen to shoot the tires of the hijacked Southern DC-9 and endanger the lives of the passengers and crew? An FBI spokesman declined comment.

A carload of FBI sharpshooters followed a serving truck which was injecting oil and fuel into the DC-9 after it landed at Orlando, Fla. Pilot Billy Bob Hearn, later praised by all the passengers for his coolness and brilliant flying, had told Orlando airport he was dangerously low on oil for his right engine and that the plane need refueling.

Police and family members identified the hijackers as Melvin Charles Cale, 21, of Oak Ridge, Tenn.; his half brother, Lewis Moore, 27, of Detroit, and Henry Jackson, 25, also of Detroit.

The FBI here said the U.S. attorney's office in Birmingham had been authorized to file air-piracy charges against the Cale was described as an es-capee from the Nashville Community Work Release Center.

Jackson and Moore were described as close friends who began crime together after stealing a $4-million lawsuit in which they accused Detroit police of brutality. They were freed on $500 bond in a rape case last month.

Buchanan said it was the hijacker called "Henry" who shot Johnson and the FBI agent opened fire on the plane's tires in Orlando.

Co-pilot Johnson "said in a Miami hospital that the FBI gunfire "really provoked the hijackers."

"They told me they were going to kill me in front of everyone to make an example out of me."

Buchanan, said the pilot, Capt. Hasis of La Grange, Texas, was "a very courageous person as I ever met. He insisted confidence."

Radio Havana described Hass' landing as "an outstanding job."

One in Ten Gets Deer

TWEED (Special) — One hunter in every 10 got his deer during the hunting season now closed south of Highway 7, the ministry of natural resources reports.

Ronald Baldwin, wildlife management officer reported 1,819 licensed hunters in the district. He checked checks at Northbrooke and Eldorado revealed that 196 deer had been shot to date. The season is now closed south of Highway 7, but continues until Nov. 14 north of the highway.

Mr. Baldwin reported that several bucks have been shot, the largest a 10-point, 1½ year-old specimen.

Spinning Mill Files Bankrupt

TRENTON (Staff) — Cosmos Imperial Mills Ltd., has been appointed interim receiver for Cosmos. He says Cosmos has a continuing line of bank credit to cover all requirements for goods and services from Nov. 6. The interim receiver will undertake payment for all commitments from that date.

The company said the reorganization was the result of continuing losses.

Trenton plant manager Clifford Baker said it was hoped the closure announcement, his company has not been able to keep steady workers because of too-generous unemployment benefits. He said about 100 of his workers were steady, long - term employees, but the plant had a crippling turnover of its remaining workers.

According to Mr. Baker, they would work until unemployment benefits were built up, and then quit. He says it takes a worker at the cotton mill about six months to learn the ropes, and begin paying his way in the company.

Last week, word had it that the Trenton plant would close in January. Under this reorganization period it is doubtful if the decision to close the 42 - year - old factory will change.

Meeting Tonight

But in Tyendinaga township, council members have arranged to hold a candidates' meeting anyway.

The townhall meeting will get underway at eight o'clock tonight.

Civilization's Disease Dental Caries (Cavities)

Fermentable carbohydrate foods with a high sugar sucrose content are believed to be the chief cause of producing dental caries. Candies down on sweets and other sucrose-containing snacks is one of the first rules of dental health education. Strengthening the hard glossy acitable enamel of the tooth is also important, and this is helped by the fluoridation of drinking water.

The next preventive measure is in reducing, by vigorous brushing, the amount of dental plaque that accumulates at the base of teeth and gum junctions. Dental Caries start underneath this plaque.

The brushing also helps to eliminate inflammation of the gums and reduce calculus which could lead to disease of the gums.

"I've given them 13 years, and that's enough," he said in announcing his retirement from the board of education.

Mr. McKibbon served on both the Belleville P.S.S. board and the Bay of Quinte District High School Board, before formation of the county board in 1969. He was appointed to the county board in late 1970 to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. Ruth Hepburn, who moved to Prince Edward county. Mr. McKibbon was elected to represent Belleville for the two year term 1971-1972.

War Memories Recalled

"Our dead are never lost to us unless we forget them."

With those words taken from a Scottish gravestone, Brig.-Gen. James Melville summed up the sentiments of hundreds of war veterans attending Saturday night's Remembrance Day Banquet at Legion Hall.

As guest speaker, the Glasgow born general, retired since 1968, regaled his audience with a series of anecdotes collected during his 38 years in the Royal Canadian Army and, later, Canadian Armed Forces.

The Scottish accent was still detectable but Gen. Melville made it clear his allegiance was to Canada.

He spoke about the 50th anniversary of the liberation of Mons, France, which he attended as commandant of Canadian forces. When O Canada was played, he said, a rousing chorus went up from the French spectators all around and he was overwhelmed with a feeling of pride, despite the fact that eight other countries were being honored.

He earlier had presented Howard Kokesh, chairman of the Veterans of Belleville Council, with an original poster proclaiming the liberation of Mons in 1918.

Gen. Melville did not dwell heavily on the sad memories of war, except to note that more than 110,000 Canadians died for their countries in World Wars I and II and in Korea.

He had praise for the treatment of veterans in this country.

"Veterans are not slighted in Canada. We have a great government, a great country and they do care for our veterans," he said.

High spot of Gen. Melville's address came when he invited all those who had served to stand and recite the Oath of Allegiance. Only wives and a few members of the younger generation remained seated as the veterans — three more than 90 years old — repeated the verse word for word.

The banquet was attended by 40 of the 77 First World War veterans invited.

Here They Are

Royal Canadian Legion Remembrance Day dinner speaker, ex-member of the British 8th Army, Noel Stockton, personnel director at UIC, Belleville, couldn't get the polish quite right on his service medals in time for Saturday night. Here, his wife Margaret pulls them from her purse for husband Noel, as Royal Candian Legion Branch 110 Trenton president Frank Amodeo looks on.

Trenton Store Held Up

TRENTON (Staff) — Shortly after 9 p.m. Saturday, an armed, masked bandit robbed Reilly's Jarket, 251 Dufferin Street, Trenton, and ran off carrying an undisclosed $400 in store receipts.

Mrs. Lesley Dennis, a clerk at the store, was alone at the time. Detectives report the man, described as tall and thin, believed to be young, entered the store minutes after customers left.

He was wearing a yellow trimmed navy blue or black balaclava snowmobile head covering, and carried a sawed-off rifle. He also was wearing a ¾-length jacket.

Speaking in a pleasant manner, the man demanded cash. Mrs. Dennis told police she didn't see a car near the store as he ran out.

Town police were called immediately. Constable Gary Davis arriving at the store soon after. Detective Sergeant Sid Vickers and Constable Roger Dingman arrived at the scene, followed shortly by identification officer Constable Wally Hepditch. Chief David Saunders arrived minutes later. Brighton detachment, Ontario Provincial Police were notified and sent two cars to help patrol the area in search of the bandit.

Police report no evidence of connection in the robbery.

From her home today, Mrs. Dennis' husband Clark, a serviceman at CFB Trenton, said his wife had been badly shaken up by the incident and remained in bed for the weekend. Mrs. Dennis felt unable to talk about the holdup.

Mr. Dennis said she has been employed as a clerk at the store since February. This was the first time she has been involved in a robbery.

Further details on the robbery will be released by police, pending investigation, that continues.

Police could not pinpoint the last armed robbery in Trenton, but said Saturday's holdup was the first in a long time. However, police did say they have been kept busy with a record number of store, house and business break-ins in Trenton during the last month. They believe the break-ins to be the work of youngsters.

Poems Tribute to Fallen

TRENTON (Staff) — Guest speakers at Remembrance Day banquets usually deliver a serious talk, recalling incidents of the great wars, and commenting on the need of veterans and people everywhere, to recall the sacrifices made.

But in Trenton Saturday night, the after - dinner speech was of a much lighter nature. Guest speaker was well-known humorist and poet, Noel Stockton, who saw service with the British 8th Army, and is now personnel director at the Unemployment Insurance Commission in Belleville.

Reciting several poems and anecdotes of his own composition, brought resounding applause and laughter from the packed banquet hall, and words of appreciation from legion officials.

While much of his talk was delivered in a light-hearted vein, Mr. Stockton recited one of his poems, he wrote in honor of a former soldier and friend, Percy Brazier, who died in 1967 after many years of suffering from time spent as a prisoner - of - war.

"Rest quietly, comrade, in your new found Place,
Where heroes of a thousand battles dwell;
Rest quietly, comrade, in your heavenly Base,
Stand proudly for the part you played so well.
A man of peace, by conscript or withal
But brave where more prolific men would pause,
Who quietly answered to your country's call,
And suffered freely in its cherished cause.
No prison camp could quell your native pride:
Now battle scars must take their jealous toll,
And you with fallen friends stand side by side,
As heavenly heralds name you to their Roll.
Your country owes so much to men like you,
A debt that simple words will not repay:
The world is richer for your passage through,
And poorer now, because you've gone away.
Rest quietly, comrade, at your peaceful post,
Where strife and worldy cares are at an end:
Rest quietly, comrade, with that gentle host,
And we shall not forget our Fallen Friend."

OPP Patrol Brighton

BRIGHTON (Staff) — The streets of Brighton were relatively quiet this weekend, as Ontario Provincial Police controlled the town. The village's remaining policeman, Sgt. Kenneth Brown gave his notice 10 days ago, following a series of rowdy incidents by a gang of youngsters during Hallowe'en night, and the throwing of several Molotov cocktails in vacant areas.

Sgt. Brown had been patrolling the village single-handed for the past seven months, after his fellow constable resigned. Since then he has looked after this village of 3,000, on call 8 hours a day, with occasional help from the OPP detachment.

The question of police duties in the village is to be settled by the Ontario Police Commission sometime this month, Reeve Norman Roberts said.

Brown says the job of policing Brighton alone is impossible. Although he appreciated the help of the OPP, village council has requested the village to hire additional men. Several applications for constable have been received, but were not forwarded to the Ontario Police Commission until late October.

Reeve Roberts has admitted the village has looked to the OPP for a good deal of police aid. He cited some of the problems faced by the town when hiring new men was their tendency to leave as soon as they completed police college training at Aylmer, Ontario, plus a few months on the beat.

In a telephone interview, one of Brighton's former constables, who asked not to be identified, said he used to put in 84 hours a week on call, Sgt. Brown sharing an equal number of hours.

He said he quit because of pressures, including incidents during the summer of 1971 when Brighton had two drug-oriented teenage suicides and the burning of a woman's body in the cemetery crypt. Sgt. Brown at that time again appealed for extra men. The village of Deseronto, he said, by way of comparison, employs three regular policemen, plus a full-time civilian radio man, for a population of 1,875. Deseronto, 40 miles east of here, is also within the area here, is also within the area patrolled by OPP from Belleville.

The former village constable said the wives of both men on the force were paid $25 per month to man the telephone and two-way radio between home and the village's single cruiser.

"Sometimes we'd work together from 4 p.m. Friday straight through to 8 a.m. Monday," he said, adding the OPP were called in when available. However, because of their far - reaching duties, provincial officers were not always able to come.

Now, Brighton's cell-less police office is locked and the telephone unanswered. A sign on the door says, "All police inquiries to be forwarded to OPP."

Reeve Roberts says OPP headquarters are willing to police Brighton on a regular basis, but insist five additional men, plus an extra cruiser, will be required. Sgt. Brown is the sixth officer to resign in the past three years.

Willcocks Association Executive

Owner of the Sword Motel at Bancroft and former resident of this city, Kenneth Willcocks has been named vice-president of the Ontario Motel Association.

The election took place at the 64th annual convention of the 650-member Association held recently in Ottawa. Mr. Willcocks was also appointed a director of the East board of Ontario Travel Associations which represents the provincial hospitality industry to the Ontario Government.

Mr. Willcocks is also active in promoting the Bancroft district. He is president of the Bancroft Chamber of Commerce, vice-president of the tourist council and local planning board. During the Ottawa convention, Mr. Willcocks was presented with a Certificate of Commendation for continuous support and promotion of the tourist industry.

While at Belleville Mr. Willcocks was an engineer with Northern Electric and is a former commanding officer of the Hasty Fees militia unit.

Keegan to Seek Seat on Council

Party politics have no place in city hall, Alderman Arthur Keegan said today.

Ald. Keegan, with 12 years on city council a veteran of civic government, announced his intention to seek another term at the Dec. 4 municipal elections.

Any political party "that organizes a campaign to control municipal government should be condemned by the voters," he said, since it would divide the city and set it back a quarter century.

In recent years, the councillor said, he has played a major role in the city's industrial and commercial expansion — including the Quinte Mall — and claimed new projects under consideration could be valued at $2 million.

Ald. Keegan heads or belongs to a wide range of city hall committees. These include:

Traffic and Lights: — As chairman he wants to see studies for the city's north-south traffic patterns completed. New traffic signals will continue to be installed throughout the city, tied in with the new monitored control system.

Housing — As chairman, National Association on Aid, Keegan estimates 2,311 units have been built in the past five years. Total value of these units — without land — was estimated at $22,490,123, says Ald. Keegan. Some 500 were under construction in 1972, yet demand may not be 2,000 and it is important to try to meet demand since it also provides this work force with jobs.

City Planning Advisory Committee, Quinte Planning Board — As a member of both groups he wants to "continue to work" for a new official plan and zoning bylaw for Belleville and area.

Housing and Urban Renewal — Help draft resolutions that include relocation of railroads in municipal areas for better land useage.

Ald. Keegan also is one of six regional municipal representatives to the Ontario Traffic Conference.

When the mayor is absent, he is official signing officer for the city, and also is a member of the city manager's budget advisory committee.

Sense of Foreboding

So it is coming up to Christmas — well pretty soon anyway — and then there are those two chores that stir up the adrenalin and help to shorten the winter — simply by taking our minds off it: yes, you may have guessed, we shall be getting our new car plates and gearing up for the income tax hassle.

At least the Government is now introducing semi-permanent plates — for five-year periods as we recall — which will facilitate matters somewhat. But not so the tax grind which next year will be more involved than ever.

And we have to take issue with Hamilton businessman William Samets who, armed with charts, graphs and cartoon slides, told the Sales and Ad people here recently, "the government has done its homework, (with regard to taxes), now you do yours."

What the Government has done in effect is provide work for the bureaucracy, spread as it is like a colossus radiating from Ottawa to federal tax offices in communities across the land. We know of course that next year is the year of capital gains tax and the tax technocrats have come up with an additional eight pages of tax form to be filled out on both sides.

We predict confusion on a massive scale, at the individual taxpayer and at Government, as well as civil service level, as local tax offices attempt to unravel the tangled skein that will be tax "reform" 1973. And ask anyone who may have a pittance of foreign monies, what happens in trying to merge a return from two countries and you will understand why some people dream of palm-fringed islands away from it all.

And of course there are the computers — frequently laws unto themselves and the despair not only of those whose tax information they are devouring but also of the civil servants poor souls at the local level who must try to keep open the lines of communication with Ottawa. For it is not uncommon for Ottawa to send out information to one of its taxpaying "clients" that is puzzling to say the least, perhaps even erroneous, and the local office has to sort it out.

So if the technocrats have done their homework even Mr. Sametz admits that tax reform "is one of the most complicated pieces of legislation ever passed." What he is saying in effect is that taxation from now on will be an even greater wilderness than ever. In these circumstances it is little use talking to the taxpayer about doing the homework. More than ever we are going to need the assistance of experts of whom there are mighty few — and computers, hoping of course that they too will not break, down too often under the strain.

Housing Milieu

Approval by council of a rezoning application by a Belleville builder to permit higher density housing — principally town houses — in a subdivision area south of Bridge Street and Elizabeth Crescent, is being viewed with alarm by residents of the area.

Despite protests and deputations, the project has been given the green light. Whether the worst fears of residents of the area are realized — there is talk even of the new development becoming a potential slum area — remains to be seen. One hopeful sign, from the residents' standpoint, is the prospect of a buffer zone of single-family homes which the area consists of now.

We can see no objection of town houses per se — they are a much-needed asset in our community and are not unattractive dwellings into the bargain — but as in the case of high-rise apartment dwellings there seems to be a distasteful tendency among planners and developers, when seeking space for further construction, to ignore the existing character of the community.

Danger Spot

We are wondering what conditions will be like on the east stretch of Bell Boulevard between North Front and Sidney Street this winter. There is a big drop-off or ditch either side of the road and if cars spin off the road in a skid it could be a potential death trap. At the Sidney Street end, incidentally, there is a nice big pothole filled with water from the recent rains. Let's have these holes filled up wherever they are to be found.

Not Just Matter of 'Housekeeping'

Relations with U.S. May Be Complex in Days Ahead

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

Prime Minister Trudeau, questioned during the news conference at which he said he would stay in power, also commented that major problems in Canada-U.S. economic relations would be dealt with only where "housekeeping" concerns were involved.

The number and complexity of problems which make up the Canada-U.S. foreign economic policy relationship are greater than at any previous time in our history. Any one of them could develop into proportions greater than "housekeeping" during the anticipated life of a liberal minority government.

Especially so if a President Nixon and a Republican administration with its traditional high-tariff supporters, are returned in strength on Nov. 7.

Take the possibility of another U.S. multi-million dollar offer to purchase a major Canadian corporation, along the lines of Denison Mines or Home Oil. New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis, currently in the "kingmaker capacity," said categorically at the same news conference, he would oppose the return of the Foreign Takeover Review Bill in the weak manner ill-was presented to the last Parliament.

What pressures would Mr. Lewis put on Mr. Trudeau to stay in power if an emergency like this arose?

Or even harder to estimate, what would a weak Liberal government do, if a second and tougher Nixon administration put pressure on the Canadian government not to interfere in such a future sale?

This kind of pressure would not be applied directly. It never is.

But the Nixon administration, supporting U.S. big business, is unhappy, that the 1963 Canada-U.S. auto pact is working so well in Canada's favor.

Then there is the DISC program, giving tax relief to U.S. multi-national corporations who switch foreign production to the U.S. domestic market. How many of the thousands of U.S. branch plants in Canada are "DISCing It"—silently shifting production from Canadian to U.S. plants?

Not to forget the classic buy-a-boo of U.S. corporate investment intentions in foreign countries with notable governments. . . . Namely wait until a secure government is returned to power or takes over, one which is pro-business, like David Lewis, temporary powerbroker, is anti-business.

Other worries affecting the decision-makers in the international divisions of U.S. head-quarters with major Canadian operations, will centre on how far a continentalist Liberal government in Canada, in trouble with the electorate, will move from that role to maintain itself in power.

The last column concentrated on Canada's possible inability to fulfil another traditional role—peacemaking—during a period of interim government. Not doing so might hurt our image abroad.

Much more important than a foreign policy crisis at this time, is a foreign economic policy crisis. It would only be one, bearing on one of the many outstanding economic problems between the two countries, to tumble Trudeau and bring another election.

Canada would cope, but awkwardly. Crises generated in the United States have been major influenced Canadian elections before.

Such a crisis could happen again this winter.

"Maybe now the government will know what it feels like to be in a minority."

Provinces Likely Would Prefer Stanfield

By DON O'HEARN
From The Intelligencer's Queen's Park Bureau

Most provincial governments, perhaps even Nova Scotia and P.E.I., the two Liberal regimes, probably would have been happier to see Bob Stanfield as prime minister rather than Pierre Trudeau.

Over the years no factor has contributed more to disturbed federal-provincial relations than the feeling by the provincial leaders, and their governments, that they are being looked down on by Ottawa.

Most frequently this has been publicly expressed with painful cries that Ottawa is not "consulting" them.

As with the years the role of the provinces has expanded dramatically the cries have been more and more pained.

The policies of Trudeau and Stanfield on this question have been a sharp contrast.

The prime minister has been reserved if not actually indifferent.

He has said, in effect, that he will consult the provinces at any time. But as a unified body. He feels that before there can be practical discussion of most topics the provinces should be in agreement among themselves.

And he has said this with the apparent aloofness which has become his trade-mark—and which some people take as arrogance.

Stanfield, a long time premier himself, has carefully catered to this high feeling of the provinces.

Since he first went to Ottawa he has spoken out for them. And one of his promises has been better consultation, with a minister in charge of federal-provincial relations.

So the premiers naturally would favor their former colleagues whom they feel knows them better.

There now is the possibility, of course, that Trudeau among his many other promised reforms may try to do something about better relations with the provinces.

Perhaps by himself appointing a special minister for them, as Stanfield promised to do.

If so it will be interesting to see if there really is any substantial improvement.

For there are those who believe that good consultation between the two governments, or at least a relationship that will satisfy the provinces, is not practically possible.

This is based on various reasons, with probably the most important being that the federal government will always be the "senior" government, and has to be.

Stanfield's Chance May Come

Cabinet Choice Delicate Task

By FARMER TISSINGTON
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—One of the toughest jobs facing a new prime minister who follows an opposing party into office is the formation of his cabinet. Mr. Stanfield has not yet been faced with that task, although he may well be in the weeks or months to come.

For one thing there is the question of cabinet size. Although the membership of the Commons has remained fairly stable—it actually dropped one to 264 in 1968—the number of ministers has increased greatly. The Liberal government has been criticized for this as there are now 30 ministers, including the government leader in the Senate, Paul Martin. Additions of ministers of communications, urban affairs, science and technology, consumer and corporate affairs and supply and services, plus ministers of state have swelled the ranks. With so many claims for cabinet representation it seems doubtful if Mr. Stanfield could, or would want to, reduce the total.

Cabinet-making is a fine art requiring a delicate balance of geographical considerations and interests, sex and even religion. If Mr. Stanfield is called upon to form a government he will free the problem of having only two MPs from the second most populous province, Quebec. Only one woman, Flora MacDonald, was elected for the Tories. She is not likely to make a choice there. But the claims of elected Conservatives, both veterans and promising newcomers from the other provinces will keep him awake at nights.

Mr. Stanfield would not be the first one the last party leader to face the dilemma. There was a similar situation after the surprising Conservative win in 1957 and before that R. B. Bennett and Robert Borden both faced the selection problem when the Conservatives unseated the Liberals. The results of the Conservatives to power under Borden in 1911 and the problems of cabinet selection have been documented by Heath Macquarrie, the political scientist-MP from Prince Edward Island and one of the country's foremost authorities on Borden.

He likened the 1911 situation to a mad scramble for place and position by men who had vegetated 15 long, weary years in the political adversity. He notes there is much that may be revealed of the leadership qualities of the party chieftain in his cabinet selections. Of interest is the fact Borden did not appoint Alberta's lone Conservative MP, R. B. Bennett, a man who later went on to become prime minister. This time, Alberta returned nothing but Conservatives and Mr. Stanfield would have to choose two or three ministers from 19 potential aspirants.

"For 15 years in the wilderness," the opposition the devoted service of the party faithful had come unrewarded. Now that they had entered the promised land, there were many claimants for the rich fruits of office," Mr. Macquarrie recalls. Borden himself wrote to a friend: "Until one actually enters upon the undertaking it is impossible to realize the difficulties and perplexities which confront any man entrusted with the task of forming a new cabinet."

Mr. Macquarrie's observations of Borden's cabinet-making are interesting, especially as the P.E.I. province is one of those who would be considered for a post in a Stanfield government. He has been the party's critic on external affairs, has a wide experience in the field and has many friends and contacts among Ottawa's "pro-diplomatic" corps. He would be a logical choice as secretary of state for external affairs.

But what of the Hon. J. Angus MacLean, former fisheries minister in the Diefenbaker administration and one of the three MPs elected from P.E.I.? Mr. MacLean would qualify either for environment and fisheries minister or as minister of veterans' affairs. But could Mr. Stanfield appoint two ministers from three elected Conservatives representing a four-seat province when he has so many others to consider from other provinces? It's the kind of problem that causes prime ministers to age prematurely.

Women Executives Scarce in Canada

Toronto Star

It's hard to muster sympathy for Canadian companies that are looking for women to appoint to management positions and find there aren't enough adequately trained women for such positions. According to a breezy survey by the Financial Times, one in four Canadian companies is making such a search and encountering problems. In part, the businessmen have only themselves to blame. For too long, business, industry and even the professions have hired women on the assumption that they would work for a few years — in the steno pool and the file room, behind the teller's cage or behind a register, as the research assistant or the girl Friday — and then they'd marry and leave forever. So why bother assessing their education and their potential and setting them on the road to promotion, through the levels of junior and middle management as is done with men, so they'll be ready for the executive suite.

Letters to the Editor

And Question of Anonymity

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The question whether a person should give his name or just remain incognito when on the public platform (newspaper or radio) has been debated in few times lately.

Like most other questions, this one too has more than one side to it. Most people will agree that the topic of discussion is more relevant than the name of a person. Many prominent writers in newspaper columns are using pennames only. Others are in a well-known public figure, his name means little or nothing to the average reader or to the listening audience. It is no secret either that anyone who has strong conviction on any issue of controversial nature may run the risk of animosity. Any deviation from the pattern of the time will not be forgiven easily by society. The wind will be in the face of the one, who stands out like the nail may be charged with sticking his neck out or with seeking the limelight to make himself a name. On the other hand the anonymous contributor could be accused of cowardice. Try as you will, you cannot please everyone. Then again a person may feel, he really has something to say or to offer, but if he refuses to 'shell out', he will have to settle with his own conscience.

Contributors of religious articles in a small community often refrain from giving their names on the ground of avoiding to make propaganda for such a denomination or sect they may be connected with. Their aim is to share their knowledge or experience to benefit all. — Layman's views on collecting church leaders to share the good news of Salvation they have experienced with the outside world. One good way to do this, is by using the public forum.

Bonisteel Flays Industry

Three advocates of industry were verbally flailed by writer-broadcaster Roy Bonisteel in a dramatic and angry confrontation at Saturday's seminar on the future of the Quinte district.

The three defenders of industry, Stewart-Warner manager Fred Ebbet, city industrial commissioner Fred Bemis and former Chamber of Commerce Secretary Pat Houston were panelists on a discussion of industry in 1984.

"I haven't heard so many platitudes since I attended the Republican convention in Miami," said Mr. Bonisteel in his impassioned rebuttal of their arguments. "You are telling us that what's good for General Motors is good for the rest of us."

The industrial promoters had been annoyed the night before as the keynote speaker had blamed industry for its destruction of the environment.

In their presentation Saturday morning, they lauded industry for improving the quality of life.

"Greater technology controls a better quality of materials and results in a happier life," said Mr. Houston.

Mr. Bemis asked for a climate of acceptance to attract more industry to this area, because "industry tends to go where it's wanted, not where it's needed.

"To blame industry for pollution is nonsense," he went on. "The real blame for contamination of the environment can be placed on people. Industry is developing more and better products to make our lives more convenient."

To support his point of people - as - polluters, Mr. Bemis mentioned coming upon a remote wilderness area he had thought no one had ever seen before. But he found paper, rags and discarded soft-drink cans carelessly thrown away.

The panelists praised industry for its pollution controls and its production of by-products from industrial wastes.

"Industry didn't do anything about pollution until it was forced to," cried Mr. Bonisteel. "It only started making by-products from wastes when it found it could make a dollar from them. Who manufactured that non-returnable, non - degradable soft drink can?"

He attacked industry for planned, built-in obsolescence that forced people to buy items like cars more often than they wished to.

Panelist Jim Wiseman, a labor leader and employee of Ontario Hydro was excused from Mr. Bonisteel's "condemnation of the rest of you".

Mr. Wiseman argued against the dehumanizing of man in industry.

"You get what you pay for," he told industrialists. "You can't expect a good city's work for the minimum wage of $1.65 an hour, or about $80 a week."

Mr. Wiseman said repetitive assembly-line work has deprived man of his creative ability and the worker should be allowed to follow the product he is making from beginning to completion.

He knocked management that set up supervisors over workers in a police role, on the assumption that every worker is "out to take management."

The supervisor should be an adviser, not a policeman assigned to create fear in the worker.

Loyalist Plays Host

Hotel management students prepared dinner for more than 100 people at Saturday's Quinte 1984 seminar at Loyalist College.

Welfare Recipients Decline

Sharp decreases in the number of welfare recipients have been reported by Hastings County Department of Social Services administrator Reginald Tucker.

In an interview, Mr. Tucker produced figures showing the number of "employable" welfare recipients for the month of September was virtually half that of the previous year.

"Employable" refers to those heads of families or individuals who could work if employment of some kind was available.

One hundred and ninety one was the count for this September, costing the county $65,084 compared to more than $83,000 in benefits for the 324 recipients in the same month last year.

Mr. Tucker used the figures to illustrate a trend was forming for, "I hope, the remainder of the year and on into the next year, he said.

August recipients were down by more than 100 over last year.

Mr. Tucker, delighted with the smaller case load, admitted, "it would be really terrific to have only those unable to work on our books."

Then Unemployment Insurance Commission may be taking up the slack in the welfare case load and recipients may have moved from one source of support to another, rather than growing smaller in numbers.

Mr. Tucker, guessing at the reasons for the decline said, "if UIC benefits are equal to or greater than our benefits, the recipient is ineligible for our help."

Through the years 69, 70 and 71, the UIC benefits were infinitely less than they are now," he said.

It was during these years welfare recipients steadily increased in numbers. The increasing trend stopped and declined in the same period as increased UIC benefits were announced.

Local initiatives programs and retraining through the Canada Manpower Centre were also credited for a decrease in welfare cases.

"Generally speaking, once a welfare recipient moves to, one of those opportunities of retraining or UIC, he leaves our office," said Mr. Tucker.

Subsidies are available to individuals who do not earn at least what they had previously received in welfare benefits.

Asked to make some forecast on the county welfare bill in the future, Mr. Tucker was reluctant to commit his department but said, "federal policy making (UIC, Manpower, LIP grants and retraining) will make the difference."

"If all the employment variables and UIC benefits remain stable, I would expect our case load to be smaller throughout the remainder of the winter.

"They (federal government) may or may not continue their programs," said Mr. Tucker. "Certainly if they are planning winter works' projects, which we need, they are leaving it a little late. Without winter work projects, deeper decreases are bound to come."

By this time last year several tree-cutting programs were operating across the county, through federal grants.

Dentist Says Disease Can Be Eliminated

Man now has the ability to eliminate almost all dental disease, a Belleville dentist said Saturday.

Dr. R. W. Edwards was one of the panelists discussing health at the Quinte 1984 seminar at Loyalist College. He predicted a vast reduction in dental disease if a preventive program is initiated in the city.

Cavities and gum disease have been reduced by 98 per cent in Indianapolis, where an intensive prevention program has been operated for some time.

Belleville already has a head start on a dental health program, with fluoridation of its water supply, and the improvement is already evident.

"I can tell which of my patients come from outside Belleville just by looking at their mouths," said Dr. Edwards.

However, Belleville is one of the two areas of the province that do not have a dental public health unit.

"Push for one," he advised his listeners.

This city was one of the first in have a school dental program, but it was dropped some years ago.

"It was dropped because the public health unit was expected to pick it up," said Dr. Edwards.

"But," he asked, "should the public purse pay for self-inflicted disease? Because that is what dental disease is."

By the time the procession of several hundred had crossed the Dundas Street East swing bridge, it was falling heavily, and continued to do so during Remembrance Day ceremonies.

At 10.55 a.m., services began. Wreaths were laid on behalf of the Canadian Armed Forces, Branch 110 and 579, RCL, Branch 110, RCL Ladies Auxiliary, by Mayor Duncan McDonald on behalf of the town, and by Mrs. Beatrice Menzies, silver cross mother, on behalf of the province of Ontario. Two youngsters were carried to a nearby bus by St. John Ambulance attendants when they collapsed during the service.

Tweed Man Killed

TWEED (Special)—A Tweed area man was killed Saturday in a head-on collision at the north junction of the Plainfield bypass on Highway 37.

Dead is Robert McNabb, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. John McNabb of RR3, Tweed.

Both the pickup truck with a camper driven by William [illegible] Hoskin of Palmyra, N.A., and the vehicles driven by Howard Kearns of RD1, Upperlake, Henry Penn, were southbound. Also involved was another southbound car driven by Fred Noker of Trenton.

The only northbound vehicle involved, a car driven by Keith Charles Morgan, a Madoc native now living in Waterloo, was a write-off, police reported.

Mr. Kearns remains in BGH with back injuries. Two of his passengers and Mr. Morgan were treated and released.

Paul Tripp A Director

TRENTON (Staff) — Paul Tripp, a partner in the firm Mark Tripp Ltd. of Trenton, has been appointed to the board of directors of the National Association of Tobacco and Confectionery Distributors.

Mr. Tripp, a town councillor, says the association acts as a watchdog for Canada's wholesale tobacco and confectionary trade. Also, it acts on the industry's behalf, supplying promotional material, information on the latest sale lines, marketing methods computers and machines.

"Our wholesalers aren't cut-throat," he said. "There's real co-operation among the wholesalers."

Mr. Tripp says the 24 directors, from across Canada, act as consultants or intermediaries within the industry, present comments on such government activities as a recent white paper on taxation. The province's provincial tax increases, and the problems of the businessman who must collect sales tax.

The association holds display shows and seminars for members. Mr. Tripp is one of two directors elected this year. The other is Bert Lock of Ottawa.

New Zoo Animals

TORONTO (CP) — The new Toronto zoo which is scheduled to open in 1974 already has a population of more than 80 animals and birds. "Animals are arriving almost every day," said zoo director Gunther Vons.

Pledges Half Redeemed

TRENTON (Staff) — To date, almost $1,500 of the $8,000 pledged for the Oct. 14 senior citizens' drop-in centre walkathon has been received, by organizers.

Robert Carleton, chairman of the walkathon committee, says a new committee will be formed to call upon the remaining 160 walkers who have not cashed in their pledges.

Some time this month, the Trenton Chamber of Commerce will be holding a party at the Trenton Community Gardens, to honor the 390 walkers who made the 20-mile trek.

Cooking for the Hunter

Game birds and wild game, once almost a staple part of the Canadian diet, are now considered a special treat. If there's a hunter in the family you may have your own special ways of treating game. Otherwise the precious gift of wild duck or a venison roast may prove somewhat perplexing to the uninitiated.

Here are some suggestions from the Canadian Dairy Foods Service Bureau to see you through your first sportsmen's dinner.

Venison —

Well hung venison does not require much cooking; it dries out quickly if you're not careful. Often the meat is marinated before cooking to draw out any unpleasant gamey flavor (always a danger with wild animals) and help tenderize the meat at the same time. Rather than milking up a fancy marinade, you'll find buttermilk does the same job and really brings out the true venison flavor too. Simply place the meat in a deep dish, cover with buttermilk and refrigerate from one to four days turning once or twice a day. Discard the buttermilk, since it may have picked up off flavors from the meat, and cook the roast in a covered pan as directed. Just before serving made a zesty sour cream gravy and garnish the roast with lemon slices.

ROAST VENISON
(Makes 8-10 Servings)

- 4 to 5 lb. venison roast
- 1 qt. buttermilk
- 4 strips bacon
- ½ cup butter
- 2 onions, quartered
- 2 cups beef consomme or bouillon
- ¼ cup flour
- ½ cup red wine
- 1 tbsp. lemon juice
- 1 cup dairy sour cream
- Salt
- Pepper
- Lemon slices.

Marinate meat in buttermilk 1 to 4 days, turning every 12 hours.

To Roast: Preheat oven to 450 deg. Fahr. Pat meat dry, cover with bacon strips. Melt butter in roasting pan, add onion and meat. Cook 15 min. in preheated oven. Reduce oven temperature to 350 deg. Fahr. Pour consomme over roast, cover and cook until tender; about 15 min. per lb. When nearly done, lift cover and baste often to brown meat. Remove meat to platter, keep warm. Strain pan juice. Blend flour, juice and wine until smooth. Add to pan juice along with lemon juice. Cook over med. heat, stirring constantly, until smoothly thickened. Stir in sour cream. Add salt and pepper to taste. Slice meat, garnish with lemon slices. Serve gravy separately.

Sportsman's Dinner

ROAST WILD DUCK

Small young birds are excellent roasted — allow one per person. Older birds which are apt to be dry and tough, are best reserved for stews and pies. Remember, wild fowl gets a lot of exercise and, because of this, is much drier than domestic. Better will keep them moist and tender while they're cooking.

ROAST DUCK SUPREME
(Makes 4 Servings)

- 4 wild ducks
- Celery stalks
- 1 cup butter, melted
- ½ cup dry red wine
- 1 tsp. salt
- Freshly ground pepper

Preheat oven to 450 deg. Fahr. Rub cavities of ducks with salt and pepper. Fill with celery leaves. Brush skins with ¼ cup of the melted butter.

Place breast side up in preheated oven. Combine remaining ¼ cup butter and wine.

Use this mixture to baste birds every 5 min. Thirty min. gives a rare bird liked by the real game enthusiasts. Those unaccustomed to wild duck usually prefer a well done bird. In which case, reduce oven temperature to 350 deg. Fahr. and roast another 20 to 30 min. Serve with wild rice and currant jelly.

Man Shortage ?

BROCKVILLE, Ont. (CP)— If a male here has felt in the past that he has been overwhelmed by the women folk, he has had a good reason to be. The women of the area outnumber the men by a margin of almost 10 per cent. The 1971 census report puts the total number of females at 10,356, and the number of males at 9,499 for a total of 19,855.

No Price Please

VICTORIA (CP) — The prices on an exhibition of paintings in the B.C. legislature were there one minute and gone the next. When the work of local artists went on display, price tags ranging from $200 to $2,200 brought a few mutters from civil servants about how "shocking" it was that the legislature buildings were being turned into a commercial art gallery. The offending price tags were soon removed.

Ann Landers

Ways to Save Sanity

Dear Ann Landers: I'm writing for the benefit of "Insomnia in Idaho," the woman whose husband is having an affair with his secretary. When she said, "I thought I'd be the last wife in the world to have such a problem," I heard myself talking. She's where I was four years ago. Here's what I did about it and it saved my sanity. Maybe it will save hers.

Sit down with a pencil and pad and a pencil. Make four headings at the top of the page. Label the first column "Personal strengths." In it list all the things you have going for you: Education, books, money, skills, connections, etc. Head the next column, "This helped me before." List all the things that helped lift your spirits when you were troubled: Music, sewing, volunteer work, church, painting, physical exercise, change of scenery. Head the third column, "People I can count on." List your most reliable friends, a favorite relative, a neighbor, a doctor, a clergyman. Label the fourth column "New opportunities." List the ways you can get back into the mainstream. Pretend you are a widow. (Emotionally you really are.) Is it a new job you need? A new city? Vocational school? Back to school?

My salvation was going back to the university. I always wanted to get my degree. I not only achieved my goal but I found new values. Now I go looking for the person who is sitting alone. I sit down and start talking—or listening. The world is filled with troubled people who need friendship. I learned this when I was in trouble.

The best part of my story is that I kept my husband. Sod destiny he was my husband. He is the center of my existence. He began to respect me when I stopped begging for his love, stopped checking on his whereabouts and making him feel like a heel. Today he sees me as a new person. And I guess I am, Just sign me—Reborn In New York

Dear New York: Bravo! You went with it and did something about yourself instead of demanding changes in others. Few people think of this approach because it's the most difficult one. My heartiest congratulations!

Dear Ann Landers: I am a girl aged 17, and I've been going with a boy 20 for over a year. Jimmie and I have decided I should go on the pill. We feel it is the best way to prevent unwanted pregnancy.

I want to tell my mother about our decision but to be honest with you, I don't know how to broach the subject. Mom and I get along OK, but we have never talked about anything intimate. Also, I'm afraid she might get angry and order me to quit seeing Jimmie immediately, which, of course, I would refuse to do.

Please, Ann, help me find the words. Even though my parents are not close I don't want to deceive her.—Muddled Mouth

Dear M.M.: My advice is to see a doctor and learn if you should be on the pill. Maybe you ought to be using another type of contraception.

Your question as to whether or not to inform your mother is interesting. Why would you want to? Your decision has been made. What do you hope to accomplish? Would the statement be a Declaration of Independence? Or do you just want to shake her up? Think about it a while. Perhaps when you come up with the answers to these questions you'll decide to keep quiet. I hope so.

How Some Mothers Survive in Calcutta

CALCUTTA (CP) — She slumps on the sidewalk in rags, back against a lamppost, nursing her baby and shivering.

Another child, who could be two or four, crouches a few feet away, playing with a stick in a tiny sandpile.

The woman and her babies have no house. They live on the sidewalk, night and day, year-round.

Local officials estimate that Calcutta has perhaps 200,000 people like her, living on the streets without a roof or chair or bed. Nobody really knows how many there are.

The numbers mean little in the woman's great dark eyes, empty of life, empty even of despair.

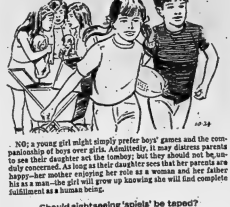
Her nursing baby seems roundly fed. But the older girl looks sick and thin.

The woman might beg for pennies sometimes. She may even have a few melons or trinkets to sell. Some of the street people live near missions that dole out milk powder or rice daily.

But mostly she just sits on the jeam-packed sidewalks in the dust as the rickshaw jangle past, hawkers shout and Calcutta's millions swarm by her.

In the brief tropical dark, she sets up a burlap lean-to, two feet high and three feet wide, cooks rice on a fire of cow dung, then sleeps again.

Her only wall on the concrete with her babies on mats beside her.



She may have a husband in the city, who might beg or hold casual work in a jute factory or do nothing. There are fewer jobs now in Calcutta than there were in 1970, but the population keeps rising.

There are millions without jobs in Calcutta. Many came from the rice and jute farms in the flatlands beyond the city, hoping for work that was never found. Others fled the slaughters of the Bangladesh independence war and before that the religious murders of East Pakistan.

The woman's life is repeated again and again, block after block in the windiest, noisy streets of Calcutta, amid the stink of too many people and open sewers.

Mirror of Your Mind
by JOHN CONWELL

Is a 'tomboy' an unhappy daughter?

NO; a young girl might simply prefer boys' games and the companionship of boys over girls. Admittedly, it may distress parents to see their daughter act the tomboy; but they should not be unduly concerned. As long as their daughter sees that her parents are happy—her mother enjoying her role as a woman and her father his as a man—the girl will grow up knowing she will find complete fulfillment as a human being.

Should sightseeing 'spiels' be taped?

THAT might not be a bad idea—though it is a bit impractical. The taped message could be made by someone who is excited by what sights are seen on a specific tour. And most "live" guides are enthusiastic and helpful, but there might be a sightseer who all his life had looked forward to a particular tour, and the guide may focus on the real issues of some local dispute.

ST. JULIEN CHAPTER IODE

The regular monthly meeting of St. Julien Chapter, IODE, was held Tuesday afternoon, November 7, at the home of Mrs. R. C. Ellis. The regent, Mrs. C. Lenk, opened the meeting, thanked Mrs. Ellis for her hospitality and welcomed especially those members present who had been unable to attend for some time.

Special guest was Miss Heather Slade, daughter of the Chapter's treasurer, Mrs. W. Slade. Following introductions, corsages were pinned on the bride — her and her mother and then Mrs. Ellis on behalf of Mrs. Rosa Bailey, the flower fund convener, presented a gift to Miss Slade — "with best wishes."

Business included a reminder of the next Citizenship Court scheduled for the morning hours in mid-December, vetting of funds as in past years to assist various IODE projects under both the National and Provincial Chapters, as well as some local worthy causes. At the suggestion of Provincial Chapter, Mrs. E. A. Adams, services secretary, will check to see if there is any way we may assist Ugandan newcomers in this area in adjusting to their new environment.

Mrs. Ellis mentioned that IODE calendars for 1973 were available for sale and drew attention to the art work which makes them very suitable for overseas gifts. Illustrations are by noted Canadian Indian artists with reproduction by courtesy of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development.

It was decided that the 50 cent admission charge on Wednesday, December 13th, would include afternoon tea and the 4 p.m. at which hour the winners of the Christmas Money Tree would be drawn. There would also be a novelty and 50/50 table.

The sunshine draw conducted by Mrs. W. Gilbert, was won by Mrs. J. Hepburn.

A moment of silence was observed in memory of Mrs. Richard Bailey, Kenora secretary, who passed away last month. This was followed by another minute of silence for the fallen because of the close ness to Remembrance Day.

The meeting closed with a small luncheon and a social time was enjoyed by all.

Dog Helps Solve Burping

By DORIS CLARK

A student psychologist told me about Bruce, aged 10. He was an obnoxious child — always looked a mess, had a habit of burping loudly "right from his toes all the way up" — as she put it.

With rare insight, this thing young student suggested Bruce's mother get him a dog. He is dumb, touch hearted this year.

You see, Bruce came from a single parent family. His mother had little time for him. His older brothers kicked him around — but he had no one to kick. Now he passes his own companion, his dog. The animal is devoted to him and Bruce repays his devotion by showing a little more liking for the rest of the world.

Surprisingly, perhaps, the burping and other bids for attention seem to have tapered off.

Dear Doris: Enclosed picture shows the Kokomo Kitchen Kuties. I spend a few months in Florida each winter so am fortunate to belong. We would like some new ideas for our performances, which last just under an hour. — One of the Kuties, Sue

Dear Kcie: The KKK's deserve a standing ovation — and probably you often get one. It seems you main offering is music — both vocal and instrumental.

You could put on a pantomime and provide good music as a background for the action. Skits such as "You Asked For It", which shows a young couple in a movie theatre eating popcorn, watching the picture, with people stumbling over their feet, practically cry out for hilarious good music, such as the old time movie piano used to supply. I am sending this for the 20 cents and stamped envelope you enclosed. (We have other skits; write again and ask for the List of Skits and Games).

Then again you could get puppets into the act. There are books on puppet making and plays you can use.

THREE LEGS

LONDON (AP) — A British clothing manufacturer has started making three - legged pants to stay ahead of foreign imports. The firm said one of the pant legs is detached to be kept in reserve in case one of the other two is damaged.

Find members who are clever with their hands to make your puppets; and the musically creative ones can provide music for you with play acting. Try your local librarian for the books and plays you need. Have fun!

Dear Doris: Could you please tell me what it means when at a wedding the bride throws her garter; what it means to the one who catches it? The garter landed in front of me and I was the only one there to picked it up.

I am a happily married woman of 48 so it can't mean another wedding for me. This is the way the wedding joked about it! — Curious.

Dear Curious: When the bride throws her bouquet, the girls are supposed to scramble for it — especially if their happily - ever - after future is not yet settled. But when she throws her garter (a rare possession today unless a fancy round and bestowed one is made up for the purpose) she is supposed to toss it in the direction of the single men.

Then the superstition says that he who catches it will either be the next to marry or will have "good luck and laughter for the rest of his life". It isn't mentioned whether the marriage and the good luck go together.

In your case, let's assume that you are the one who was having the good luck and laughter. The superstition is just a lot of fun and games. If they tease you, enjoy it.

Women and Purses

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — An unexpected epidemic. Inspector Lloyd Bryson, motored a few chatty words here recently about women shoppers who leave their purses in shopping carts. There have been seven cases of purses stolen from carts in the past few weeks, while the carts were left unattended, he said.

When a woman goes shopping with a purse, suggests Bryson: "Carry it in the arm or use a billfold. Just don't leave a purse in the cart unattended."

Has Assets Aside From Being a Woman

NEW YORK (AP) — Catherine B. Cleary, the first woman director of General Motors Corp., says hers is not a token appointment and that she has qualifications "other than being a woman."

Miss Cleary, 58, is president of the First Wisconsin Trust Co. of Milwaukee. She also is a director of American Telephone and Telegraph Co., the largest utility in the United States, and of Kraftco Corp., the food concern.

Miss Cleary said the does not ally herself with the women's liberation movements to increase the opportunities for women simply because of her sex.

"My strong feeling is that I don't serve as a member of any constituency," she said.

One of three new GM directors elected at the October board meeting, she will receive the same fees as her 27 male colleagues—$600 a meeting plus expenses.

Miss Cleary began her career as a school teacher. She recalled that when she quit to enter law school her mother predicted she would miss the social occasions. "But I told her they didn't do me any good because I didn't have any money."

She worked briefly for a law firm in Chicago and joined Wisconsin Trust in 1947 after her father died, to be close to her mother. At that time, she reminisced, a male executive told her she had a good opportunity to advance in the trust department but didn't have a chance to become an officer. "He lived to see me named executive vice-president," she added.

Miss Cleary believes that she heeded the trust company at a propitious time, at the end of the Second World War when people in general and women in particular were taking more active interest in the field.

Miss Cleary took a brief break from the trust company in 1955-54 and served as assistant treasurer of the United States under then-president Dwight D. Eisenhower. The six-month stint was mainly a public relations assignment, she said, and the job was abolished after the suggestion that a government interested in economy should eliminate the expensive post. She stayed in Washington for another six months as assistant to the secretary of the treasury, then returned to the trust company in Milwaukee.

Miss Cleary said there probably are more openings now for qualified women in banking and trust work than there are women to fill the posts. "The problem is to get people who have a commitment and brain to begin," she added.

SEX CRIMES UP

MONTREAL (CP) — Sex crimes involving young people are on the increase in Quebec and police are warning youngsters against hitchhiking between school and home. Sexual offenders are having a "field day" because of the hitchhiking trend, said Const. Real Cantara of the Quebec Provincial Police youth and sexual crimes squad.

Both U.S., Russia Find UN Difficult

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union have one thing in common: Neither is getting all it wants in the 27th session of the General Assembly, now half way toward its Dec. 19 closing date.

The United States wanted an early debate on the problem of preventing international terrorism and hoped the assembly would call a conference early next year to work on a treaty for that purpose.

It bumped into Arab and African opposition and had to wait to mid-session for the Gabaz to get under way in the assembly's legal committee, and findings of opinion in that committee now indicate that the proposed conference is a UN body to study the problem.

The Soviet Union wanted the assembly to tell the UN outer space committee to draft a treaty governing direct satellite TV broadcasts from one country into homes in other countries.

It ran into a Western go-slow campaign and had to settle for a resolution asking the committee to "elaborate principles" governing such broadcasts with a view to concluding an international agreement or agreements."

The Soviet Union, China and 17 other Communist or nonaligned countries wanted the assembly to take up the Korean question and vote to get U.S. troops out of South Korea.

The U.S., Britain and others rolled up a vote of 70 to 35 with 21 abstentions, to put the question off until next year so as not to disturb the two-Korea negotiations going on now.

Big powers, keen to avoid upsetting the assembly's big African, Asian and Latin American majority often abstain rather than vote against popular resolutions, even when they have doubts about them.

But in the assembly's economic committee Friday, the U.S. was the only country that voted against an African proposal to locate a new UN environment secretariat, at great expense, in out-of-the-way Nairobi, Kenya. The committee approved the proposal 93 to 1, with 20 abstentions, assuring it final adoption in the assembly later.

In the assembly Thursday, the U.S. cast the only vote against what was left of the Soviet bid for direct TV regulation—the resolution to make a start on the underlying principles. The U.S. explanation was that such regulation would threaten freedom of information. The resolution passed by a vote of 102 to 1, with seven abstentions.

Earlier, only the United States, Britain, France, Portugal and South Africa cast negative votes when the assembly gave a 99-to-3 majority, with 22 abstentions, to an anti-colonial resolution banning aid to Portugal and South Africa.

He's Ashamed

OTTAWA (CP) — Defeated Liberal MP Murray McBride, says he lost his Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton riding in the federal election because of an anti-French backlash, and he is considering a written apology to Prime Minister Trudeau over voter prejudices.

Mr. McBride lashed out Friday at what he called the "deep south" prejudices of voters in his riding.

"They felt they just had to stop the French," he said in an interview.

Red China Hits USSR Armament

TOKYO (AP) — China intensified its word barrage against Soviet leaders Sunday, accusing them of endlessly shouting about disarmament to cover up their arms expansion and war preparations.

"In the last six years alone, their strategic weapons have increased more than sixfold," said an article in the Communist party newspaper People's Daily by Commentator, usually meaning a high-ranking official.

It accused the Soviet Union of "an inglorious performance" in presenting to the United Nations a resolution against the use of force and prohibiting the use of nuclear weapons.

"The new Soviet resolution boils down to a verbal declaration of the prohibition of all kinds of weapons on the one hand and, on the other, the actual possession and energetic expansion of all kinds of weapons, particularly nuclear weapons, for carrying out unbridled nuclear threat and nuclear blackmail against countries with little or no nuclear armament," People's Daily said.

Levesque Plans To Win or Quit

MONTREAL (CP) — Rene Levesque says he will quit politics if his Parti Quebecois does not become the government or the official opposition after the next provincial election.

"Even in Mr. Trudeau's circle, they admit the possibility, and even the probability, of Quebec independence," he told a crowd of more than 3,000 party supporters here during the weekend.

"With 60,000 members, we have about 250 members in each riding. So we can expect excellent results from the elections."

Mr. Levesque predicted the next provincial election will be held in the fall of 1973. He said his party would hold a convention next February and by the end of the summer would have nominated candidates in each of the 110 ridings expected after redistribution now being studied.

The party leader issued a warning to "left-wing intellectuals" saying the convention must produce a reasonable and realistic program that will be popular throughout the province.

Under these conditions, he said, the party right now could win 40 per cent of the popular vote and take 55 seats, including 25 in the Montreal area.

All but one of the party's seven seats in the Quebec national assembly are Montreal Island ridings.

The Parti Quebecois has succeeded in unsettling Canadian federalism and an independent Quebec will be a relief to the rest of Canada, Mr. Levesque said.

In the six months following the democratic election of a separatist government, the party leader said, Quebec would negotiate control of its own tax revenues and take over the four-fifths of its collective savings which are now funnelled off by outside financial institutions.

"Finished—the Bank of Montreal, the Imperial Bank of Commerce . . ." he said.

In the following months, Quebec would have nationalized its railways, its airports and ports—"these foreign systems that we have been paying for 100 years," he said.

Amin Makes Asians Dig Hard for Living

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — President Idi Amin announced Sunday that Asians who have stayed in Uganda will be taken to villages and given plots of land to dig.

He told a rally in the Kigezi district of southwest Uganda, "The Uganda citizens of Asian origin are to be transported physically to the various districts to be allocated to them. . . .

"The Asians will go straight to their fields and start digging and cultivating the different acres to be allocated to them which they serve."

Amin urged his audience "to be kind and helpful to them (the Asians) and teach them ways of how to dig hard and seriously."

Cow Is Bought For $122,000

AMENIA, N.Y. (AP) — A Holstein cow was sold to an Ontario syndicate Saturday for a record $122,000. A spokesman for the United States National Holstein Freisian Association said.

The old record was $108,000 for a bull sold in Connecticut in 1965, Robert D. Hellman said.

Promiscuous Parents

LEICESTER, England (CP) — Despite all the talk about promiscuity among the younger generation, one scientist believes that "the middle-aged are the ones obsessed with immoral behavior." Speaking at a meeting of the British Science Association, Dr. Peter McPhail said that many parents "felt they had missed out on the fun," according to a survey he carried out. Youngsters are "acutely conscious of their parents' obsession with sex," he added.

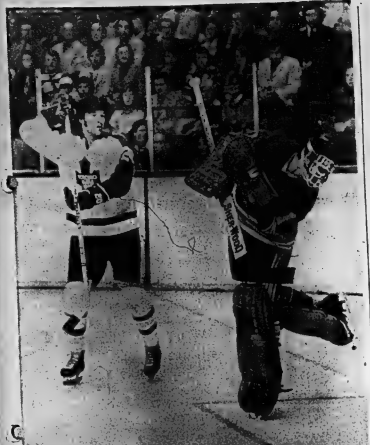
Drapeau Fishing for Olympic Funds

MONTREAL (CP) — Negotiations are under way to amend regulations which would allow federal financing of some construction for the 1976 Olympics in Montreal, Mayor Jean Drapeau said Sunday.

Permission has already been granted for a special lottery to help finance the games, Mr. Drapeau said at a news conference.



"A clearer picture" will emerge in the next few weeks, he said. He did not elaborate.

He ruled out any possibility of a city-wide referendum to decide whether the games will be held here, saying "it's clear from the letters we are receiving there is unanimous approval of the games."

Colorado last week voted in a referendum to cut off public funds for the 1976 Winter Olympics in Denver.

"The Olympic Games won't cost a penny more than Montrealers would normally have to pay for the civic improvements now needed," he said.

The Games will pay for themselves and financing for much of the housing and other construction will come from senior governments through regular participatory plans, said Mr. Drapeau.

Clarke Keeps His Star Status

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Bobby Clarke, who established himself as a bona fide National Hockey League star with Team Canada against the Russians, is carrying his star status with dignity.

The Bill Masterton Trophy winner of 1971-72, from Flin Flon, Man., scored two goals and assisted on two others Sunday night as Philadelphia Flyers overwhelmed California Golden Seals 8-3 to get atop the topsy-turvy NHL's West Division.

The shifty centre ace tied the score at 1-1 early in the second period, assisted on Brent Hughs' goal at 5:15 to again tie the score at 2-2, then gave the Flyers the go-ahead goal at 10:28.

California never seriously threatened the Flyers after Dave Schultz, Simon Nolet and Ross Lonsberry poured goals past Seals' goalkeeper Marv Edwards in a span of one minute and 45 seconds early in the third period.

Elsewhere Sunday Montreal Canadiens beat Boston Bruins 5-3.

Montreal, with a five-point lead over the Rangers in the East, ended Los Angeles' nine unbeaten string Saturday night, 5-2.

Clarke, who beat opposing goaltenders for 33 goals last year, increased his 1972-73 total to seven after 17 games. Several minor skirmishes developed in the opening period but the game was penalty-free in the final 40 minutes.

The Canadiens opened a 3-1 lead before Boston got untracked and threatened to salvage a tie with six attackers in the closing moments, but defenceman Guy Lapointe scored the insurance goal into the empty Bruins' goal with eight seconds remaining.

The game produced only four minor penalties and Frank Mahovlich and Boston rookie Terry O'Reilly exchanged blows at 18:48 of the third period.

Marlboros Make Hay On Road

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Playing on the road didn't seem to bother the first-place Toronto Marlboros during the weekend, but Hamilton Red Wings found little hospitality on their trip up north.

Toronto, leading the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series with 28 points on 14 wins and two losers in 16 games, defeated the Black Hawks 6-4 in St. Catharines Sunday and the Generals 6-3 in Oshawa Saturday.

Meanwhile, Sudbury Wolves downed the Red Wings 7-5 in Sudbury Sunday after Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds had beaten them 6-2 in Sault Ste. Marie the day before.

Six Toronto players shared the scoring in St. Catharines' game. Bruce Boudreau, with the winner, Paulin Bordeleau, Rob Ramsay, Glen Goldup, Wayne Dillon and Kevin Devine.

The Hawks playing before 2,902 hometown fans, got three goals from Dave Gorman, Mike Zibin, 25th and 26th in 18 games, and the fourth from Will Paleczny.

In Oshawa Saturday, Goldup had two goals for Toronto and Bailey, Boudreau, Bordeleau and Mark Howe had single markers.

Remparts Survive Loss

Quebec Remparts dropped their first game of the season Sunday night in Quebec Major Junior A Hockey League play but retained sole possession of first place as Cornwall Royals also lost.

Quebec was upset 10-6 by Thetford Mines Canadiens while Cornwall was beaten 6-2 by Sherbrooke Beavers.

The loss was the first in 17 games for the Remparts who had first place with 32 points, two ahead of Cornwall and in front of third place Sherbrooke.

The Royals trailed 5-0 early in the third before Yvon Dionet and Blair Macdonald scored and Cornwall outshot Sherbrooke 46-

BOBBY HULL

Hull Hits Scoring Stride

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bobby Hull took a couple of games to find the scoring range, but it came at an opportune time for his Winnipeg Jets.

The high-scoring left winger, benched in Winnipeg's first 14 games of the World Hockey Association season by legal entanglements in U.S. courts, notched his first two goals Sunday night in the Jets' 5-2 victory over Los Angeles Sharks.

The win moved Winnipeg atop the WHA's Western Division with Alberta Oilers who lost 3-1 to the Eastern Division leaders Cleveland Crusaders.

Ottawa Nationals edged Philadelphia Blazers 2-1 on Brian Conacher's goal with less than three minutes remaining in the only other game played Sunday.

Hull was playing in only his fourth game with Winnipeg. A court action in the U.S. brought by his former employers, Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League, prevented him from playing until a Philadelphia judge's ruling gave him the go-ahead last Wednesday.

He scored the first and final Winnipeg goals and the 7,500 Jets' fans gave him a standing ovation after each score.

La Prevoyante Sweeps Season

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (AP) — Jean-Louis Levesque's brilliant La Prevoyante joined a selected group of fillies who have completed their two-year-old campaigns unbeaten, breezing to a wire-to-wire victory in the $100,923 Gardenia Stakes at Garden State Park Saturday.

The impeccable Canadian-bred daughter of Buckpasser now joins such distaff greats as Mrs. Mumm, Top Flight and Regret as the only undefeated juvenile fillies in this century.

With Canadian jockey John LeBlanc sitting still in the saddle, La Prevoyante led every step of the 1 1-16-mile race and at the wire had a Ha-Ha-length lead on runner-up North Broadway, who was a head in front of Fire Tuning.

The pulse of $111,533-bought La Prevoyante quickened for the year to $417,109 for her Montreal financier owner, making her third on the list of leading Canadian-bred money winners behind Vijinsky and Northern Dancer.

Majority Big

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — Silent Majority virtually wrapped up the three-year-old pacing championship by easily winning the $156,733 Messenger Stakes at Roosevelt Raceway Saturday night.

The three-year-old Canadian-owned colt, driven by veteran Billy Haughton, rushed up on the outside to take the lead at the three-quarter mark, quickly opened a five-length margin and won eased up by two lengths in harness racing's richest race of the year.

Silent Majority, a son of Herry T. Adios, earned a purse of $77,295 for owners Irving Livermon and Alice White of Montreal and increased his career earnings to $313,172.

Miami Runs String To Nine

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"I'm proud to get 100 wins," Miami coach Don Shula said, "but it is only really meaningful if it happened in a year we get a world championship."

And the Dolphins looked every bit the champions Sunday. They slaughtered New England 52-0 to run their streak to nine victories without a defeat this National Football League season.

And more and more, it appears the Dolphins are going to cruise through an entire season unscathed, a feat no team has achieved since Chicago Bears did it in 1942.

In Sunday's other games, Philadelphia Eagles edged Houston Oilers 18-17, San Francisco 49ers beat Baltimore Colts 24-21, Minnesota Vikings defeated Detroit Lions 10-14, Green Bay Packers clipped Chicago 23-17, Washington Redskins whipped New York Giants 31-13, Dallas Cowboys outlasted St. Louis Cardinals 33-24, Pittsburgh Steelers topped Kansas City Chiefs 16-7, Oakland Raiders turned back Cincinnati Bengals 20-14, Atlanta Falcons rolled past New Orleans Saints 38-20, Denver Broncos upset Los Angeles Rams 16-10 and New York Jets thrashed Buffalo Bills 41-3.

Shula's players gave him the game ball after destruction of the Patriots and Shula replied: "I'm happy to have received the game ball—but the one I want is at the end of the year."

Mercury Morris rushed for 80 yards and three touchdowns and Marlin Briscoe caught a pair of scoring passes. Meanwhile, the defence smothered the Patriots' attack, yielding just 92 yards rushing and 77 passing.

The dolphins can clinch an American Conference playoff berth—and all but wrap up the East Division crown—next Sunday when they host the Jets.

Tom Dempsey of Philadelphia kicked six field goals against the Oilers, one of 52 yards.

Johnny Unitas returned as Baltimore's quarterback for one play in the fourth quarter, and fumbled. San Francisco recovered on the Baltimore 40-yard line. Monserea later, Steve Spurrier threw his second touchdown of the game, a 15-yarder to Ted Kwalick that put the game out of reach.

Fred Cox kicked a pair of fourth-quarter field goals to send Minnesota ahead of Detroit. With five seconds remaining, Lions' Errol Mann tried to kick a game-winning 33 - yarder but Bobby Bryant stormed in to block it and preserve the victory.

The victory locked the Lions and Minnesota in second place in the NFC's Central Division behind the Packers who had a pair of quick first-period touchdowns, one of them set up by Ike Thomas' 83-yard kickoff return, to beat Chicago.

Larry Brown rolled up 106 yards for Washington, falling just five short of the 1,000-yard mark for the season. After the Giants had scrambled back to tie the Redskins 13-13, Brown crashed over for touchdowns from four and five yards out to keep the Skins a game ahead of Dallas in the NFC East.

Offence Sputters Again

Riders Squeak Into Final

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders today began preparing for their Eastern Football Conference Final series, thanking their lucky stars and a bundle of Montreal errors for their 14-11 win over the Alouettes Saturday in the sudden-death semi-final.

The Rough Riders now must face Hamilton Tiger-Cats in a two-game, total - point final that opens here next weekend and ends in Hamilton Nov. 25.

The Alouettes outrushed and outpassed the Riders, but threw in three fumbles, two bad snaps from centre that cost them two two-point safety touches and suffered three Ottawa interceptions.

Although the Riders finished the regular season with 11 wins in 14 games, their offence always has come under question.

So it was Saturday.

Ottawa got only a field goal from its offence while the defence accounted for the rest of their points.

Dick Adams intercepted a George Mira pass and ran 33 yards for Ottawa's only touchdown. It was converted by Gerry Organ, who also booted a field goal.

The first-quarter touchdown was all the scoring the Riders could muster until the final 15 minutes.

The remaining four Ottawa points came on two wierd snaps from centre Wayne Conrad that sailed high over the head of punter Wally Buono to roll crazily out the end zone.

In both cases, Buono was prevented from getting a kick away and, since the second took place within five minutes of the end of the game, the Alouettes also had to kick to Ottawa on that one under a delay-of-game rule.

Organ's field goal, which put Ottawa ahead to stay, provided some of the tensest moments of the game.

His first attempt was good from the 37-yard line in the fourth quarter, but the Riders took a five-yard penalty for taking too long in the huddle.

So Organ, Canadian Football League scoring leader with 131 points, did it again from the 42-yard line with the kick just barely clearing the crossbar.

Greeley Great

MONTREAL (CP) — Neil Greeley threw three touchdown passes Saturday to lead Loyola College Warriors to a 50-6 victory over Macdonald Glassmen and their first Quebec University Athletic Association football title since 1968.

The win means a berth in the national semi-final playoff next Saturday against the University of Alberta Golden Bearsm The Golden Bears finished their season Saturday with a 7-1 won-lost record earning the right to represent the West.

Greeley, an American rookie quarterback, tossed two scoring passes to tight end Dave McMillan and another to Peter Malouf.

Hawks Beat Western to Berth

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — Waterloo Lutheran Golden Hawks upset defending champion University of Western Ontario Mustangs 38-27 Saturday in the Ontario Universities Athletic Association football final.

The Hawks' victory earned them a berth in the Atlantic Bowl next Saturday against St. Mary's University Huskies to determine an Eastern representative for the College Bowl national championship in Toronto Nov. 25.

The Western representative also will be determined next Saturday when University of Alberta Golden Bears play host in Edmonton to Le;ola College Warriors who won the Quebec title Saturday with a 50-y victory over Macdonald College Classmen.

Western, last year's Ontario and national champion, held Waterloo Lutheran to a 10-10 tie at half-time but gave up 28 points in the second half and Hawks took the Yates Cup as Ontario champions.

Running back Ted Passmore of North Bay was the biggest hero for the Hawks as he ran with the ball 19 times for 209 yards—more than half the Hawks' total rushing yardage of 404.

Passmore scored two touchdowns, as did Fred McLean who collected 124 rushing yards. Jerry Blacker got the other Hawks touchdown and Wally Parker converted all five and added a 22-yard field goal.

Dave Kerr, Peter Quigly and Al Lockhart scored Mustangs touchdowns. Paul Knill converted all three and scored field goals from 42 and 35 yards.

The fozers had 343 yards in total offence, 148 by rushing.

Lords Win

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — London Lords won the Ontario Rugby Football Union championship Sunday by defeating Buffalo Lancers 28-20 and taking the two-game total-point series by 29 points.

London quarterback Tony Passander threw three touchdown passes to Billy Warden and Herman Carter got another touchdown. Martin Fabi booted four conversions.

Palmer Chipper

Arnold Palmer of the United States chips the ball on to the first green in the opening round of the 36-hole Rolex Watch Golf Classic at the Kawasaki Kokusai Country Club course near Tokyo Friday. Palmer shot a four - over - par 76 and was nine strokes off the pace in the golf classic.

Eskimo Glass Slipper Breaks

EDMONTON (CP) — A speedy defensive back, an injured placekicker and a lucky bounce helped Saskatchewan Roughriders put an end to Eskimo Eskimos' story-book football season Sunday.

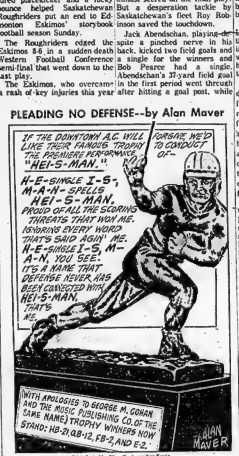
The Roughriders edged the Eskimos 8-6 in a sudden-death Western Football Conference semi-final that went down to the last play.

The Eskimos, who overcame a rash of key injuries this year after hitting a goal post, while to move from last place in 1971 to their best record in a decade, almost scored on the final play. But a desperation tackle by Saskatchewan's fleet Roy Robinson saved the touchdown.

Jack Abendschan, playing backup to the injured Edmonton placekicker Dave Cutler lost a 33-yard field goal in the third quarter when the ball hit upright and bounced back into play.

Veteran quarterback Ron Lancaster was a key figure in the Saskatchewan victory, picking apart the Edmonton defence with his accurate passing. He had 16 completions in 29 attempts for 287 yards.

Neither team scored a touchdown and most of the offensive fireworks were saved for the final quarter. Abendschan's first field goal and Pearce's 41-yard single gave the Riders a 4-1 halftime lead. Cutler managed a 30-yard single for Edmonton on a wide field goal attempt on the last play of the half. The other Eskimo points came on a field goal and a safety touch.



The Roughriders, who play at Winnipeg against the Blue Bombers next Sunday in their seventh consecutive western final, continued to nurse a 1-1 lead going into the final quarter. Edmonton quarterback Tom Wilkinson, who threw three interceptions, drove the Esks early in the fourth quarter from their own 40 to the Saskatchewan 12 when the drive stalled.

On third and 10, Edmonton lined up for a field goal attempt, but Wilkinson took the snap and fired a short pass to Gene Foster who was stopped short of the first down.

Bobcats Absorb Brunt Of Bramalea Goalfest

By AL ZABAS
Sports Staff

The Belleville Bobcats went down to an 11-9 defeat at the hands of the Bramalea Blues in a rugged Metro Junior B hockey game Sunday.

Though the players failed to make the century mark with all the penalties in penalties, the third - period action consisted of roughing, hooking, tripping and slashing on the part of both teams.

All 17/18 of the Bobcats with Belleville's Rick Meagher and Blue's Steve Beasley both in the box for roughing. Bobcat Darrell Cole speared a Bramalea player standing in front of the Belleville bench.

The Blues, failing to see the necessity for this, were ready to engage in fisticuffs when Cole jumped ice from his bench. An official got between Cole and the opposition but Cole managed to floor the linesmen, earning on top of his five minute spearing penalty, a 10 minute misconduct and match penalty.

Rick Hay, coach of Bramalea's Blues, said after the game that at that point "somehow I managed to keep my players on the bench, otherwise, a riot would have occurred."

As Bobcat manager Russ Goode said after the game, Cole's altercation with the Blues and the official could possibly "have Cole sitting out for a game or two." Whether Cole will receive a suspension will depend on Ontario Hockey Association officials.

Despite Belleville's 41 minutes of third period penalties, the Bobcats scored five of their nine goals in the third, adding the Blues by one. Rob Foster, Tim Yohn, and centre Pete Simrka beat Blues' goalie Bruce Jackson for the first three. Paul Lavoie with three men on the ice a team, tallied the eighth Belleville goal in an unassisted effort.

Bramalea, however, had the quickest scoring activity, as left winger Al Hayes consistently beat Bobcat defencemen to a similar spot. Three of his plays earned him goals for the Blues. Doug Crawford, who scored the Blues first goal, also went home with a hat trick.

The second period showed the most penalties with 20 minutes, as the Blues in a space of just over five minutes, put as many goals behind Bobcat netminder John Burnside.

Burnside, who started for the first time this season, was replaced by regular goalie Bob Moore in the third period, but even Moore's efforts failed to stop the Blues. The Blues consistently beat the Bobcat defence.

In addition to Bobcats' third period goals, Belleville was slammed in the only two second period goals for Belleville. Foster and Andy Burnside who played his second game with the Belleville Bobcats, scored the first period goals for Belleville, who led 2-1 after the first, and trailed 7-4 after two periods.

Bramalea's other tallies came from Bob Hallinan and a Rick Martin with two each, while Steve Beasley put in the other for the Blues.

Blues goalie Jackson had to turn aside 41 shots from his pad mates, while Burnside, during the first and second periods swatted away 15. Bob Moore saved 18 shots on the Bobcat net in the third.

Belleville, now sporting a 5-2-2 record, plays next in Pickering Friday.

As coach Moe Hunter said after the game, "we kept them in their own end for the first period but our defence let them walk in for the rebounds in the second and third. The defence just wasn't hitting them."

Quintes Join Oak String

"Ah, my substitute, here's some tips, kid. The right wing's a sucker for a left hook—"

Oakville Oaks won their fifth game in six starts Sunday night, but they still have a lot of catching up to do to challenge Orillia Terriers and Galt Hornets for first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series.

The Oaks defeated Belleville Quintes 6-3 to move into a tie for fourth place with Owen Sound Downtowners, who broke a five-game losing streak Saturday by downing Barrie Flyers 5-2.

They were the only two scheduled games Sunday and the results left Owen Sound and Oakville sharing fourth place, each with 10 points, but eight behind first place leaders Orillia and Galt.

Orillia won its ninth game in 11 starts by edging Brantford Foresters 5-3 Saturday night, and Galt, outshooting Kingston Aces 47-23, dumped them 5-2. In play Saturday night, Pat Monahan scored three goals to lead Barrie to a 4-3 win over Owen Sound.

At Oakville Sunday, Wayne Weller led the Oaks with two goals while Dave Nicholishen, Ray Bonnell, Ivan Prosnier and Hank Monteith scored one each. Ralph Plane, Dan Creighton and Al Ferguson scored for Belleville, who has lost 10-4 to Joe Oats Friday.

Spokesman Lionel Boily continued to express dismay about the lack of effectiveness of the Quintes' normally potent Godson - Ferguson - O'Donnell line.

"They're getting scored on more often than they're scoring," Boily observed of the forward trio who had jumped off to one of their most productive starts in the four years they have been linemates.

Ferguson's 12th goal of the year at 8:28 of the final period brought the Quintes to within a 4-3 score of the Oaks, but quick replies by Prosnier and Monteith put the game out of reach.

"When they scored that fifth goal, it seemed to break us," said Boily, who found some thing positive to say about the play of Ralph Plane and Paul Grills.

"Ralph played his strongest game of the year for us," Boily commented on the play of the team captain, who scored the Quintes' first goal. Defenceman Dan Creighton got the other Belleville marker.

Belleville Drivers Earn Stripes

KINGSTON — A trio of Belleville area drivers stole the show from the American horses on U.S.A. Day at Frontenac Downs Sunday, as they played first in the second and fourth races.

Kingston's Bob Sleeth was the only driver Sunday to bring two horses across the wire, thereby raising his meet total to 15. Bravo Miss in the seventh and Star Haven in the 10th gave the Kingston pilot his victories.

Fred Jarrell was the only other Belleville driver to show driving Mando to a third place finish in the eighth.

A crowd of 849 watered $39,329.

Post time for Wednesday night racing is 7:45 p.m.

WILF SHARES PURSE

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Wilf Hemenway of Winnipeg and Dave Oakley of Vienna, Va., took home $845 each Sunday as co-champions of the West Palm Beach open golf tournament after darkness ended their sudden-death playoff. The two players shot par on the first two playoff holes. Price commitments kept them from completing the playoff to day. Both shot 142 over the 36 regulation holes.

Tiremen Roll Over Kingston Rotarians

In OMHA hockey action over the weekend, Belleville teams earned themselves a creditable record of four wins, three ties, and only two losers.

Belleville Western Tire Juveniles rolled over the Kingston Rotarians Saturday night 8-1. Western Tire goal scorers were Jim Richardson and Russ Harrington with two apiece, Mark Coates, John Bowan, Kevin Joudwa, and Andrews with one each.

The Kinsmen Club Bantams tidied up Kingston Township 6-2 Sunday. Kingston's two goals came from Murray while Belleville's Bennet Meacher with two each and Lupercette and Hayman netted the pair for the Kinsmen.

Belleville Towers Food City novice mayors matched up with Napanee and Kingston Centre 70 Sunday, defeating the former 7-1, and falling to the latter 4-1. Lawrence Hanlon and Joe Guthrie, on a penalty shot, scored against Napanee whose single came from Brady. Napanee had the opportunity to tie it up on a penalty shot in the final eight seconds, but the shot hit the goal post and bounced away.

Trey Parker was the only Towers Food City novice mayor to offset Kingston tallies from Scott, Brass, Wick, and Hinch.

Winter Olympics Under Fire

MONTREAL (CP) — The Winter Olympic Games have outlived their usefulness, Avery Brundage, honorary president of the International Olympic Committee, said Sunday.

Brundage made the comment at a press conference as he arrived here for a two-day visit.

"There should only be one international events, the Games themselves," Brundage told a news conference.

The Winter Games "should never have been started in the first place," he said.

The 1976 Winter Games had been scheduled for Denver, Colo. But now their future is in doubt as a result of a state referendum last week which cut off public funds for the Games.

Montreal is the site for the 1976 Summer Games.

Madoc Spikers Win COSSA Title In Second Season

Madoc's Centre Hastings Junior volleyball team came away from Saturday's double round robin tourney in Cobourg with the COSSA championships. Centre Hastings beat out Crestwood for the Kawartha division 15-7 and 15-8 to decide the championship.

Though this was only the second year Centre Hastings has fielded a junior volleyball team in the Bay of Quinte division, coach Carm Donato said, "We've got a good experienced team. Some of the players are from last year's team." Centre Hastings finished fourth in COSSA in '71.

Saturday, however, Centre Hastings won the first round robin five games straight to scores of 15-7 under. In the second round, Crestwood and Centre took two games, giving the Madoc school an 15-8 record and a tie with Crestwood.

In the breaking two-of-three rubber that followed, Centre Hastings defeated Crestwood two games straight for the COSSA championship.

Coach Donato credited much of the team's success to the "exceptional spiking skills" of Don Hack and Pat Fennell."

Loyalist's women's volleyball team returned their first place standing in the OCAA eastern division Saturday by defeating both Durham and Algonquin Colleges 4 - 1.

Long Conveyor Belt

A 500-foot long, five-foot-wide "blanket" is prepared at the Cambridge, Mass., plant of the American Biltrite Rubber Co. Inc., for use on 25 - mile conveyor network hauling sticky oil-sand ore mixture between sand pits and refinery at Athabasca in northern Alberta. The conveyor belt is made up of special rubber compounds to withstand both the oil and the minus zero temperatures. The 54-inch thick belting will carry up to 100,000 tons of oil-sand ore daily which is needed to produce 50,000 barrels of semi - refined crude oil. (CP Photo)

Provinces Must Wait For Tax-share Decision

MONTREAL (CP) — The provinces will not know for several months whether the federal government will change its position on tax-revenue sharing, Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec said Sunday.

"There should be such a change," he said on a Radio-Canada television program.

"We have growing responsibilities," he said. "We have initiatives to take and new programs to begin."

"We are making considerable efforts in Quebec not to raise taxes and we have succeeded in that for the past three years," he said. But "we need more money to be able to fully assume all our responsibilities."

Mr. Bourassa would not comment on what effect the federal election, which resulted in minority government, might have on Ontario's and Quebec's fiscal demands.

The premier said that during talks with Ontario Premier William Davis last week, it became clear that the two provinces are in a similar position.

"Ontario is in complete agreement with us," he said. "Ontario has an increase, a deficit of several hundred million dollars for this year," a financial position which justifies that province making the same demand for fiscal sharing that Quebec has made, he said.

"We are not asking for billions more dollars," he said. "But it is several years now since there have been a net transfer of resources. So we are justified in asking for such a transfer."

Mr. Bourassa, whose term ends in April, 1975, said he does not foresee an early provincial election. Rene Levesque, Parti Quebecois leader, predicted Saturday there would be a provincial election in the fall of 1973.

Country Observes Remembrance Day

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Thousands of Canadians across the nation took time Saturday to attend Remembrance Day services and parades honoring the 110,000 Canadian war dead.

In Ottawa, under grey skies, Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener and Prime Minister Trudeau placed wreaths at the foot of the National War Memorial.

Mary Louise McLeod, a 16-year-old Indian from the Cape Croker reserve near Wiarton, Ont., laid a wreath on behalf of Canadian mothers as several thousand stood in silence in below-freezing weather.

Mrs. McLeod, who lost two sons in the Second World War and had three other sons wounded, stood for a few moments in silence after placing the wreath as single buglers played a lament in the background.

In Maritime provinces the weather was mostly cloudy and cool for the ceremonies in most urban centres. Lt.-Gov. Victor Oland of Nova Scotia laid the first wreath at the cenotaph in Halifax and took the salute in a march past of units from three services, the Royal Canadian Legion and veterans' associations.

Traditional ceremonies were held throughout Ontario combined observances at the Toronto legislature building. Most stores remained open in the province although liquor and beer stores were closed.

Dozy overcast ceremonies, church services or just direct their thoughts for a moment to

Burns Would Limit Force To Observers

VANCOUVER (CP) — A retired Canadian Forces general said Saturday a multi-national observation force should be established to oversee a possible Vietnam cease-fire.

Lt.-Gen. E. L. M. Burns said in an interview Saturday that Canada could contribute up to 1,000 troops toward formation of such an observation unit.

The 75-year-old general was commander of the United Nations Emergency Force in the Middle East from November, 1956, until December, 1959. He said, however, that such a force would not work in Vietnam.

The parties in the Vietnam conflict first agree that such an observation force would be set up merely to observe—not to attempt to put a picket line around Vietnam, which of course the Americans with their half a million troops were unable to do."

Speaker Stricken

TORONTO (CP) — Louis Stern, New York stockbroker and Jewish community leader, died of an apparent heart attack Saturday night shortly after collapsing during an address to 2,000 delegates at a dinner session of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds.

The collapse occurred while Mr. Stern, chairman of the federation's nominating committee, was presenting, as a farewell gift, a 2,000-year-old coin, unearthed in Israel, to outgoing president Irving Blum of Baltimore.

Mr. Stern, 68, was federation president from 1963 to 1968 and had been a president of the National Jewish Welfare Board. He was senior partner of Stern Bros., stock brokers, and member of the New York Stock Exchange.

War Makes Second Call On Burn-scarred Kim Phuc

TRANG BANG (AP) — Misfortune has paid another call on Phan Thi Kim Phuc and her family in the hard-luck South Vietnam Town of Trang Bang.

A misdirected napalm strike by a South Vietnamese bomber June 8 cost the life of Kim Phuc's little brother and seriously burning down a highway, naked and screaming in pain. Her photograph was published around the world.

After months in a Saigon hospital nine-year-old Kim Phuc was reunited with her family. Two weeks ago, the war came again to Trang Bang.

Two platoons of North Vietnamese troops slipped into the town, 25 miles northeast of Saigon, occupied its eastern quarter and dug in for a fight.

The townspeople fled, and when Kim Phuc and her parents returned last week, they feared their hopes in ruins and the fruit trees dead.

"I wish peace would come quicker," said Kim Phuc's father, to whom the last six months has brought a dead son, a scarred daughter, a destroyed home and unemployment.

The dead trees are being cut for firewood, and the sagging North Vietnamese bunkers are being filled in to make room for a few vegetable patch.

Kim Phuc's school will reopen next week, after having been closed because of the fighting. Meanwhile, she makes periodic return visits to the burn clinic in Saigon.

The skin grafts left deep scars on her back and left arm. She cannot move the arm completely and does physical therapy exercises daily.

LIST OF EXCHANGES

SHOWING RATE-GROUP CLASSIFICATIONS FOR LOCAL EXCHANGE SERVICE

Rate groups are based on total telephone count.

Classifications are subject to change when total telephone count in the local service area exceeds existing group limit.

To find the rates for any exchange, look in the following alphabetical "List of Exchanges". Note rate group number belonging to the list of exchange named, then refer to the table "Monthly Exchange Rates by Rate Groups". The rates forecast, proposed in Application "A", and proposed in Application "B" appear under the rate group number on that table.

Waffle Women Hit Lawyers and Unions

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian law and trade unions came in for criticism during a weekend conference of the Toronto Waffle Women's Group.

Susan Perley of Halifax, author of Women and the Law in Nova Scotia, told a session Sunday that Canadian law is loaded against women and little help can be expected from the legal profession.

"The lawyers are not interested in the oppressed, and because they are mostly men they have less interest in the law for women," Miss Perley told the Toronto women's group of the Ontario Waffle Movement for an Independent Socialist Canada.

In another session, Yvonne Trower, who has worked in the trade union movement during such periods as the organization of workers at the Alcan Aluminum smelter at Kitimat, B.C., said unions must open executive positions to women if they are to live up to their policies of giving equality to all members.

Miss Perley, in her criticism of Canadian law, warned women not to be lulled into false security when laws such as equal pay for equal work are passed because such laws are rarely enforced.

"They are passed to keep us happy—a little law here and a little law there."

Miss Perley, who is not a lawyer, said she had approached the profession in Nova Scotia to gather, in one reference book, laws which affect women.

"They said it would be a tremendous job and couldn't be done in less than two years," she said.

She said the research was carried out under a federal Local Initiatives Project by a research team in less than a year.

"It is ironical, but the Dalhousie law school now uses the book," she said.

Mrs. Trower, in her criticism of unions, stressed it was made in

NOTICE

ONTARIO
MINISTRY OF NATURAL RESOURCES
'ATTENTION HUNTERS'
WE REQUIRE ALL YOUR DEER AND MOOSE HIDES
The Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources in the Tweed District are asking hunters to help in the collection of hides for the Ontario Deer Crest Program.
The purpose of this program is to utilize hides that are not otherwise used. The hides will be collected by the Ministry of Natural Resources personnel throughout the District. Hunters are asked to co-operate by removing the hides in a manner to be presented and then distributed to the collection depots in Northern Ontario.
We are also interested in collecting antlers of all sizes as many are unusable. These jaws will be used in wildlife management information classes.
If in doubt for the hide and lower jaw, we are giving a few small guidelines.
When donating the deer hide and jaws, please be sure your name, address, and date of kill and the township where the deer was killed.
The hides and jaws will be collected at all Natural Resources offices and at the following points:
Kingston Fish & Game Club Kingston Mr. George Woodhouse, 227 Kent St., Belleville
2 Miles East of Foxboro
Mr. Jim Dann, District Forester.

Filming in Ireland Is Risky

NEW YORK (AP) — The news from Belfast last Aug. 21 was that two Irish Republican Army guerrillas had accidentally blown themselves up and killed six others while trying to bomb a border customs post.

It rained 527 the summer of the people killed in three years of bloodshed in Northern Ireland. And it occurred the day filming started on a gentle story with a chilling title: A War of Children.

The movie, to be shown Dec. 5 on CBS television, is about two families—Protestant and Catholic—in Belfast. It concerns the efforts of one young boy from each family to keep up their friendship despite the religious barriers and bitterness of their city.

While set in Belfast, most of the story had to be filmed in the relative security of Dublin because, among other things, it used actors dressed in British military uniforms.

"Belfast was absolutely unfeasible," says the show's producer-director, George Schaefer. "It's an armed camp.

"There would have been no way of getting any protection there."

The teleplay, written by James Costigin, is in keeping with television's trend towards dramas based on topical events.

Dublin authorities insisted on certain precautions to keep the peace.

"They wouldn't allow any authentic British uniforms to be used, because they said the uniforms would be stolen and used to infiltrate up north," Schaefer said, "so we had to make our own.

"They also refused to let us use real guns of any sort, which made me furious," he said, "but it turned out they were right.

"The third day we were shooting someone broke into the prop wagon, stole all the dummy guns and set fire to the wagon.

He said the film company tried to do the show as quietly as possible. But when a scene calls for actors in British army uniforms to go about in the main street of Dublin, certain things happened.

Like a newspaper headline: 'British Land in Dublin.'

The film crew was a potentially explosive blend of Englishmen and Irishmen, some of the latter actual IRA members. But there was no war.

ALBERT PIROTH

Piroth Files For Mayor

PICTON (Staff) — Picton mayor Albert Piroth has filed nomination papers for the office of mayor.

He stated earlier this month that he would seek re-election as mayor and would contest the mayoralty only if he was dissatisfied with the candidate or candidates to come forward.

To date, only Picton mayor Margaret Ackerman had filed nomination papers for the mayor's office.

Mr. Piroth also filed nomination papers for reeve last week.

More Names In Hat

TRENTON (Staff) — Several more Trenton residents have declared their positions in the forthcoming municipal elections, for offices other than council.

Bert Garrett, Trenton lawyer, has qualified to run for the separate school trustee.

J. B. Kroeze, chairman of the Prince Edward Hastings & Renan Catholic School Board, has announced he will not seek re-election. He says he may be moving from Trenton in the near future.

Robert Carlisle, manager of Bell Telephone in Trenton, announced Friday he will be seeking a seat on the Trenton Public Utilities Commission.

Theft Charged

BRIGHTON (Staff) — A pedestrian crossing Highway 401 near here early Friday evening was struck and instantly killed by a passing car.

Stanley Robert Steacey, 61, a retired railway employee and resident of 22 Division St. Brighton, was crossing 401 on foot at time of the 7.36 p.m. accident.

Driver of the vehicle was Glen William Mansen, 21, of Ardoch, Ontario. Coroner is Dr. D. W. Davies of Brighton. Investigating officer is Brighton Detachment OPP Constable Kenneth Pratt.

Lahr Visitors Anxious To Forge Firm Links

Belleville's visitors from Lahr return home tomorrow. If nothing else, their visit here has left less than 24 hours remaining for representatives of both communities to make preliminary arrangements on a face-to-face basis for the further development of the twin cities' program.

Very little has been decided, although all parties realize that personal discussions are better than letters as vehicles for getting things done.

In interviews with the German delegation yesterday, ironically it became clear that the proposal that had seemed most likely to be realized may be riddled with difficulties.

This is the student exchange program.

The German are keenly interested in this and the Canadian armed forces, a major catalyst for the twin cities scheme, have offered to provide transportation for eight students from Lahr to come to Canada here and for eight Belleville students to go to school in Lahr.

One question that must be looked into is can the Hastings County School Board provide students of sufficient calibre to participate in the school system of its twin city?

If it can, there will not be a long list of candidates to draw from.

There is one great difference between the two systems with regard to language training — a difference that will give the German an edge as far as school exchanges are concerned.

In the German high schools (called Gymnasia), study of the English language is compulsory from the first year that the student enters at age 10, instead of 14 as is the case in Ontario.

Here, the study of German is optional, not compulsory, beginning in grade 11 and continuing to the end of grade 13. As a rule, then, at age 17 all Germans have had seven years training in English while the students here, for the most part, are not studying German at all. Those that are learning it at age 17 are likely to be in grade 12, taking their second year of German instruction.

For the German student, study of either French or Latin is compulsory from the third year in the gymnasium (from age 12). physics is compulsory from the fourth year; chemistry from the fifth.

Rudyrd Heinrigs, German, geography, history, mathematics, biology, physical education and art are also compulsory from the first year in high school — from the time the student is 10 years old. Here the trend has been toward elective courses.

While our system may be sound in equipping young people to cope with life in Ontario, it leaves all but a small minority without the kind of background needed for participation in the Lahr system.

Dr. Wilhelm Hodapp, director of one of the Lahr gymnasia and one of the delegation that returns tomorrow, believes a student exchange can be of substantial benefit to the young people of Lahr. He also feels a summer holiday exchange program would be a useful supplementary scheme. Several members of the delegation indicated the employment situation in Lahr is such that it would not be difficult to find summer jobs for Belleville students with reasonable knowledge of German. However, they said it would not be difficult to arrange accommodation.

One councillor, Eugene Lindecver said, "we could take one of our rooms . . . there is lots of room and we would be glad to provide accommodation."

If Belleville industries could provide jobs and service clubs accommodation, the Germans are confident they would be able to reciprocate.

City manager Adolf Kohler sees tourism "as a next step" in building the Lahr-Belleville relationship. He points out that Lahr's hotels and restaurants have reasonable rates and commendable service.

The industrial Lahr may make special arrangements for the reception of tourists from Belleville to the Black Forest town.

Industrialist Fritz Leser, another member of the Lahr delegation, expressed interest in exchange of information about special events in both cities and surrounding centres as a boon to tourists. He said Lahr has an administrator of cultural events who could provide this kind of information.

Leser mentioned that Lahr is within easy reach of Freiburg, Karlsruhe, Basel, Switzerland and Strasbourg, France where he said there is now a large exhibition of the works of Vincent Van Gogh.

As far as Belleville is concerned, the Lahr visitors are impressed by its surrounding open spaces and its adjacent Bay of Quinte. However they feel for Lahr residents to come here in large numbers, efforts will have to be made to offer good reasonably priced accommodation.

Here: Leser believes German industrialists would be interested in studying Canadian approaches and expects the opposite be true.

He indicated one way that business links could be forged would be for industries in his cities to provide lists of their products, backed up with technical material.

In this way, he said common interests could be seen and companies may be able to work together. Leser also mentioned the possibilities of Canadians counselling their German confreres on business conditions here, with the Lahr industrialist doing the same for Belleville business.

Only hours remain for the Lahr visitors to be done on these possible bondings and the Lahr visitors are hopeful that action can be taken in the little time that is left.

Correspondence will doubtless be needed to iron out aspects But the Lahr visitors are interested in arriving at some basic agreements before they return to their Black Forest homes.

Farm-style Dinner German Guests' Weekend Highlight

Belleville's visiting German delegation got its first real taste of Quinte living this weekend.

Most of their six-day stay has been taken up with tours and receptions. On Saturday and Sunday, the guests from Lahr had a chance to become better acquainted with the style and customs of life in eastern Ontario.

Highlight, by all accounts, was a sumptuous meal prepared on the 1,000 acre farm of Mr. and Mrs. James Spry of RR4, Marmora, Saturday. Served on a threshing table to 18 persons, the dinner left the visitors amazed at culinary skills in the New World.

There were rolls and roast, salads and vegetables, all appropriately topped off by apple pie and cheddar cheese.

Earlier in the day, the delegation was taken to Batawa for a trip through the Bata Shoe Factory, after which they went on a tour of Marmoreton Mine in Marmora.

The afternoon included a two-hour visit to the Quinte Mall and an evening dinner at the Four Seasons Hotel capped the day.

The visitors spent Sunday being entertained in the homes of several Belleville families.

Today they're off to Toronto for a luncheon in the provincial parliament buildings and an airplane flight over Niagara Falls.

Mail Strike For Yule?

Belleville's postal workers will wait to hear from union negotiators before taking strike action, says a local spokesman.

The 75 members of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers and Letter Carriers of Canada could join other postal employees in a cross-Canada walkout unless a conciliation report — expected shortly — is agreeable to the unions and the federal government.

"We're not going to wildcat," said Jim Campbell, president of the Belleville locals. "Our members are opposed to the governments offer of a three year contract which says Mr. Campbell, is not retroactive to March 26, date of expiry for the last contract.

In addition, workers want higher wages, a shorter work week and more job security. Much of the discussion has dealt with staff reductions as implementation of a postal code enabled automatic machinery to replace humans.

Local union members have already received strike ballots but cannot legally walk out until seven days after the report is handed in. The 7.36 p.m.

With the Christmas mail rush already beginning, Mr. Campbell predicts the unions may well be successful in their demand.

"Put it this way, we'll be in a pretty good position," he said.

Pettingill A Candidate

HILLIER (Staff) — Competition in the municipal elections in Hillier township this year was heightened when a newcomer to the political scene announced that he will seek the office of deputy reeve.

Allan Pettingill of RR 1, Hillier, said he plans to make a bid for the office of deputy reeve now held by Lewis Wright. It is the first time he has sought public office in his municipality.

Mr. Wright, a veteran township councillor, is expected to oppose Donald Sutton, manager of the Belleville, Chamber of Commerce in a race for the reeveship.

Incumbent reeve of Hillier and warden of Prince Edward County Ross Benway has announced he will retire from municipal politics this year.

Mr. Sutton, a member of Hillier council, is an advocate of one-tier government and has cited its promotion as part of his platform.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

TUESDAY, NOV. 14

Aries (March 21-April 19): An old grievance is nothing to nurse—you need the co-operation and energy to go ahead. Great care with technicalities.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Push if must, but, first look to see who gets the impact and what it does to your prestige. Taste begets error in usual.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Unsettled conditions are normal. Resolve to get on with more important responsibilities without starting any personal clash.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Whatever can be done to increase the value of your home should be planned and budgeted to avoid unbalancing your finances.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Nearly everybody has illusions—those who don't have chips on both shoulders. Healthy self-interest carries the day for you.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Get done with your share of the work if you feel like making critical comments. Expect at least as good as you offer.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Among current turbulence there are very brief opportunities to correct an outstanding discrepancy. Be sure your facts are clear.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If you can function effectively within limits, do so—to extend into strange new manoeuvres tips the balance.creates confusion.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Direct your main thought and energy into keeping things on an even keel. Realize that people are sensitive to all sorts of comment.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A mental inventory is a good beginning. Not just the material possession you hold, but intangibles as well.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Relative strangers can be helpful according to how you are pursuing your goals and what comes first to general attention.

Pisces (Feb. 19 - March 20): Once you're sure of what you want to do, proceed without further discussion or explanation and just go ahead.

This Poor Man Stinging in Rain

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: For 15 years my husband has not been able to take a bath without stinging as if he had a terrible rash. Only there is no rash on his body.

This stinging lasts for about 45 minutes every time his body gets moist, even from perspiration or any contact with water. It is worse from his neck down to his waist.

This is a strange and rather uncommon condition probably caused by a sort of allergic reaction of body cells to water.

It appears to result from the release of certain substances from the cells, either histamine or what is called serotonin, which bring on the stinging or itching sensation. Often there is a rash associated with it.

If the released substance is histamine, then treatment with an antihistamine can be effective. Antihistamines, though, according to some studies, will not have an effect if the released substance is serotonin. However, other drugs (Periactin is one) can be effective.

The drugs are usually prescribed to be taken about an hour before a bath.

The drugs should not be attempted without consultation with a physician.

Sometimes such conditions respond to simpler treatments. For example, brief exposures to water a few minutes at a time every 15 or 20 minutes may create a tolerance so that the individual can take a bath in relative comfort.

I would normally suspect some substance,say his particular bath soap or maybe a deodorant, as a possible cause of his reaction. But, since you say this has been going on for 15 years, I suspect you have tried your own detective work along these lines.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Everyone seems to have a different idea about the caffeine content of coffee, tea and cola drinks. Also what about the decaffeinated coffees which claim to be 97 per cent caffeine free? Is this really a significant reduction?

A six-ounce cup of coffee runs about 18 milligrams of caffeine per ounce, or a bit over 100 milligrams per cup. (One milligram is 1-30,000 of an ounce.)

Tea, depending on how strongly it is brewed, runs 13 to 15 mg. per ounce, or somewhat below coffee. And cola drinks run three to four mg. per ounce. Decaffeinated coffee does just about what it claims to do—two to four mg. per cup, which is about three per cent of the caffeine in a regular cup of coffee.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been told that bubble bath causes kidney infection and mostly in girls. Is this true?

True only to the extent that it may (not necessarily will) cause irritation to the external genital area. That's not the same as a kidney infection. A few other causes are more likely.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am male, 61, and a diabetic who has just recovered from a prostate operation.

X-rays show I have a rather large gall stone, but because of my age and general condition, my doctor believes it advisable to postpone an operation for stone removal until absolutely necessary.

Given your age, recent operation and your present physical condition, I'd say you have a very discerning doctor. Go along with him.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
Is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three I's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Opening lead — king of spades.

This deal occurred in a match between Holland and Belgium. The final contract at both tables was four hearts.

At the first table, the Dutch West led the king and another spade. East won with the ace and continued by carefully shifting the jack, but South easily made the contract after ruffing the spade and forcing out the ace of trumps.

At the second table, the Belgian West led the four of spades, and the king. Declarer (Cais, of Holland) played low from dummy and East (Silberwasser) won the trick with the jack.

Recognizing that West had the king of spades as an entry card, Silberwasser returned his singleton diamond at trick two, planning to get a diamond ruff later on.

It was obvious to everyone especially Cais, that the diamond return was a singleton. So, in an effort to forestall the threatening ruff, Cais won the second in dummy, cashed the A-K of clubs, discarding a spade from his hand, and led a third round of clubs.

He hoped East would follow high, in which case Cais planned to discard his last spade. This would prevent West from ever taking the lead with a spade for the killing diamond return.

It was a laudable effort, and it would surely have succeeded had East been asleep at the switch. But Silberwasser had not allowed himself to be caught napping.

The ace of clubs he had played the six, but on the king he had played the jack. (Had he played the seven on the king, South would have made the contract.)

On the third club Silberwasser played the seven, knowing there was no way for declarer to prevent East from getting a diamond ruff. Silberwasser was easily the victor in the end game.

Tomorrow: Elimination.

CP News Roundup

Kitchener Hotels Fear Motorcyclists

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — A plea for more protection from the increasing violence involving motorcyclists and teenagers is being made by area hotel owners.

A brief from the Waterloo-Wellington Hotel Association demanding more police surveillance is to be forwarded to Queen's Park this week, with copies to the Ontario League Canada Board and Ontario Provincial Police.

The hoteliers claim that many of the incidents begin when motorcyclists are refused service. In one recent case a hotel owner received a broken arm and head injuries when he was jumped by a motorcyclist.

In the brief, the hoteliers complain that problems are developing with those under the age of 18 who attempt to drink illegally.

Hoteliers say 20 per cent of their licence fees are given back to municipalities to provide police protection.

"We don't think we're getting enough of that protection," said George Schmalz, owner of an area hotel.

Backs Religion

GALT, Ont. (CP) — A Galt school trustee said Sunday she is getting growing support for her campaign to keep religious instruction in the public school curriculum.

Twyla Hendry, mother of five school-age children, said she received numerous calls from supporters since she made a stand against a Kitchener-based group that wants to remove all religious instruction from Waterloo County's public schools.

Whistle Works

TORONTO (CP) — Margaret Sharpe, 75, literally blew the whistle on a purse snatcher Saturday night.

The whistle blasts caused the youth who stole her purse to panic and brought "some nice boys" to help her.

Although the boys didn't catch the thief, they retrieved her purse with nothing missing.

Mrs. Sharpe's late husband was a school-crossing guard and had several whistles.

"I alway keep one whistle in my coat pocket, and if I change coats I make sure I put the whistle in my pocket," she said. "I keep another whistle near my telephone just in case of an emergency."

Bad Boy Runs

TORONTO (CP) — Mel Lastman, self-made millionaire and president of an appliance store chain, Sunday announced he will be a candidate for mayor in the borough of North York in the December municipal elections.

Improve Orbit

OTTAWA (CP) — Telesat Canada engineers delayed in moving Anik 1 into permanent orbit Sunday, shooting instead to position the communications satellite more accurately before thrusting it into a circular path around the earth.

Under the original schedule, the satellite's apogee motor was to have been fired at 6:30 p.m. EST Sunday, boosting the craft to a fixed point 22,300 miles above the equator, directly south of Calgary.

But engineers decided to delay the firing until the satellite's 11th orbit about 3:30 p.m. EST today. The additional time will allow them to improve Anik's elliptical transfer orbit and reduce th echance of error.

Floods Caused

LONDON (AP) — Heavy rain and high winds caused widespread flooding Sunday in England and Wales.

Strike at Port

MONTREAL (CP) — Much of the regular pick-up and delivery service at the port of Montreal, handled by independent trucking firms, was halted Sunday by a strike of more than 2,000 truck drivers.

The strike by the drivers, members of local 931 of the Teamsters' Union, affects about 30 Montreal-area trucking firms and follows a breakdown, late last week, of negotiations for a new contract.

A Sunday meeting failed to break an apparent impasse on contract demands. Issues include working hours, conditions and fringe benefits.

Climbers Missing

TEHRAN (AP) — Twenty mountaineers from Tehran University are missing in the 13-buru Mountains north of Tehran, university sources said Saturday.

Families said that the young climbers set out early Wednesday and were due back within 24 hours. There has been heavy snow on the heights.

Use For Dogs

POTSDAM, N.Y. (AP) — Laboratory researchers at Clarkson College of Technology say they think they have found a possible use for sidewalk "dog droppings." Experimental conversion of animal and human waste matter into fuel oil is under way at Clarkson. When it is heated with carbon monoxide in a high - pressure reactor the result is an oil with a heat value comparable to natural fuel oils.

Families United

BERLIN (AP) — Two East German children, cut off from their parents in the West by the Communist wall dividing Berlin since 1951, told a news conference Sunday about the long years of trying to be reunited with their families.

Regee Stork, 12, and Sylvia Grosse, 16, were two of 34 East German children expected to reach West Berlin and West Germany during the weekend, guided by parents who had been given special permission to get them.

A West Berlin city official said that about 1,000 children from East Germany are expected to be allowed to rejoin families in the West. The reunions result from the last-completed basic treaty for normal relations between East and West Germany.

Composer Dies

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Rudolf Friml, last of the great operettists, died Sunday night. He was 92.

The diminutive, Prague-born composer of Rose Marie and The Vagabond King died after a lengthy illness at Presbyterian Hospital.

He was known as the last of the big three operettists, along with Victor Herbert and Sigmund Romberg. But he cites his 33-operettas, he composed numerous works in other forms and was renowned as a pianist.

Some of the last Ugandan Asians to be airlifted from Kampala to Canada departed from Montreal. The final planeload of 204 refugees brought the number of Asians airlifted to Montreal to 4,348. (CP Photo)

Stanfield Expects Chance To Be PM If Grits Beaten

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield says that if the present Liberal minority government fell within a few months, he would expect to be called on to form a new government.

And he feels a "very strong obligation" to bring about defeat of the government because it has lost the mandate it had and is appearing before the House of Commons under false pretences."

"The Trudeau government is not prepared to face Parliament on the basis of the program they put before the people because, as Mr. Trudeau says, that program was rejected," Mr. Stanfield said in a television interview Sunday on the CTV program Question Period.

Mr. Stanfield said the government of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau now is preparing to meet Parliament on the basis of "quite a different program" than that it presented in the election campaign.

The new program would be designed "presumably to suck in the NDP."

The NDP with 31 seats holds the balance of power in the new Parliament elected Oct. 30. The Liberals lost their previous solid majority and now have the same number of seats as the Conservatives—108.

Mr. Stanfield asked whether it is politically moral for a government party "to face the public on one platform and then rewrite its platform right after the election and try to face Parliament on another platform."

"It's on that basis that I said it had no right to hang onto power."

Answering questions touching on the constitutional aspects of the present political situation, he said that if the Trudeau government fell within a matter of a few months, "I would expect to be called upon to form a government."

He suggested that the Governor-General would not be obliged in such a case to grant a request for Parliamentary dissolution from the prime minister, but would be within his rights to call on the Opposition leader to form a new cabinet.

At the same time Mr. Stanfield said, "I'm not troubled by the prospects of an election if Mr. Trudeau wants it."

The Conservatives would not vote against a measure they considered right, or support one they believed wrong, just to defeat the government.

"... But we feel no obligation to keep this government in power."

Mr. Stanfield said a Conservative government, in order to obtain "access to new sources of information," would replace a number of key economic advisers.

He refused to name names, but commented: "I think we all know the main areas in which economic advice emanates as far as the government's concerned."

He apparently was referring, at least in part, to the Bank of Canada and the finance department.

Mr. Stanfield said the Conservatives intend to devote more attention to party organization in Quebec, where they won only two seats.

"It's very, very important to me that our party get substantial support from the province of Quebec and I think it's important to the country that we get that, so we're going to make an increased effort there.

Steelworkers' Leader Is Worried by Trend

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — President L. W. Abel of the United Steelworkers of America told a union dinner Saturday night Canadian members should resist "political" pressures to abandon the 1.4 million-member Steelworkers for smaller "company" unions.

Mr. Abel noted that 1,800 employees of the Aluminum Company of Canada smelter at Kitimat, B.C., voted last month to decertify the Steelworkers as their bargaining agent in favor of an affiliate of the Council of Canadian Unions.

"We are aware of people in Canada trying to discredit trade unions and force Canadian workers backwards," he said.

Mr. Abel said the Steelworkers is a fair-trade policy in the United States which would not impose tariffs or quotas but set guidelines to control imports. He said Canada would not be affected by the restrictions.

Hunters Trespass

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — Kent County's fall and winter hunting season, which opened here recently, has swamped the Ontario Provincial Police with complaints about trespassing, Constable D. A. Mathweson of the force's public relations and safety division said: "Each year at this season, the OPP gets called out to umpire quarrels between irate farmers or lodge owners and the hunters they don't want on their premises."

Hydro Change Splits Experts

By COLIN BRUCE, Staff Reporter

Premier William Davis's decision to make Ontario Hydro a Crown corporation responsible to the provincial legislature was described in some circles Monday as a backward step that will delay operations of the public utility.

But here in Belleville Public Utilities Commission spokesmen were more cautious.

"How can I make any commitment as to how I feel about the change when I know nothing about it other than the occasional news brief, which is one man's interpretation?" asked Gerard O'Connor of the PUC.

Premier Davis said Monday he endorsed a special study group proposal that Hydro be made a Crown corporation, but rejected a recommendation that two senior civil servants be appointed to the utility's board of directors.

Mr. O'Connor said there had been "... so many delays in the release of the report (of the study group), there must be something weighty in it."

Eight times, the local PUC was told it would receive the report. It never came.

Mayor J. Russell Scott, chairman of the PUC, said today, "there isn't much I can say ... shooting in the dark."

The mayor said he wanted the report in his hands to examine all the rammifications.

A rumor in connection with local PUC groups intimates the 375 commissions across the province will be reduced to 50, he said.

"It may mean we will have a regional commission for the Quinte Planning area," said the mayor.

The latest word is that the Belleville commission will receive a report in full this coming Thursday.

Ebby H. Hare, chairman of the utilities commission in Kingston, Ont., said there is "no need" for Hydro to be made a Crown corporation.

"I can't see anything wrong with Hydro is it's now operated," he said.

Sergant Anderson, chairman of Windsor's utilities commission, said "the people of Ontario may feel better about Hydro as a Crown corporation, thinking they will have more control over it that way.

"But I personally don't think it will make much difference."

Ted Dash, chairman of Sudbury's utilities commission, also said he does not believe a Crown corporation structure for Hydro will change the operations of the utility.

Ray Pfaff, general manager of the St. Catharines Public Utilities Commission, said Hydro, now operated by six commissioners under chairman George Gathercole, has been "pretty well run."

He said that he expects that "things won't move as fast as they have" when Hydro becomes a Crown corporation.

Mr. Pfaff said he is especially worried about decisions on rates for municipal commissions.

"We could get held up for as much as a year when we're seeking a decision," he said.

Officials of other municipal utilities said they did not believe that Hydro would change much as a Crown corporation.

Snowfall: Trace

Winter Weather Arrives

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Winter put the finger on the Quinte region today with no signs of letting up until at least Friday or Saturday.

While only a trace of snow fell this morning, disappearing as quickly as it came, up to two inches are anticipated by this evening by weather forecasters at Canadian Forces Base Trenton. Low for today will be 28 degrees with a high of 34 degrees.

Snow will be accompanied by winds of 14 to 20 miles an hour, gusting to 40 miles an hour.

"It's cold enough to keep it (snow)" said the CFB Trenton forecaster, who said the extended cold spell should continue until at least the early part of the weekend. Temperatures should then moderate to the low forties, he said.

Tomorrow should bring steady 15 to 20 mile-an-hour winds accompanied by snow flurries.

Cold weather is just what deer hunters needed. Firmer ground, less mud and simpler tracking will aid them.

New Peace Talks In Offing

PARIS (AP) — Le Duc Tho, North Vietnam's chief peace negotiator, headed for Paris today for what Radio Hanoi said was another meeting with the Americans on the Vietnam war.

Tho stopped over in Peking to confer with Chinese Premier Chou En-lai, the New China news agency reported. There was no hint as to how long Tho would stay in Peking.

Tho also is expected to stop in Moscow for discussions with the Soviet leaders before flying on to the French capital.

There was speculation that the two main U.S. negotiators, Henry A. Kissinger and Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., were en route to Paris, but the White House said both were in Washington.

Kissinger and Haig flew to Andrews Air Force Base near Washington late Monday night after conferring with President Nixon at Camp David, Md.

South Vietnam, meanwhile, announced today it would agree to withdrawal of North Vietnamese troops from the South by stages instead of the total withdrawal at once that it had demanded earlier.

The Radio Hanoi broadcast said today North Vietnam "is show its goodwill and seriousness," had agreed to "another private meeting between the United States and the Democratic Republic of Vietnam to solve the signing of the agreement on ending the war and restoring peace in Vietnam."

It said the meeting was proposed by "the U.S. side."

Tass, the official Russian news agency, said Tho will "attend a confidential meeting with the American side with the objects of settling the issue of signing an agreement to end the war and restore peace in Vietnam."

Snipers Kill Two in Belfast

BELFAST (CP) — A British soldier standing in the lighted window of a home he was searching was shot fatally in the head and neck by a sniper Monday night.

Authorities said Pte. Stanley Evans, 19, of the Queen's Regiment, was shot by a man holding a child when two bullets smashed the window glass and struck him.

A 38-year-old Roman Catholic, Joseph McCrystal, died of wounds when he was shot Monday by a sniper in a passing car in West Belfast.

THE WEATHER

NDP to Give PM Objectives

TORONTO (CP) — Providing the minority Liberal government meets a series of "objectives," the New Democratic Party has no plans to bring on another general election.

After an all-day caucus here Monday, the 31-member NDP Parliamentary caucus decided to present the government with the "objectives" and party leader David Lewis said that "our approach is to make Parliament work."

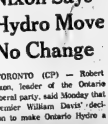
This was the first caucus since the Oct. 30 general election, which left the Liberals and Conservatives in a virtual stalemate with the balance of power in the hands of the NDP. The main issue was whether the party should announce a long-term position regarding support for a minority government or whether votes and issues should be met on a day-to-day basis.

Sources said there was overwhelming support for the flexible approach, but that the party's "objectives" be laid out for the government.

A caucus committee will formulate these objectives over the next few days and Mr. Lewis will announce them at an Ottawa press conference, "if they are not met by the government." said Mr. Lewis. "this Parliament won't last a week."

Sources said the consensus of the caucus was that there shouldn't be another election immediately and that the NDP should play "a responsibility role" in the new Parliament. But there was also strong agreement that the party not compromise on its stated positions.

Nixon Says Hydro Move No Change



TORONTO (CP) — Robert Nixon, leader of the Ontario Liberal party, said Monday that Premier William Davis' decision to make Ontario Hydro a Crown corporation will do little to make it more responsive to the public.

Mr. Davis announced earlier Monday at a news conference that he endorsed the recommendation of a government study group to turn the public utility into a Crown corporation.

Hydro now is operated by six commissioners appointed by the provincial cabinet for indefinite terms. The new corporation, Mr. Davis said, will report to the legislature through a minister without portfolio.

Mr. Nixon said replacing the commission with a Crown corporation "does not in any effective way increase control by the government, the legislature or the public."

He said the government "will still appoint the members of the board as they now appoint the commission."

ROBERT NIXON

Crown corporation will do little

This was also the position taken by the party's federal council which met here Sunday.

Mr. Lewis told reporters that both the council and the caucus fully supported all the statements he has made since the election.

After the caucus, Mr. Lewis said several times that "our approach is to make Parliament work" and "the spirit in which we approached things is to make Parliament work."

As to specific votes, he said, "when the time comes we will make a decision as to what we will do on the floor of Parliament." As for the probable length of the next Parliament, "we have not set any deadline."

Jail Terms For Quebec Trio Upheld

MONTREAL (CP) — One-year jail sentences for three top Quebec labor leaders who ended a provincial province-wide protests last May, were upheld Monday by the Quebec Court of Appeal.

Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor, one of the three men involved, said Monday night his federation would appeal his sentence to the Supreme Court of Canada.

The prison terms were imposed on the men for advising hospital workers to defy back-to-work injunctions during April's 11-day public service strike which was ended by emergency provincial legislation.

The Court of appeal said the sentences were entirely justified.

When Mr. Laberge, Marcel Pepin, president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions and Yvon Charbonneau, Quebec Teachers Corp. president, began serving the sentences last May, Quebec was thrown into a period of labor chaos.

The three leaders were released later that month when they registered appeals.

The court judgment also upheld fines ranging from $1,000 to $50,000 imposed on 13 hospital unions which disobeyed injunctions ordering maintenance of essential services for the chronically and mentally ill.

But it reduced to a maximum of six days in jail and $1,000 the fines imposed on 43 leaders of the hospital unions. One other hospital-union leader was sentenced to six days and $1,500 fine.

Their sentences originally ranged up to six months in jail and garnent and $5,000 in fines or an additional six months.

Dennison's Job Sought by Seven

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ontario's three largest cities were assured of mayoralty races Monday as nominations closed for Dec. 4 civic elections.

In Toronto there are seven candidates for the mayor's post to be vacated by William Dennison, and in Hamilton there are two after an all-day nomination entry.

In Ottawa, three men are contesting incumbent Pierre Benoit.

In Metropolitan Toronto, an upsurge in interest in civic affairs combined with increased salaries for elected representatives saw a record 634 nominated for 189 seats on councils, boards and public utilities commissions—105 more than in 1969.

Seeking the mayor's chair in Toronto are aldermen David Crossin, David Rotenberg and Anthony O'Donohue; newspaper columnist Pat Binnington; organizer Nelson Clarke, health inspector Donald Andrews and labor editor Joseph Henderson.

DESCRIBING HIMSELF as a "political virgin," Reginald Joseph Martin, 46, of 43 John Street, Trenton, qualified Monday to oppose Trenton Mayor Duncan Donald. Here, he presents nomination papers to town clerk O. W. Larry, right.

Quinte Nominates. Skipper Endorses Right to Choose

By IAN ROBERTSON
and HARRY MULHALL

With only minutes left to file nomination papers, Reginald Joseph Martin yesterday became the first Trenton resident to oppose Mayor Duncan McDonald at the polls in four years.

Describing himself as a "political virgin," Mr. Martin said, he "delayed submitting my nomination papers until the last possible moment in the hopes a more suitable and better-qualified candidate would present himself."

However, the 46 year - old Environment Canada federal survey vessel skipper, who works out of Burlington in the summer, says if elected mayor he will resign his job to devote full attention to his elected post.

Mr. Martin told reporters minutes after he filed nomination papers with Trenton clerk O. W. Larry, he felt acclamation of a mayor in the town of 14,500 would not "serve the best interests of all the citizens."

Mr. Martin's emergence in Trenton was a surprise of the Quinte local - government election scene — which firms up tonight with the qualification deadline and sees these highlights:

Belleville—A mayoralty contest, between Mayor Russell Scott and Alderman Robin Jeffrey with the biggest slate of city council nominees in years, 19 nominations for 10 seats.

Picton—Former Ontario longtime, mayor Harvey McFarland filed, nomination papers, as did Mayor Margaret Ackerman and Reeve Albert Piroth, who also was nominated again for reeve.

The townships—Hastings County Warden Carman Gibson is signing up. Tyendinaga township reeve to seek public school trusteeship. Sidney township reeve Jack Bush is retiring from local government after 11 years. Rural nominations brought a mix of acclamations and elections. In Mayo township, east of Bancroft, as many women as men were among the six nominees for four council seats.

For details on these nominations, see front page, second section.

Protestant Named Separate School Trustee

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A Protestant has won a seat on the Middlesex County separate school board by acclamation.

Ray Nottage, London purchasing agent for IT years, is believed the first Protestant in Canada to win election to a separate school board in Ontario.

Mr. Nottage, an Anglican, said he would have withdrawn if his candidacy was qualified Roman Catholics had been nominated in the ward.

National Policy Seen Impossible

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — Efforts to formulate a national economic policy must be doomed because of areas under provincial jurisdiction, Bert Lawrence, Ontario secretary for resource development, said Monday.

Canada does have a mild form of national fiscal policy, Mr. Lawrence told a questioner at the Policy Formation: Canada conference at the University of Waterloo, but the interests of different regions of provinces must be considered in attacking some problems.

"Efforts to centralize all policies will not work.

Violence Assumes Character of Spectator Sport

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The United States asked a UN committee Monday to approve a U.S. resolution on international terrorism, saying continued inaction will "only encourage increased resort to anarchy, violence and terror."

Ambassador W. Tapley Bennett told the General Assembly's legal committee it should support a U.S.-sponsored resolution aimed at fighting terrorism because violence is spreading "like an unchecked forest fire."

"Life—the life of the innocent bystander—has been made cheap," Bennett told the committee, adding: "To the shame of us all, violence has come in there times almost to assume the character of a spectator sport."

Elsewhere at the UN, the committee on non-self-governing territories demanded that Portugal open talks with the liberation movements in its African colonies and China appeared in the General Assembly to denounce Soviet disarmament proposals as "downright fraud."

The U.S. faces an uphill struggle in its effort to have an international treaty approved which would establish new legal measures to deal with terrorists.

Arab and African countries insist the UN should first consider the economic and social causes which produce terrorists. They also say the new measures could damage revolutionary and anti-colonial struggles they consider justified.

Some Arab members have chided the United States for forgetting its own revolutionary history and one Arab ambassador suggested that George Washington would be a terrorist in British eyes.

Bennett told the committee Monday: "Washington was a rebel and a very successful one ... but he did not go to Canada and throw bombs into supermarkets, injuring the bystanders."

Trenton Trustees All Acclaimed

TRENTON (Staff) — While election on interest in Trenton still be chiefly focused on council and PUC seats, representatives on both school boards have already been elected, by acclamation, at close of nominations 5 p.m. Monday.

Trustees Mrs. Jean M. Hutchison of 228 Dundas Street West, and Ralph Weaver, Trenton funeral director, of 279 Dundas East, were acclaimed for the Hastings County Board of Education.

Trustee Austin Scott, self-employed businessman, of 17 Primrose, has been acclaimed by newcomers Frank Hyland, manager of Industrial Acceptance Corporation in Trenton, and lawyer Brett Garrett, acclaimed as trustees on the Prince Edward - Hastings, Thomas Cadmore School Board, and John Forbes, purchasing agent, of 3 Third Avenue, remains as separate school representative on the Hastings County Board of Education.

Two seats had been open for positions on the Hastings County Board of Education, and with the retirement of Prince Edward Hastings Roman Catholic School Board chairman J. Ben Krouse, three seats on that board were open, creating creation of six extra seat. Only one representative on the school board from the separate school board, is elected.

Thurlow Contest Still Undecided

CANNIFTON (Staff) — Reeve Horace Casey of Thurlow who operates a farm on the township's second concession, has filed papers to seek another term.

It was an open question this morning whether he would be opposed. Deputy reeve Borden Forsythe on the fourth of Thurlow, has been nominated for both the position of reeve and deputy reeve again.

"I haven't made a decision on this yet . . . I want to talk to a few people," Forsythe said this morning. Where an individual has been nominated for more than one post he must decide by 5 p.m. today which one he will seek.

Besides Forsythe, there are two other nominees for the deputy reeve's post. Councillor Fletcher Reid and former councillor Walter Hamilton and newcomers to politics, Ernst Koetzel, George Beer and Gerry Matterson.

Six nominees have filed to contest three council seats. They are incumbents Don McKeown and Fletcher Reid, former councillor Walter Hamilton and newcomers to politics, Ernst Koetzel, George Beer and Gerry Matterson.

First Election Was Lively One

By HARRY MULBALL
Staff Reporter

Big civic election stakes, like the one now presented city voters, are not exactly new to Belleville.

That's the way city elections began.

In 1978 — with Belleville newly incorporated as a city — a total of 45 candidates ran for city hall's first council.

Such a political muster prompted The Intelligencer of Jan. 2, 1878, to comment that Belleville was "the city lately to take the lead over other civic municipalities in Canada in one respect: The number of municipal candidates."

But then, Canada's newest city voted under the ward system—seven wards in all, each electing "three candidates to the 21-man council.

And, despite such a wide-open aldermanic choice — or maybe because of it — focus of city-wide election fervor was the mayoralty contest.

It was a campaign run in the middle of a harsh winter—election day was Jan. 7, 1878 — and one which warmed up as the weather grew colder.

That is, if contemporary comment by The Intelligencer is any barometer.

In the partisan political style typical of the era's journalism, The Intelligencer unswervingly crusaded for the candidate of its choice, while blasting his opponent.

The newspaper's blessing fell on Alex Robertson, its cranky on his rival, James Hambly.

As far as the newspaper was concerned, the electoral partnership of Hambly and some of his supporters was an "unholy alliance."

One Hambly adherent was charged with being motivated by gratitude for "past favors in the disposal of lands in which he is interested.

"Probably this gentleman's gratitude," added The Intelligencer, "is also of that kind which counts on a lively sense of favors to come."

Robertson, on the other hand was "a man from whom the interested ones have nothing to expect, which fact they evidence by persistent support of his opponent, who has never been their friend until lately..."

The warmth of words apparently wasn't felt to be one-sided, although Mr. Robertson's win was unexpectedly prevented from lively participation if he desired it. Election week, he came down with an attack of quinsey and suffered an inflamed throat.

But The Intelligencer — and his friends — did proud by their stricken champion.

Two days before election a now speechless Mr. Robertson was carried to the polls, opened his mouth and let it be would have been so bitterly or virulently attacked, hosts of friends would have been ready to repel those attacks. ...

Campaign fervor appeared limited to verbalizing. At least no extensive rowdyism is reported.

This could be for a number of reasons. A year earlier the community had undergone the country when railroad job cuts had evoked such prolonged rioting troops had to be rushed in to restore peace and escort trains through the city. A reformed police force was headed by a police chief, the redoubtable Hugh MacKinnon, one of Canada's most famed law enforcers.

Then there was the weather which, as the election neared, turned into one of the bitterest winters in years. The day before the polls opened temperatures dropped to 23 below.

Still, the frosty campaigning apparently bore active results. The Intelligencer, which published a special night edition on the results, called it "the loveliest" election in Belleville history since the secret ballot had replaced open voting some years before.

There was another reason, advanced by the Intelligencer: The fact that the sleighing was good also contributed to the result. "A great number of sleighs (carrying votes for the polls) was out and the jingle of bells was continuous on the snow-covered streets.

The Robertson campaign was in as smooth a finish.

When the poll counts were announced at city hall, the vote showed Robertson 762, Hambly, 596 — a 166-vote win for Intelligencer's favorite.

The acrimony of the campaign ebbed and was drowned out by the noise of an inaugural "procession" led by a band mounted on a sleigh.

The Intelligencer described the conclusion: "With cheers and other demonstrations the parade passed up Front St., escorting Mr. Robertson to his residence near the Upper Bridge and soon after dispersed."

The enthusiasm and styles of campaigns have varied over the years along with the candidates.

But Belleville has first moved to reduce the cumbersome 21-man council last 69 years ago. In the 1912 election the ward system was voted out and replaced by a city-wide ballot electing 10 councillors.

Close Vote In 1912

Belleville recorded one of the closest votes for a Canadian city election 60 years ago.

Debates Fading From Local Election Scene

Streamlining of regulations on nominations for local government candidates this year has abolished a traditional feature of elections in rural areas like Hastings County's townships.

The nomination night meeting — at which candidates and electors could be closely queried by the electorate — has been an electoral tradition in the townships.

Warden Carman Gibson, of Tyendinaga, — who also is Tyendinaga township reeve — is among those who personally regrets the passing of nomination nights as the end of an era in grass roots local government politics.

Until this year's reforms, nomination night saw intending candidates having to explain the reasons for their seeking office. At the same time, incumbent councils had to personally face and explain to the electorate.

Depending on the issues — and the crowds — rural township halls have seen many a lively session of participatory democracy — long before the phrase ever came in vogue.

Warden Gibson says on the whole such meetings gave "the people an opportunity" of direct involvement in local affairs.

But, new regulations which demand that an intending candidate secure 10 names on his nomination papers are an "exercise in futility." They prevent the serious candidates, from pretending they are seeking office in order to air "some little beef" nomination night, said the warden.

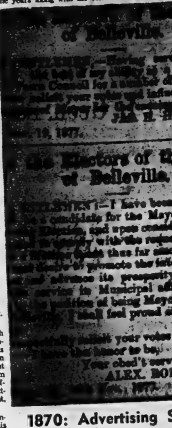
Tyendinaga township council solved the problem this year by calling a candidates meeting last night at the township hall in Melrose.

But Warden Gibson says, indications he has had show "very few" such meetings being advertised by other rural municipalities.

Clare Horner, Thurlow clerk treasurer, said provincial electoral officials earlier indicated nomination nights could be replaced by meetings called by ratepayers' associations.

But in many townships — including Thurlow — there are no such groups.

However, Thurlow council may decide to call a candidates' meeting.



Jack Bush, who says he won't seek re-election this year as Sidney township reeve, notes his municipality doesn't face the problem of less-urbanized areas.

The township has at least two ratepayers' associations — possibly three — which likely will call candidates' meetings a better method than leaving the responsibility to local councils, he believes.

Sidney was the first municipality formed in what now is Hastings and was a historic factor in founding local government in the area. Reeve Bush admitted he was "sorry" to see an end to nomination nights, which often were a highlight of the local government year.

But latterly, in smaller municipalities, he added, it often was difficult to attract public participation unless "there was a hot issue".

Board Approves Building Sketches

Sketch plans for three building programs were approved by Hastings county trustees last night.

Alterations and an addition at Queen Elizabeth public school in Trenton will total $588,000.

A new senior public school in Foxboro will cost $820,000. This will be an air conditioned school, with a decorative cement block exterior that will bring the cost down to government - set limits.

Phase one of Moira Secondary School's building program will cost $200,000, and it will be confined to alterations to the present building. Chief alteration will be the conversion of the drafting rooms to a computer study centre.

Phase two of the Moira program calls for the building of an addition to the school. Approval is expected from the government next year.

Young People Swim for Lives

Two young people swam for their lives last night when their car left the road and plummeted to the bottom of the Trent River, at the south boundary of Frankford.

Randolph Stewart, 16, RR 2 Consecon, driver of the car and his passenger, 18-year-old Rhonda Smith of 66 Front St., Trenton, managed to get from the "somehow" and made it to shore. Both were at home last night recovering.

When officers from the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police arrived at the scene late last evening the car was out of sight beneath the water. It will be hauled out today.

Wallbridge It Is

WALLBRIDGE (Staff) — Properly speaking, the Sidney township offices are not in Wallbridge and councillor Reg McCurdy says newspaper accounts of council proceedings are really inaccurate when they are dateline Wallbridge.

McCurdy said "in fact, Wallbridge is a couple of miles up the road."

"Wallbridge is growing," said reeve Jack Bush, who expressed the view that unless a better name could be found for the site of the township offices, the practice of continuing to use Wallbridge dateline should be retained.

Councillors mentioned that over the years the immediate area around the offices has been known alternately as Stone Community and Trotter's Corners. No decision was made by council on whether they would like one of these names to return to common usage or prefer to pick a new one.

For the time being, Wallbridge it is — right or wrong.

Permits Hit New High

TRENTON (Staff) — A record high of $837,702 in building permits issued in Trenton has been recorded for the month of October.

The largest single permit was for $500,000, cost of the new Canadian Tire store on Ontario Street, plus an additional permit for $35,000, cost of a gas bar on the same property.

A building permit, valued at $40,000 was issued for a car commercial development on Dundas Street West. The property can be developed for two or three small stores plus a muffler shop, restaurant, or gas bar.

In addition, 11 single family dwelling permits were issued, plus 17 for repairs and renovations to existing buildings.

Stirring Times

In that compelling television presentation, Sorrow and The Pity, about the Nazi occupation of France, there were glimpses of many famous personalities of the day — Premiers Mandes-France, Pierre Laval, executed for treason in 1946, Marshal Petain and Britain's foreign affairs minister, and subsequently premier, Sir Anthony Eden.

Sir Anthony — Lord Avon as he now is — was a prominent figure on the European political scene in the thirties (he succeeded Winston Churchill as Prime Minister in 1955) and by chance the other day we came upon a picture of him in the April 1, 1935 issue of The Ontario Intelligencer.

Anthony Eden, as he was in those days, was pictured with Mrs. Eden arriving at Croydon airport near London following a European visit. He had had talks in Paris and Berlin (where, it was stated, he "received Germany's arms demands") before flying on to Moscow for talks with Soviet statesmen.

Those were the days of brisk diplomatic activity as Germany rose to power and embarked on its collision course with a fatal destiny. Richard Nixon was then a youngster of 14.

In another news item on that front page nearly 40 years ago, Pope Pius told the 19 cardinals assembled at the Vatican that "war would be so enormous a crime, so foolish a manifestation of fury, we believe it absolutely impossible."

In a more realistic moment, the Pope seemed to sense the coming storm, for he went on to say that if someone should "commit this nefarious crime he could do nothing else but pray to God "to destroy those peoples who desire war."

The tide of history has since washed away many thousands of lives, by war, violence and pestilence as well as by natural causes. Power politics have ravaged our world and a host of new nations have come into being. But humanity survives and it is just possible we are on the threshold of a more secure world."It will be one threatened nevertheless by many intangibles, as well as by immediate challenges such as the need to conserve our natural resources while finding new sources of supply, and of course the threat of pollution. Peace though there may be, for a time at least, and more than this new world with undoubted interest are survivors of those earlier turbulent times, men like Lord Avon, now 75.

Exit Bonanza

As long time Western fans it may sound like heresy to admit to never having been a Bonanza buff.

But you can have too much of a good thing. They don't make them the way they used to you know — in Arizona and the canyons and the big sky — and we have lost count of the horse operas we did see over the years, with Randolph Scott and many another western hero riding off into the sunset. Remember, perhaps, the last great western movie ever made, when villain Jack Palance got his just desserts from Alan Ladd and right triumphed once again. And that other classic of a few years back, Bad Day at Black Rock. And of course Gary Cooper in High Noon and there was one starring Frank Sinatra but the title escapes us.

The most recent one of any note was McKenna's Gold with Gregory Peck and Omar Sharif and it was as rugged and exciting a Western as we have seen for years, crowded with the overdoses of humor and comic dialogue, and climaxing with some fantastic photography as the legendary cave hideout where the gold supposedly was hidden ruptured to spill kegs of rock to the canyon floor and Peck and Sharif fight it out on a rock overhang.

So as an old-time traditional Western fan we need old watch Bonanza, fearing that a steady diet would turn us off. The same with certain comedy programs. Paul Lynde is one of the funniest comedians around but we fear he is being overdone by having his own show, with stereotyped material and situations. Even Carol Burnett is slipping a bit this year, in our view.

Back then to Arizona and the three-dimensional landscapes in glorious technicolor — only it is not Arizona any more. The latter-day Western as likely as not is made in Spain, or Italy, even Israel where Gregory Peck for one is currently making a bone opera Jewish-style. Bonanza meanwhile ends its record run in January and we have no tears to shed.

Trudeau Gets the Massage

Post Mortems and Talk of A Leadership Change

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Still in a state of shock, even after two weeks, the uncertain Liberals can only pray that the morning-after hallferness of their election disappointment will dissipate the difficult days ahead.

Unlike the Conservatives who had four years to close ranks after their 1968 election disaster, the Liberals are under the unrelenting pressure of parliamentary time.

Even with four years in which to bind up their wounds, the Conservatives did not quite manage a complete recovery to full party health.

Not listen to former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker, still interpreting and interpreting of the way the Conservatives so recklessly dumped him for Robert Stanfield.

Says the Old Chief of the election: "The people urgently wanted to vote against the Trudeau government, but nobody stood up to tell them why."

It would have been "different" he says, and he can be taken at his word, if he had been in charge of the Conservative campaign.

But it is the deeply troubled Liberals do not have to concern with the recriminations of a shabbily discarded leader and some of his still unreconciled followers, they nevertheless have leadership problems.

And because, before the election, there were more Liberals than Conservatives in Parliament, they have more problems.

A lot of Liberal MPs lost their seats, and it has been the exceptionally defeated candidate who has not piled at least partial blame on the no - longer shrugging shoulders of Prime Minister Trudeau.

He has felt the chill breath of their criticism on his neck, and it must have been all the more frigid when he recalls how recent was their praise before the election's great awakening.

If there were any dissenters among the Liberal parliamentarians before the election, they had the good sense or perhaps lacked the courage to speak out.

So the Prime Minister had every reason to believe he had won the campaign with a solidly loyal following.

Now he knows different.

And bearing cries for a leadership convention has reminded Liberals that early next year's possible March or April should the government survive that long — they can cast a secret vote for or against continued it.

If they vote for a convention, the Prime Minister can be sure of going into it only with the support of his cabinet, the wilting Liberal MPs, the head quarters organization, and a solid phalanx of Quebec delegates.

Against him, if he has been listening to all the sour secondguessers, will be most of the defeated Liberal MPs and candidates, each with influence among delegates from Atlantic Canada, Ontario, and the Prairies and West Coast.

Listen to one of them, Ian Wahn, not only a 10-year-veteran Liberal MP from Toronto, but a parliamentary secretary, a Commons committee chairman and altogether one of the party's better parliamentarians:

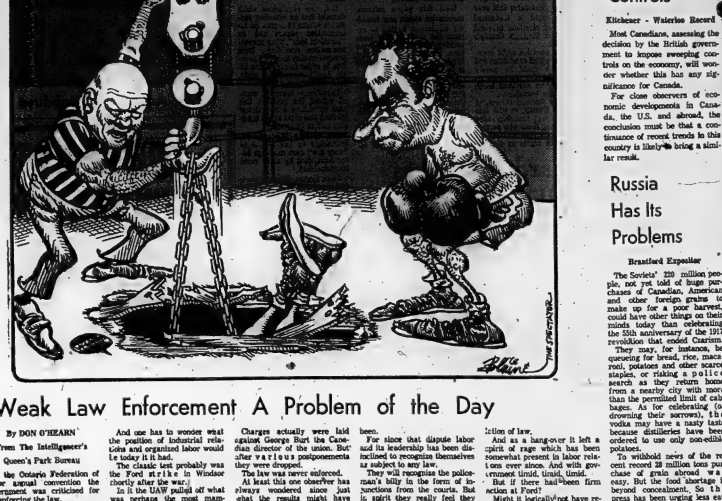
"The slogan, 'The land is strong' helped to beat us. It reinforced the feeling of many people that the government was complacent, even arrogant.

"We antagonized the taxpayers who thought we were taking money from them to pay out to loafers on unemployment insurance. We knew we were making a lot of people mad, but we did not seem to care."

And to John Roberts, another turfed out Toronto MP:

"All along with this talk of 'French Power' it looked like we were the Quebec party of French - speaking Canada, and the Conservatives the party of all the rest of the country, and nobody did anything about it."

And listen to Murray McBride, one of five Liberal losers in previously Liberally solid Eastern Ontario:



"It was the reaction to the language thing, and while we knew it was there and might beat us, who did anything about it?"

Labor Minister O'Connell, Minister of State Mahoney, Agriculture Minister Olson, all losers, and many of the defeated Liberals rank-and-file are complaining of what went wrong, how everybody knew what was happening and yet so little was done to counter it.

Who had the responsibility?

The buck stops, as P. Mays must, with the leader.

If the secret vote early next year is for a convention, Pierre Trudeau will face a tough field of contenders including John Turner, Don Jamieson, Donald Macdonald, who have been making impatiently in the wings, and Robert Andras, who has come on strong and has been building a following, whether he wants it or not, which believers he is qualified leadership material.

Weak Law Enforcement A Problem of the Day

By DON O'HEARN
From The Intelligencer's
Queen's Park Bureau

At the Ontario Federation of Labor annual convention the government was criticized for not enforcing the law.

Specifically it was claimed that it was not properly policing employment standards.

Then in another direction the convention called for the right to mass picketing.

Of one thing we can be sure, labor matters from a detached viewpoint for any length of time these two statements are ironic, particularly when taken in contrast to each other.

For such a person knows the government has never strongly enforced labor law against labor itself.

And one has to wonder what the position of industrial relations and organized labor would be today if it had.

The classic test probably was the Ford strike in Windsor (now after the war.)

In it the UAW pulled off what was perhaps the most mammoth mass picket seen in America.

It had the thousands of workers involved jam their cars into the city streets in a solid mass.

The result was that sections of downtown were tied up.

The province sent in the provincial police, but only to the borders of the city.

Then after two days Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell flew down, got the two parties together and ended the blockade itself.

Charges actually were laid against George Burt the Canadian director of the union. But after various postponements they were dropped.

The law was never enforced.

At least this one observer has always wondered since just what the results might have been if the law had been applied at Ford.

There is good reason to believe that the industrial relations climate might have been considerably better than it has been.

For since that dispute labor and its leadership has been disciplined to recognize themselves as subject to any law.

They will recognize the policeman's billy in the form of injunctions from the courts. But in spirit they really feel they should be under no law.

What if there had been strict action at Ford, perhaps mass arrests and convictions?

The union action at Ford, of course, was an outrageous violation of law.

And as a hang-over it left a spirit of rage which has been somewhat present in labor relations ever since. And with government timid, timid, timid.

But if there had been firm action at Ford?

Might it logically not have resulted in both sides in industrial relations fully recognizing there is a law and regulating in a cooler climate because of that law?

The annual church parade under the direction of the Army and Navy Veterans took place to the Church of St. Michael the Archangel. Parade with the Veterans were the Ladies' Auxiliary and the Belleville Municipal Band. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson, MC, welcomed the veterans not only because of personal ties of friendship but because they were the standard bearers of the ideals which animated Canada in the last war and inspire her sons in the present conflict.

The Belleville Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic at the Kinsmen Centre finishing seventh in a group of 19 Canadian centres for blood donations given in the month of October had 895 donations.

Conservative Trend Seen as Global

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

Is there a conservative tide running in the world which supports authoritarian right-wing rulers in Spain, Greece, Turkey, the Philippines and amid "c" conservative leaders like Pompidou in France, Heath in Britain Nixon in the U.S. and even Stanfield in Canada?

Conservatism as a political ideology differs widely from country to country. In the U.S., a conservative is a good deal more to the right than a conservative in Canada. In most of Europe's classically conservative Mediterranean societies—Portugal, Spain, Greece and Turkey—conservative values are more step-set, and truly reactionary.

In Britain, the U.S., France and Canada, millions who have gained a small materialistic foothold from postwar affluence, want to cling to it for dear life.

Any threats to it, old or new — reform being the old bugaboo — are seen as attacks on the status quo.

And when election time comes around again, the instigators of more so-called style "give-aways" which the hard working middle class does not share, are cast out of office, or rejected for leadership.

In Canada, if there is a small "c" conservative tide, the trend didn't quite go far enough to elect the charismatic leader Prime Minister Trudeau and replace him with conventional, Bob Stanfield, the man who says the "work ethic" is still a good thing.

But the tide is there, running strong, perhaps strong enough in Canada to topple Trudeau if he calls another election in the next few months. If so, Stanfield is the man, the image of small "c" conservatives, not quite on the draw like Trudeau. Men like him avoid, possibly even dislike, the new language of the technocrat and behavioralist, the brave new world of technology, communications and self-styled gurus, ready to lead the masses through the jungle of social and political change.

The small "c" conservative doesn't like the guru and is deeply suspicious of intellectual language about change.

There is enough institutional change going on now which "middle America" or "middle Canada" or the intensely conservative rural man of France, Greece or Spain, cannot understand and does not like.

Resentment against a prime minister rather than world trends is public and Mediterranean society's hang-ups against youngsters with long hair and flares wandering around the world have a more universal reciprocal base. This is a failure of the swivelling eye to comprehend that the old values have decayed substantially and that the so-called "new world" is impatient to change the system.

If so, Stanfield's growing popularity here and Nixon's record majority in the United States have to represent a negative response to complex events.

New York World reporter Nellie Bly set out to travel 24,899 years ago today—in 1889—in an attempt to better the world record established by Jules Verne's hero in Around the World in 80 Days. She turned the trick with time to spare—72 days, 6 hours and 11 minutes.

1943—Prince Charles was born to Princess Elizabeth —now Queen Elizabeth—and her husband Prince Philip.

1935—President Roosevelt of the United States declared the Philippines a free Commonwealth.

1919—Romanian forces evacuated Budapest, Hungary.

British Controls

Kitchener - Waterloo Record

Most Canadians, assessing the decision by the British government to impose sweeping controls on the economy, will wonder whether this has any significance for Canada.

For close observers of economic developments in Canada, the U.S. and abroad, the conclusion must be that a continuance of recent trends in this country is likely to bring a similar result.

Russia Has Its Problems

Brantford Expositor

The Soviets' 220 million people, not yet told of huge purchases of Canadian, American and other foreign grains to make up for a poor harvest, could have other things on their minds today than celebrating the 55th anniversary of the 1917 revolution that ended Czarism.

They may, for instance, be guessing at bread, flour, rice, macaroni, potatoes and other scarce staples, or making a police search as they return home from a nearby city with more than the permitted limit of cabbages. As for celebrating (or drowning their sorrows), the vodka may have a nasty taste because distilleries have been forced to use only non-edible potatoes.

To withhold news of the recent record 28 million tons purchase of grain abroad was not easy. But the food shortage is beyond concealment. So the press has been told to curtail using of bread and has reported the first arrests for bread hoarding. The offender, a woman, found with 500 pounds of bread, grains and flour in her home, has been sent to work on a construction project and the band has been expelled front the Communist Party. One newspaper has pointed out that an official of a radio factory in a region where the harvest was good had shipped 760 pounds of potatoes to his colleague in another plant 3,600 miles away, in the guise of radio components.

The millions of Soviet citizens including a large number of factory workers who raise their own pigs, cows, goats and poultry and often depend on storebought bread and grain to eke out the food they raise on small garden plots, may have to slaughter much of their livestock. This would not only make it more difficult for them to buy meat on the market temporarily, but to re-build the herds might require still more imports of feed grains in the future.

Official emphasis in today's celebrations is on the tremendous strides made in industry, education, housing, and literacy. But twice in the last nine years serious crop failures have flawed the otherwise impressive picture of progress. Even Communism can do nothing about the weather.

Lives Endangered

Passengers, Politicians And Police Assail FBI

NEW YORK (Reuter) — The FBI came under attack today for its abortive attempt during the weekend to end the weeklong reign of a commandeered airliner caught up in one of the most bizarre skyjackings.

The criticism came from passengers who suffered through the 26-hour hijack, from politicians, and from the police chief of Orlando, Fla., where 20 FBI marksmen opened fire on the jet's eight tires in a bid to make a takeoff impossible.

The attempt failed. Hijacker panicked only two outside tires, and passengers said the gunfire aboard led to a meltdown aboard Southern Airways Flight 49, carrying 25 persons.

The DC-9, seized Friday over Alabama by two alleged rapists and escaped convict, came to a final stop in Havana shortly after the FBI's failure to stop it from leaving Orlando. It flew nearly 4,000 miles, landing in eight cities including Toronto.

The three black hijackers were arrested as soon as they left the plane in Havana Sunday morning with a ransom unofficially estimated at $2 million. They had demanded $10 million.

The head of the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration said Cuban Premier Fidel Castro, late over the whole affair, told the pilot of the plane, Captain Bill Flaum, that he would see to it the hijackers spent the rest of their lives behind bars.

Florida Republican Senator Edward Gurney called the FBI action at Orlando airport "stupid" and Representative J. Herbert Burke, Florida Republican, said it appeared that the FBI had thrown up a cloak of secrecy over the affair to "hide some stupid blunders."

Orlando Police Chief Robert Chewning said he was not told by the FBI that they intended to shoot at the plane. The FBI had requested some special uniforms from his department, but they had opened fire on the plane before the weapons arrived.

Passengers said that while the deranged aircraft flew over a heavily-populated section of Orlando, the hijackers pulled the plane's co-pilot, Billy Harloyd Johnson, in to the cabin.

One hijacker then shot at him in order to "teach the FBI a lesson." He was hit once in the shoulder, although four shots were fired at him.

Another passenger, Alex Halberstadt, 47, added: "The FBI action turned a bad trip into an emergency. Before we landed at Orlando, we were just on a hijacked airliner. After the FBI effort, we were on a crippled hijacked airliner, with three gunmen going mad."

When the passengers returned to Miami at the end of their ordeal, Halberstadt said: "A brainwashing operation went into effect."

Ugandans Ask Student Grants

TORONTO (CP) — Ugandan Asian students who have been offered places in Ontario universities have sent telegrams to Prime Minister Trudeau and Premier William Davis asking for grants to be made eligible for student grants.

Spokesman Dayalji Zala said Monday that 15 students in Toronto could continue their studies from where they left off before their expulsion from Uganda.

But, as landed immigrants, they are not eligible for grants under the Ontario student awards program until they have been residents of the province for a year.

Mr. Zala said the students are asking that the residence requirement be waived as was done in 1968 for Czechoslovakian immigrants.

Half Candidates Forfeit Deposits

OTTAWA (CP) — By the workings of electoral law, more than half the candidates in the Oct. 30 federal election have in effect been disqualified. Their $200 nomination deposits have been forfeited.

That includes a candidate supported by almost 17,000 voters and 113 members of the two biggest parties.

In all, 591 of the record 1,117 candidates lost the $200 deposit that each would-be MP must hand over upon nomination as a sign of seriousness.

The deposit, cash or certified cheque, is returned to winners and to a loser who polls at least half as many votes as the winner in a constituency. Otherwise, it goes to "Her Majesty for the public uses of Canada" (the federal treasury).

The failure of 591 hopefuls to get at least half as many votes as those who beat them means the federal treasury is richer by $118,200—a small consolation towards the estimated $16 million cost of running the election.

The 284 winners, and 283 runners-up who polled enough votes, get their $200 back—$195,200 in all.

But New Democrat David Warner, for example, loses his $200 even though he collected almost 17,000 votes—enough to win in more than half the constituencies of Canada, but ticked only for third place in the huge Toronto-area riding of York Scarborough. Winner Robert Stanbury, communications minister, polled more than 39,000 votes there.

Other tallies turned up in a study of results:

—Seven out of 10 New Democrats lost their deposits—175 of the party's 251 candidates. The $35,000 forfeited included the deposits of all NDP candidates in Alberta, Quebec, New Brunswick, Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island.

—Social Credit, trying to establish itself nationally with candidates in every province, was out of the serious running everywhere but in 33 Quebec ridings. In all, 133 of 166 Social Credit candidates lost their deposits, retaining them only in the 15 ridings won and in 18 other Quebec seats.

— Eighty - four Progressive Conservatives lost their deposits—three in 10 of the 284 candidates. Sixty-five of the party's 94 candidates in Quebec lost their money, 11 of the 88 in Ontario.

—Liberals suffered the smallest losses—67 of 265 candidates lost deposits, 18 of them in the three Prairie provinces.

Mail Is Screened For Letter-bombs

LONDON (CP) — Scotland Yard believes a second wave of letter bombs may be on the way to Britain in the wake of nearly 80 which arrived from India during the weekend, police sources said today.

Precautions also were being taken in Montreal and Toronto, with overseas mail being screened for possible bombs although none had been found in Canada in the latest mailings.

Several weeks ago letter bombs were discovered in Montreal and Ottawa.

Fearing a renewed wave of postal attacks during the Christmas mail rush when estimated billion pieces of mail will be handled, Scotland Yard issued a list of danger signals for people who handle overseas mail.

Police Commissioner Robert Mark warned that the bombs could be sent in the guise of seasonal gifts.

He said they most likely would be in packages the size of a book, calendar or in thick letters.

Six more bombs were found in London Monday, bringing the total to around 80. Most were addressed to Jewish businesses and organizations. They caused only one casualty.

Now Scotland Yard believes the mailbomb terrorists will switch to another mailing point. This fear has put the British post office on its biggest security alert since the war, and may cause delays in delivering Christmas mail.

Robert Carr, the interior minister, gave an assurance in the House of Commons that any evidence that London-based foreign diplomats had aided the letter bomb attacks would be "treated and acted upon with very great seriousness."

The foreign office issued a statement saying there was no foundation to press reports that Arab embassies in London were implicated in the attacks.

Weapons of Terror Popular Ulster Toys

BELFAST (Reuter) — Despite warnings from the British Army, many Belfast shops are stocking up on realistic toy weapons for the Christmas buying rush.

Guerrilla gunmen are getting younger and younger, many of them in their early teens. With the coming of winter and earlier darkness, children playing in the streets with toy weapons could easily be taken for gunmen by nervous soldiers.

One mother in the Andersonstown stronghold of the illegal Irish Republican Army says that her young sons and a daughter all want guns to play their game of "Soldiers and IRA," and another game called "Secret Murders," named after the grisly assassinations in the Northern Ireland capital.

Martin is seven years old and he also comes from Andersonstown.

"I want a great big gun for Christmas so I can shoot all the soldiers," he says.

In the Protestant Sandy Row area, 10-year-old Jimmy says he wants a Colt .45. "And I want a combat jacket like my brother and a bayonet and a football."

Some parents argue that children have long acted out their aggression in bloodthirsty games like "Cowboys and Indians" and "Cops and Robbers," and these do the youngsters no harm.

But Dr. Morris Fraser of the child guidance clinic at Belfast's Royal Victoria Hospital disagrees.

The difference is that instead of killing imaginary Indians, young children now are throwing stones and shooting toy guns at real people—the soldiers," he says. "Fantasy has merged with reality and the cultural bogeyman is there in the flesh to be attacked."

Postal Code Booklets Found in Error

TORONTO (CP) — A six-character postal code, the first step in a Canada-wide drive to mechanize mail sorting was unveiled for Toronto Monday by Post Office department officials who were a bit red-faced.

The embarrassment came when it was discovered that a 192-page directory incorrectly listed some of the codes and mislocated a few post offices.

Part of Toronto's new code goes into effect today and Gordon Cunningham, director of postal services for the central Ontario region admitted there were a few problems to iron out.

"Things are all being done in such a tremendous hurry that the copy from the printers was not checked," he said.

Automatic sorting equipment costing $70 million will be installed in 15 Canadian cities by 1974.

Reading Problem Found

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: My daughter of seven is having trouble with her reading. She can read the same story over two or three times and still cannot tell you what it was about. She simply is not interested or not patient enough to finish the work she is supposed to learn.

I hate nagging her to get her work done so she can play even if it did any good. At times I have her take a few "duties" break in between work periods, but this makes no difference either. Stumped.

Dear Stumped: If she is bright in other ways, she may have a reading disability which has not been identified.

Some children learn to read more slowly than others, and you may be able to give her confidence by asking her to do little chores which require her to read — like bringing a certain kind of package from the cupboard or checking the weather forecast on the front page of your paper.

All efforts should be pleasant and friendly; and so short that there is no time to get bored. I am sending you my 20-cent leaflet on "Children With Learning Disabilities"; and would suggest you and her teacher talk the situation over regularly, until you see her making progress.

Dear Doris: If some of our readers are looking for a good Christmas gift for people who love animals, we have a new one.

It is a short book, primarily for the use of teachers in primary grades, and is called "Meeting Animal Friends". It is by Charlotte Baker, well known author who has 31 successful books for children including "The Book of Friends" — an animal classic.

"Meeting Animal Friends" is $1.00 postpaid. Readers may order it by writing to me, — Alda Flemming, 252 Wallace Row, Fredericton, N.B.

Dear Alda: I'm very glad to hear about your book. If the new one is anything like as good as "The Best of Friends", I know that every reader will be enthusiastic about it. I hope you will get lots of orders, since the proceeds will go toward the development of your wonderful organization, "The Kindness Clubs".

Dear Doris: Concerning your correspondent who married a loveable optimist and started farming:

I, too, started farming 12 years ago full of optimism, short of cash, and even shorter of experience. I got in touch with the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food, and I stayed in touch with them. There I unfailingly got the best possible guidance. I am always treated with courtesy and consideration.

Often a man will drive right out to my farm and check the problem right on the spot, or they will ask their county weed control officer, drainage engineer, soil and crop specialist, dairy man, livestock officer, or whoever is the expert in the department concerned; to call. These people are invariably helpful, and I both enjoy their visits and benefit from them.

It is my considered opinion that almost any farmer would benefit from working closely with his local Ag. Rep. In a case like the one concerned, it is absolutely imperative that he should. — Happy in Hastings.

Dear Happy: What a nice boost for our agricultural departmental! I made an inquiry after I got your letter and it is my understanding that help of a similar nature can be had in provinces other than Ontario.

This could mean the difference between success and failure, and save the long-suffering couple who wrote in many a heartache. I have passed your message along.

(Anonymous letters are bad manners and may be ignored. When writing in care of the newspaper, give Doris your right name and address. It will be kept confidential.)

Bad Dinners Common in Canada

TORONTO (CP) —Dinner-table dullness has been epidemic in Canada for two years, says Sondra Gotlieb. She says Canadians really believe they should eat what's in front of them without comment or complaint.

"Canadians traditionally treat food like sex. They don't talk about it.

"There's no reason why we have to live off frozen fish fillets and California fruit.

"The great weakness of Canada is that we'll settle for mediocrity."

Mrs. Gotlieb is author of The Gourmet's Canada, a gastronomic tour of the country. In it she describes with enthusiasm the foods of every region and various backgrounds. She has included a scattering of receipts and lists of shops and low-priced restaurants and wines she approves.

A native of Winnipeg, she lives in Ottawa. She said in an interview she and her husband both come from families of fussy eaters.

Canadians were in danger of losing their food heritage out of apathy and bad merchandising.

"We're losing our taste buds in Canada, and we don't have to, we've got fantastic food resources. We have everything here from caviar on downwards.

"We have to push ourselves. We have to grow it and distribute it better. We depend too much on California.

"For instance, supermarkets have contracts with California distributors, and a farmer who lives 10 miles from a store to a supermarket can't sell his stuff.

"The problem with berries, throughout Canada, is the picking. People don't want to pick them any more. People who own apple and berry farms aren't millionaires. They can't pay $2.50 an hour."

Because of these two factors, she said, Canadian strawberries and raspberries are rarely even except in roadside stands and farmers' markets or on pick-your-own farms. Canadians ate a curtailed variety of imported berries that have less taste.

She maintained mixed market demands cut down the variety and flavor of native apples available in Canada.

"We grow apples for appearance and shelf life and taste.

"In Banff, people want to eat the wonderful local trout. They don't know it comes from Japan, because of our game laws.

"We don't do enough restocking. If it's properly controlled, restocking isn't nerve gemo. There isn't going to be a mass demand."

She said much Winnipeg goldeye comes from Minnesota.

"But they don't restock fish. It's not too late. Look at the salmon on the West Coast. It had almost disappeared."

"That's what I mean. If you're totally uninterested in what you eat, you won't do anything. If you're interested in what you eat, you'll want to be able to eat it 20 years from now.

"It's a question of horse sense and of good instincts."

Mrs. Gotlieb said Canadians don't have to eat greasy food anywhere in the country.

"There's nowhere I've been in Canada where you can't get something good to eat if you look out for it. There may not be a good restaurant, but there'll be a good lunch counter.

"I just ask people, 'I'll ask a taxi driver, an RCMP.' They'll tell you. Mery Lou's a great cook, and this is where she eats."

"It's participatory gastronomy."

"Anything is good as long as it's fresh and well cooked. It's the highly processed, pre-digested foods we have to avoid."

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOHN CONWELL

Why fail to follow doctor's orders?

PROTEST seems to be the main motivation of patients who refuse to do what the doctor says. Many patients feel "put upon," when they come to a doctor, especially if others they know seem to live a "charmed life." To compensate for the "injustice" he feels, a patient tries to make everyone else take the responsibility of seeing that he doesn't get away with refusing to follow doctor's orders.

Does a child enjoy being contrary?

NOT really, although it might be hard to convince some parents that their child does not enjoy it. Perhaps it is the reaction he knows he will get from his parents that gives a child a sense of satisfaction from his contrary behavior. If the youngster believes his mother and father are not making enough effort to understand him, he might think he is paying them back for their neglect by doing exactly the opposite of what they tell him to do.

Can a 'helpless' husband be happy?

YES, and a wife can be happy, though both she and her husband know he is a "dependent man" in a situation that requires skill or decisive action on his part. Perhaps he believes he doesn't have to perceive the problems he and his wife may face. Of course, this means that their marriage happens to be that lucky accident in which a wife is happy to be a "take charge" person and her husband is happy to turn over this role to her.

Ann Landers

Columbus Wore Bloomers

Dear Ann Landers: A nice young man was arrested recently because he was sitting in the park, minding his own business. It so happens he was wearing women's clothing and somebody started a fight with him and he flattened the guy.

As a fashion historian I can tell you that everything women wear today was once worn by males. Even corsets. During the crusades when men donned suits of armor they had to wear heavy undergarments to protect their bodies against the chafing of the metal. Knee-length drawers and long stockings, George Washington wore knee breeches and carried his silk handkerchief in his sleeve. He also wore a ribbon in his hair. Men's high heels are not new. They go back to the French revolution.

Even in the bird kingdom the male's plumage is fancier than the female's. The peacock is the best example, please, Ann, tell your readers that before they classify a person as peculiar they should stop and think that maybe he's ahead of his time.—A Vote For Fancy Dan.

Dear Fancy: OK so that guy sitting on the park bench wearing women's clothes is ahead of his time. Until now I was under the impression that he was a little peculiar. Thanks for setting me straight—if you'll pardon the expression.

Dear Ann Landers: Today when I returned from school I picked up another if I had any mail. She replied, "Yes, there is a letter. There is it." Then she handed me an envelope which had been opened. I said, "It looks as if you've read it." Her answer was, "I didn't think you'd mind. I couldn't imagine anything in it that you wouldn't want me to know about."

I got ticked off and told her she had no business reading my correspondence and if I had to receive my mail at a friend's house to get privacy I'd do it. She yelled for half an hour, said it would be an insult to her, and grounded me for three days.

I've learned a lot from your column and I would appreciate attention to what you say, too. Is Mom right, or am I?—Mouthy.

Dear Mouthy: Any person who is old enough to read doesn't need Momma to open her mail. You have every right to ask your mother to keep her pea-pickin' paws off your letters. If you wish to share a sentence or two, or the entire letter or none of it, it's up to you. But you are under no obligation to do so.

Dear Ann Landers: I had to say something about the letter signed "Her Husband." His wife was a nymphomaniac, but sweet and generous and everyone loved her.

Well, I'm no nymphomaniac, but after 15 years of marriage to Mr. Wrong, I met Mr. Right. Our affair lasted two years and then my husband found out. My lover and I were in no position to get married so we stopped seeing each other.

The whole time our affair was going on I was aweet and generous—and everybody loved me. I was even able to be nice to my mother-in-law. I had a tremendous amount of energy, could clean up the house in two hours, cook, bake and ring 'all the while.

When I was deprived of my lover I became mean and bitter. Now my housework never gets done and I hate cooking. I'm living for the day when we get back together for good. There's no substitute for a satisfying sex life.—Mean Myrtle

Dear Myrtle: I agree. How about trying to work it out with your husband? It must have been good early in your marriage. At what point did things turn sour? Your solution might be closer than you think.

Modesty Supports Freedom Remembrance Speaker Says

PICTON (Staff) — Canadians can preserve their freedom by guarding against "an overwhelming consciousness of national greatness."

Rev. Nathan Bowering of Bloomfield United Church stressed the need to remember the cost of freedom at a Remembrance Day service at the cenotaph in Picton Saturday morning.

He explained Rudyard Kipling focussed his thoughts on this theme in his hymn which was underlined in each stanza by the words, "lest we forget."

Rev. Bowering said David, hiding in a cave while hard-pressed in the battlefield, recalled his boyhood days in Bethlehem and grew homesick.

He cried out, "Oh, that one would give me a drink of water from the well of Bethlehem which is by the gate."

Several of his soldiers overheard him and at the risk of their lives slipped through the battle lines to bring a cup of water back to David.

He was so impressed with their valor that he refused to drink the water, pouring it on the ground instead as a sacrifice to God.

Rev. Bowering said David felt the water was too sacred for use for personal desire and had consecrated it in the tradition of the ancient East.

He noted the story reminds modern man of the gratitude in the hearts of thoughtful people everywhere today for those who died for freedom and the "precious things" it brings.

Rev. Bowering also referred to a letter written "somewhere in France" in 1916 by a young soldier on the eve of battle.

He expressed no concern for his life except to regret that his death might sadden his family.

The soldier declared he would strike a blow for freedom's cause and said life counted "as nothing" when freedom was at stake.

Rev. Bowering said when thoughtful men think of freedom they consider that it represents the blood of men who went in jeopardy of their lives.

The memorial service followed a veterans' parade from the Legion Hall to the cenotaph.

Marching at the head was the Napanee Scottish Pipe Band. Also marching was the Picton Odd Fellows band and members of the BPOE.

The Last Post was sounded by bugler Creighton Lockyer of Picton as the colors were lowered during a two-minute silence. As he played Reveille the flags were raised again by members of the color party.

Memorial wreaths were placed by the province of Ontario, the county of Prince Edward, the town of Picton, the Hastings and Prince Edward regiment, branch 78 of the Canadian Legion and many other organizations and individuals.

Rev. Robert Black of the First Baptist Church assisted with the remembrance service.

At its close, veterans and municipal officials marched to the Legion Hall, passing a reviewing stand at Shire Hall. A banquet followed at the Legion on Saturday evening.

Limits Required To Continue Life Conference Told

If the closed, space - ship Earth is to continue to provide enough oxygen, water and soil to support its people, its inhabitants must accept limitations on growth.

The vital "life support system" will continue to function only if people accept such restrictions as fewer cars, snowmobiles and motor boats and greater unemployment.

The harsh facts came in the closing moments of Quinte 1984, a 1½ day discussion of the future, sponsored by United Community Services of Belleville and Loyalist College.

If society spirals on in its present productivity cycle it will destroy itself, said Dr. John Coleman, ecologist with the fisheries research station at Glenora.

"The degradation of the environment must cease," he said, as he attacked the work ethic. "Society has taught us work is a good thing simply because we don't like to work. The machine is a process everything we need and in the future we can be busy with the enriching things of life."

Alderman Jean Smith of Belleville provided the figures.

Modern technology has not kept pace with our waste disposal needs, she said.

Now, the city copes with 60 gallons of liquid sewage a person a day. There's no way, she indicated, that present disposal methods can completely process more than 40 gallons a person, a day.

If our waters are to remain pure, individuals and industry must learn how to use less water, and how to produce less waste.

Because the modern miracle, technology, cannot keep abreast of needs, people must accept restrictions in the future.

In 1920 Canadians produced two pounds of solid garbage a person each day. Today, they produce four pounds. There are insufficient garbage disposal sites to cope with the increase, said Ald. Smith.

Unless the public has the desire for pollution abatement, compulsory legislation will come," she said.

In the future, Ald. Smith sees standardization of glass containers, compulsory restrictions of water to 40 gallons a person each day, biodegradable packaging, recycling plants and compulsory car pools.

Multi-year Plates On Sale Dec. 1

The first issue of multi-year plates will go on sale at 285 licence issuing offices throughout Ontario on Friday, Dec. 1, Transportation and Communications Minister Gordon Carton has announced. Expiry date for current licence plates is February 28, 1973.

The new style plates are expected to last five years and will have three letters and three numerals in blue on a white background with the name "Ontario" above and the slogan "Keep It Beautiful" below.

Registration fees will continue to be based on a year by basis, with the annual cost for an 8-cylinder vehicle being $40; a 6-cylinder vehicle $32; and $23 for a 4-cylinder car.

The format of the passenger motor vehicle permit has been modified to accommodate a replica of the vinyl validation sticker which will be affixed to the lower right-hand corner of the licence plate to subsequent years.

Multi-year plates are the result of extensive testing and evaluation of various paints and metal combinations that culminated in the production of a material which is 25 per cent stronger and colored with improved longer lasting enamels.

Labor Link Forged

Closer labor ties should be one aftermath of the twinning of Belleville and Lahr.

Communication has already begun between the Quinte District Labor Council, voice of area workers, and labor officials in the German city.

In reply to a letter from Lahr, QDLC president Reg Loader last week sent letters of introduction to Lahr's Lord Mayor Dr. Philipp Brucker and to the city's labor council or trades union. Mr. Loader wasn't sure which body to confer with since he is waiting to hear about the structure of German labor representation.

"We're trying to open up connections," said Mr. Loader. "We'd like to get to know each others' problems so maybe we can help each other out."

Lahr is a rapidly expanding industrial centre. FIAT, largest auto manufacturer outside the United States is opening a plant there shortly and there are firms building electronic components, drafting equipment and leather goods, among others.

Mr. Loader does not expect to meet any of the German delegates now in Belleville but will continue to communicate with their colleagues at home.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1972

Two for Mayor, 18 for Council

Contests for all city municipal offices with the exception of separate school board offices were reduced today as the result of a flurry of last-minute nominations at city hall Monday.

It will be a two-way fight for the office of mayor and for seven incumbent Dr. J. Russell Scott and Alderman Rita Jeffery.

But the aldermanic race is a wide open pair with 18 hopefuls including six incumbents, running for the 10 seats.

There will be no by-law seats on the city public utilities commission as also indicated with a last minute nomination seeking a third man enter the race against incumbents Lyle Langabeer and Gerry O'Connor. Late in the afternoon Belleville realtor Roger Corbett filed nomination papers making it a three-way race.

There will also be an election for public school board as the result of the last minute nomination of W. Michael Roberts, teacher at the Quinte Technical School on the Deal.

Until Mr. Roberts filed nomination papers, an acclamation for the five Belleville seats on the county public school board had been indicated.

But Mr. Gunning said last night that he is still undecided and he has until tonight to withdraw his name from the running.

In Thurlow, incumbent Milford Waller is opposed by newcomer James Hurd.

Thrush had earlier filed nomination papers.

Last-minute Candidate Opposes Trenton Mayor

TRENTON — Rumors of a late - minute contestant for the seat of mayor in Trenton's Dec. 4 municipal election, proved true last night, when 46 - year - old federal civil servant Reginald Joseph Martin filed nomination papers, three minutes before the 5 p.m. deadline.

Mr. Martin himself is "a political virgin." Mr. Martin said he "delayed submitting my nomination papers until the last possible moment in the hopes that a more suitable and better qualified candidate would present himself."

Skipper of the Environment, Canada survey vessel (formerly the Trenton), Mr. Martin is employed by Energy and Resources) based in Burlington in the summer months. Mr. Martin says, if elected mayor, he will resign his job in order to devote full attention to his elected post.

"I know I will be considered the darkest of dark horses in this election race, but I believe that an acclamation at this time would not serve the best interests of all the citizens of Trenton," he said, after filing papers with town clerk D. W. Larry.

In opposing Mayor Duncan McDonald, Mr. Martin said "these citizens of Trenton who feel that they cannot support the incumbent mayor should not be deprived of their right to vote."

Mr. Martin believes the fact that he has never before been involved in politics, may serve him well in the forthcoming election. He said having attended numerous meetings "the chance I got," for the last six or seven years, he has many "progressive ideas" to offer. His campaign platform will be made public at a later date, he told newsmen.

Trenton's CFB Trenton in 1970, the Trenton native lives with his wife Blandine at 43 John Street.

Mayor McDonald, who has said he would welcome opposition to give voters a choice on the way they vote in the last municipal election), said of Mr. Martin's opposition, "a candidate like that can't be taken lightly."

At the official close of nominations, 15 Trenton residents have qualified to seek a council seat. Seven have announced their intentions during the last few days.

Hilton, retired, and former reeve James MacDonald, merchant, have been joined by a third, Robert Carleton, manager of Bell Canada's Trenton and District region and a director of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce.

Wilman Sidney Reeve

WALLBRIDGE (Staff) — Gordon Wilman of RR 5 Belleville, who has served as deputy reeve of Sidney township for the past four years, was acclaimed reeve last night, replacing Jack Bush, a 14 year veteran of municipal government.

Wilman, the only man to file nomination papers before Monday's deadline, says one of his major goals will be to implement a thorough review of the township road building program.

A two - way fight is shaping up here for the post of deputy reeve between candidates, F. Glenn Meyers of RR 3 Belleville and Arthur Carleton of RR 2 Frankford.

Meyers has served on council for the past four years, having previous experience on the Sidney school board before it became part of the county system.

The other candidate, Arthur Carleton, served a term of four years on council up to 1968. In that year, he ran against Gordon Wilman for deputy reeve and lost.

Contesting the four remaining seats on Sidney council are six incumbent councillors, Reg McCurdy of RR 5 Belleville and Hadley Richardson of RR 3 Frankford.

Others who have filed papers to seek council posts are Paul Aziz of RR 2 Trenton, Thomas Nobles of RR 3 Belleville, Michael Bathurst of RR 5 Belleville, Graham Grandy of RR 1 Frankford and Ernest Kells of RR 5 Belleville.

Councillors Hadley McCurdy, Glenn Meyers, township clerk Hugh Lyons and councillor Hadley Richardson joined Bush and Wilman Monday in examining plans for new subdivisions.

Sidney OKs Aerial Map

WALLBRIDGE (Staff) — An aerial photography and mapping program approved by Sidney township council Monday will be the first step in plans for the servicing of Batawa and Glen Miller.

Although the need for sewer and water services in Batawa is more immediate than for Glen Miller, council decided both communities should be covered in photography and mapping contract that will cost $7,076.

The ministry of transportation and communications advised the township to go ahead with the project, indicating it is necessary for the planning of services in the provincial government will pay half the total cost of the aerial survey.

There was some uncertainty in council as to whether Glen Miller should be left out of the program at this time. as the development of a serviced area there is not yet in the planning stage.

Council supported inclusion of Glen Miller on advice of reeve Jack Bush, who predicted "we will be able to use the Glen Miller survey within two years."

Newcomers Square off With Veterans in Prince Edward

By MARGARET HAYLOCK

PICTON — Municipal elections this year will be hotly contested as many newcomers have challenged veteran councillors for office.

In Hillier township, Donald L. Sutton, a township councillor, has challenged Lewis Wight, reeve for township leadership.

The only nomination for deputy reeve was filed by Arthur Pettingill.

Three township residents have filed nomination papers for seats on council. They are Gordon Foster, Frank Westerhof and McCrae Danford.

In Sophiasburgh township incumbent reeve George Foster is seeking re-election and deputy reeve Roy Brooks has filed papers to oppose him.

Three men have filed papers for the post of deputy reeve, Dr. Sranger, Lorne Jenkins and Max MacDonald.

The four nominees for council are Sandra Reeve, John Sprague, Leland Dossee and Wayne Lessaway.

John Huskinson, incumbent member of the Prince Edward County Board of Education, has filed the only nomination papers for school trustee.

An election contest is shaping in Wellington village for where nomination papers for reeve have been filed by incumbent reeve Robert Boyce.

Seven men have filed for council, among them Wilfred Greer, Wm Sainsbury, Keith Barnett, Joe Karas, Rodney Lower, Bordon Greatrix and H. G. Hiles.

Ben Corke, merchant; Roger G. Porter, broker, John S. Scott, physician; Jack Ireland, merchant; Stuart "Stu" Meeks, ambulance driver and Arnold Orr, retired educationist and Alex Manjuris, DPC employee.

Sand Price Increases

TRENTON (Staff) — Sand for Trenton's streets will cost 2¢ per bucket 20 cents a cubic yard, following acceptance of a tender awarded last night by council.

Last year, sand was purchased at $2.08 a cubic yard. The price accepted this year is $3.20 for a total cost of $3420.

Councillor Peter Aziz requested public works employees pay particular attention to slippery conditions on Farley's Hill on Dundas Street, West between Division and Queen Streets, and Gilmour Hill, on Dundas East.

"This section is especially slippery in winter," he told council.

Unbeaten Against Ottawa

Hamilton Holding Edge

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

This coming weekend is when things begin to shape up for the Grey Cup epcounter Dec. 3 in Hamilton and it's time to look at the record.

Hamilton Tiger-Cats go against Ottawa Rough Riders in the capital on Saturday in the first of a two-game, total-point series to decide the Eastern representative.

On Sunday, so far as the West is concerned, it's all over, with their Grey Cup contender emerging from sudden-death action between Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Saskatchewan Roughriders in Winnipeg.

Here's how the teams compare:

Hamilton-Ottawa—The Tiger-Cats have won all three games with the Riders this season, but not by much—26-20, 30-22, 19-16. Hamilton has scored 372 points this year, an average of 23.3 per game, with Ottawa's record 306 points rrd 21.3. Hamilton has allowed 16.7 points a game, but Ottawa has given away only 15.3.

Over the year, Hamilton's total yards rushing has been greater than that of Ottawa—2,-132 to 1,794 and, while the margin is closer in passing yardage, the advantage still is that of the Tiger-Cats—2,952 to 2,718.

The EFC plays only 14 games compared with the 16 regular-season battles engaged in by WFC teams. Yet it was Gerry Organ of Ottawa, with 131 points, who led all the Canadian Football League scorers on one touchdown, 28 converts, 29 field goals and 10 singles.

But who's that right behind him in the EFC standings? It's Ian Sutter of Hamilton didn't have any touchdowns, but he hammered through 44 converts, 19 field goals and seven singles for 93 points.

Winnipeg-Saskatchewan—It was Winnipeg over the Roughriders 2-1 but, again, not by much. Saskatchewan took Winnipeg by 31 points when they won 32-21. But in the other two games, Winnipeg squelched 16-15 and 28-25 for a total margin of five points. Interestingly 401 total points scored is the highest in the country, 71 points better than Saskatchewan's regular-season mark. But the Riders allowed only 393 points—topping Winnipeg's 300.

Winnipeg rushed for 2,505 yards and passed for 2,322; for Saskatchewan the totals are 2,-228 and 2,514. The Bombers will have Don Jones and Mack Herron going—Jones with one touchdown, 45 converts, 14 field goals and four singles for 97 points, and Herron with 16 touchdowns for 96 points.

For Saskatchewan, there will be George Reed with 13 touchdowns for 78 points and Jack Abendschan with 36 converts, 10 field goals and six singles for 74.

Herron has 11 touchdowns by rushing—all Reed's-touchdowns came that way.

Berger Assessing Etcheverry's Role

MONTREAL (CP) — Sam Berger, owner of Montreal Alouettes, has started to evaluate the performance of his Canadian Football League club over the past season with an eye to rebuilding for next year.

The Als won only four of their 14 regular-season games this year. They were eliminated from the Eastern Football Conference playoffs in Ottawa Saturday when they dropped a 14-11 decision to the Rough Riders.

The Riders now meet Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the EFC final.

Berger said Monday his evaluation is under way, but he did not know when any changes will be forthcoming.

He also said he is assessing the job done by Sam Etcheverry, coach the last three years.

There has been speculation that Etcheverry will be let go.

The Alouettes won the Grey Cup in 1970 in Etcheverry's first year as coach.

SAM ETCHEVERRY

Prior to the start of the 1972 season, Berger moved the club from the 33,000-seat Autostade at the site of Expo 67 to mid-town Molson Stadium in the hope of jacking up flagging attendance.

But the move to the 26,000-seat facility at McGill University failed to pay off. The Als played most of their home games before 11,000 fans.

The team appeared wracked by dissension.

Patriots Try Packer Style

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Phil Bengtson, who helped build Green Bay Packers into a National Football League dynasty in the 1960s, was named interim head coach of New England Patriots Monday night.

The Patriots are last in the NFL's American Conference with a 2-7 record. The team suffered its worst defeat Sunday, a 37-0 drubbing at the hands of Miami Dolphins.

Browns Not Groaning Today

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Cleveland Browns receiver Paul Warfield to Miami Dolphins for a draft choice three years ago was greeted by cheers in Miami—and groans in Cleveland.

Both reactions grew louder last year when Warfield helped the Dolphins into the Super Bowl and Cleveland's draft choice, quarterback Mike Phipps, didn't play often or well.

But Brown coach Nick Skorich isn't groaning today.

"I think it was one of the greatest trades the Browns have ever made," he said Monday night after Phipp's 38-yard touchdown pass to Frank Pitts with 41 seconds to play gave the Browns a 21-17 victory over San Diego Chargers. It kept the Browns' National Football League playoff hopes alive.

The victory, before 54,292, was the Browns' fourth straight and gave them a 6-3 record, one game behind Pittsburgh Steelers in the American Conference Central Division. They meet the Steelers twice in the next four weeks.

The Chargers, 3-8-1, dropped their fifth straight game after taking the lead with 1:21 to play on Mike Garrett's three-yard run.

Montreal Site Impresses Avery

MONTREAL (CP) — Avery Brundage, 85, past-president of the International Olympic Committee, spent Monday touring proposed sites and venues for the 1976 Summer Games.

AVERY BRUNDAGE

He told a news conference later he was especially impressed by the proposed site for the rowing course.

The rowing will be held in a channel on St. Helen's Island in the St. Lawrence River at the site of Expo 67.

Brundage, honorary life president of the IOC, said that the cours, in addition to being new, was "never the centre of everything" and therefore "doubly useful" for the 1976 event.

He said that in many of the previous Olympics the rowing venues had been a considerable distance from the main facilities and the Olympic Village.

Brundage also visited the proposed site for the 70,000-seat Olympic stadium.

Monday night, at a civic held in his honor to wind up a two-day visit, Brundage said Montreal "will never regret," playing host for the 1976 Summer Games.

He said the city will be "repaid 10 times" for anything it must pay to hold the Games.

Brundage, honorary life president of the IOC, said he was impressed with the progress being made here in preparation for the Games.

He said the Olympics, when awarded to Melbourne, Australia, for 1956, had brought "a great outcry" of protest from people opposed to the cost of the Games.

"But for Australia it developed immigration through four years of world publicity and in effect brought the whole South Seas back into the world."

He cited similar opposition when Japan spent $3 billion on the 1964 Tokyo Games, but said the Japanese had virtually ripped the old city to shreds and the re-development had made Tokyo "a much better city for having the Games."

Denver Flame Still Kindled

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Despite a recent red light from the citizens of Colorado, the International Olympic Committee has not ruled out Denver as a site for the 1976 Olympic Games.

"At this time we have not received any resignation from the U.S. Olympic Committee for Denver," says Lord Killanin, president of the IOC."

Killanin, in a statement Monday, added that his organization would release no further information "until we have firm news."

The IOC chief later huddled with his committeemen, but it was expected that a decision on the 1976 Olympic site might have to wait several months.

The issue was brought to light Monday when a spokesman for the Colorado Citizens Committee to Retain The Winter Games week before the IOC to plead for a second chance.

At last week's general election, Colorado citizens turned down a proposal to use state funds for the Games.

Harry Arkin, a Denver lawyer representing the Colorado citizens group, said that the voters were misled by the proposal on the ballot.

"The people in Colorado who not asked to vote on holding the Olympics," Arkin told reporters after his meeting with Killanin. "They were given to vote on an ambiguously-worded question whether state funds should be taken to pay for the Games.

"The wording was so that only the people who voted 'no' really meant 'yes.'"

NHL Suspends Series With Touring Soviets

NEW YORK (AP) — President Clarence Campbell's announcement that the proposed series between a touring Russian team and four National Hockey League clubs has, for the moment at least, fallen through is the latest twist in hockey's cold war with the Communist world.

Campbell said Monday that current negotiations between the NHL and the Soviets have been suspended and that he has cancelled a scheduled trip to Moscow next weekend that was to wrap up final details.

"I think some obstacles have been placed in their way," said Campbell. "Negotiations have been halted and as of now, there is a stalemate."

Campbell did not rule out a resumption of negotiations.

"We'll expect some explanation and verification from them if they desire to continue negotiations," Campbell said.

The NHL's relations with the Russians have been extremely sensitive ever since September's series between Team Canada and the Soviet National squad. That eight-game set was replete with problems but in the midst of it the Russians expressed interest in a possible return series against several NHL clubs.

Campbell pursued the idea and it seemed set for January. Then, suddenly came a stumbling block—unidentified by Campbell—that appears to have scuttled the plans.

Campbell did not name the problem but hinted that it involved the International Ice Hockey Federation. Russia is a member of the Federation which requires consent of the countries involved before sanctioning an international competition.

"The NHL won't ask for consent on behalf of another party," Campbell said. From that, it would seem that the Russians had asked the NHL to intercede in their behalf with the IIHF.

That leaves the proposed series up in the air. At least one NHL general manager is sorry that the negotiations seem at a dead end.

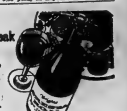
"I thought we might get an opportunity to play them," said Emile Francis, general manager-coach of New York Rangers. "I was looking forward to it."

Francis was asked if he didn't think scheduling a mid-season exhibition game might not hurt his team.

"No, I don't think so," he said. "I think if we had the opportunity to play them, we would owe it to our fans to do it.

"If the dates and scheduling were reasonable, why not?"

Judge Won't Bar Hull



CHICAGO (AP) — A United States circuit court judge refused Monday to issue a temporary restraining order barring Bobby Hull, former Chicago Black Hawk star from playing in the new World Hockey Association.

The Black Hawks of the National Hockey League asked Judge Francis Dolaney to grant the order until the WHA posts a $2.5-million bond as ordered by a federal court judge in Philadelphia.

District Court Judge A. Leon Higginbotham ordered the WHA to post the bond to ensure against damage to the 16-team NHL "if my ruling is wrong or is reversed by an appellate court."

Bobcats Attracting Attention

from the Toronto Bureau of The Intelligencer

TORONTO — There is a new commodity in the Metro Toronto Junior B league this season. A team called Belleville Bobcats has the handlers of the other clubs in the loop quickly paying attention.

While it is still a bit early to single out individuals, most of the team mentors have distinct first impressions of the Bobcats' performance to date, a debut that has seen Belleville join the leaders of the 10-team league with a 3-2-2 record.

Rick Hay, coach of Bramalea Blues, has come to fear the Belleville power play. In the Bobcats' 4-3 victory over the Blues in the team's first meeting, all their goals were scored with their rivals playing shorthanded. On two of the Belleville goals Bramalea was short two skaters.

"They're an older club," Hay said of the Bobcats. "Somebody told us they will have only three or four players back next year. We're younger and more inexperienced. This is a building year for us."

Bramalea is also a first-year team. The response at training camp was not impressive with only about a dozen players from the Bramalea area, northwest of Toronto, coming out. But coach Hay's team has been well greeted at the box office averaging 600 to 700 fans at home despite winning only two of their first 18 games.

Toronto Nationals are blanked, both on the ice and at the ticket windows. Coach Chuck Cromie, however, has an explanation for their poor fortunes.

"We're basically a feeder team. Our job is to turn out players for the Junior A. A lot of our players are 15 and 16 years old," he said.

"An older team like Belleville may do alright now but come about January our players will be just coming around. Our youngsters are still getting used to the junior game."

Cromie has memories of the Nationals' game in Belleville earlier this season. He directed a letter of protest to the league office concerning the officiating in the game and the lack of police protection for his players. Four Nationals, he said, required hospital treatment for injuries received in the contest.

"The fans are wild down there," he said. "I guess they have nothing to do on a Friday night except go watch hockey."

He adds that it is an adjustment for his players to perform in front of 1,200 rabid fans in Belleville after games before only a handful at their own arena.

Regarding the Bobcats, Cromie says, "They tend to use their sticks a bit too much to my estimation. They're fast skaters, but I dont think the club is as good as Peterborough."

Bill White, coach of Markham Waxers, agrees that Peterborough is the team to beat in the 16-club league. Markham were the Ontario Junior B champions last year.

"With the players they have back from last year's club, I don't see Peterborough dropping out of first spot," said White.

After losing 3-2 in their first White conceded them a good chance for second spot in the league. He foresees his team battling Belleville, Oshawa, Toronto and Wexford for second place.

"Both we and the Nationals had trouble when we played Belleville. They do an awful lot of highsticking. Like most out - of - town teams (outside the Toronto area, they place more emphasis on stick checking," said White.

Pickering Panthers' general manager Ted Vidito called the Belleville style "Montreal type of hockey" with stress on forward passing and strong skating.

"When we played there," said Vidito, "I particularly noticed their good skating. But that was at home. I don't know if they'll be as fast on the road or not."

Vidito would prefer that Belleville play in an eastern Ontario league, but strictly to cut down travel and not because of their play to date. He disputes any criticism of the team's checking techniques and claims that R. Michaels has the worst offenders in the highsticking department.

Lemaire Holds Precarious Perch

MONTREAL (CP) — Centre Jacques Lemaire of Montreal Canadiens holds a slim one-point lead in the National Hockey League's individual scoring race today.

And just how precarious Lemaire's position is at the top can be seen in the fact that only five points separate the top 15 players.

Lemaire, who recently signed a new two-year contract with the Canadiens, has 25 points and is the league's top goal-getter with 14.

Eight winger Rod Gilbert of New York Rangers and centre Gilbert Perreault of Buffalo Sabres are tied for second place in the scoring race with 25 points each, one fewer than Lemaire.

Perreault is the current assist leader with 18.

And this year's goaltending race has its own surprises.

Buffalo Sabres, usually weak defensively in previous seasons, received strong goaltending from veteran Roger Crozier last week. Crozier posted two shutouts to give him three for the season and a share of the lead with Ken Dryden of Montreal in Stat department.

The Sabres have the second-best goals-against average—2.13—behind Montreal's 1.82.

Montreal's Dryden and Gilles Villemure of the Rangers share the individual lead among regular netminders, each showing a 1.75 goals-against average.

Whalers Overcome Four-goal Deficit

BOSTON (AP) — New England Whalers spotted Houston Aeros four goals and rallied for a 4-4 World Hockey Association overtime tie Monday night despite a fantastic pro debut by Aeros' goalie Bill Hughes.

The Whalers, who had won four previous starts, swarmed all around Hughes in the third period and the 10-minute overtime, but could manage only a standoff. Hughes had 34 saves in the sudden-death extra session, finishing with 46 for the game.

Houston, which had 30 shots on New England goalie Bruce Landon, jumped to a 3-0 first period lead on tallies by Duke Harris, Murray Hall and Gordie Labossiere. Hall and Labossiere scored at 16:52 and 19:37 respectively.

The Aeros increased the count to 4-0 on Brian MacDonald's 15-foot shot at 6:52 of the second period. The Whalers got back into the game as Tom Webster connected at 9:29, and Tim Sheehy slapped home a 30-footer at 19:25.

John French scored a goal at 16:16 of the third period, and Sheehy tied the count by batting in a rebound from close up with just one minute left in regulation.

Attendance at the game was 8,315.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

Aries (March 21-April 19): For once, the direct approach is not best. While you work out something better, listen and learn, something you've balked at hearing.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Official or formal acts and declarations are favored. Bring technical consultants and friends into any ceremony.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Responsibilities beset you. Get an early start. Have a long evening of special consideration with friend.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Select and concentrate on solitary chores wherever you can. People let slide eventually come back to their original starting points.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Established habits carry you along. Routine tasks, petty concerns are a breeze or a burden according to your attitude.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be explicit, give yourself time for choice of moves, allow others the space and time to respond. Launch ventures with enthusiasm.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Old questions offer no surprises. Go on more cycle of routine in all good grace as possible. Older people are sensitive.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Surprise dismay but set you into position for major self-improvement. Practicality is a rare virtue on days like this.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Something you've said in the past comes up for redemption. The less you complicate matters, the better.

Capricorn (Dec. 23-Jan. 19): Patience with delay draws favorable opposition. Show it in deeds rather than words. Ordinary chores have extra serious.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Unexpected information isn't what you'd like. Concentrate deployment of available resources is best done by your own expertise.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Continue search for particulars, the completely stated truth. If things come to a standstill, use the time for reflection.

Low Blood Sugar Physical Ailment

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Exactly years ago I suffered what the doctors called a nervous breakdown. They said I would be well in a couple of years.

Now my doctor tells me I am suffering from low blood sugar. Is there any cure for this? Are the two sicknesses related? If not, how could such a mistake be made?

Slow down. And don't over-simplify. And don't take it for granted that any mistake was made.

"Nervous breakdown" is a term that can be applied to any condition involving emotional reactions that get beyond a person's control. It may be because the patient is neurotic, or schizophrenic, or merely collapsing emotionally under too much stress.

Low blood sugar is a physical condition. It means that the amount of sugar in the blood falls at times to too low a level. It can cause temporary weakness, trembling, faint spells, blackouts or near-blackouts, and similar symptoms, including visual aberrations.

It is true that in some instances patients suffering from undiagnosed low blood sugar have been regarded as "nervous," and been told that their troubles were "all in their head." But that does not mean that one cannot have a "nervous breakdown" without having low blood sugar—nor does it mean that a person cannot have the two kinds of trouble, not necessarily at the same time.

Since I have no idea of the type of "nervous breakdown" you had, I cannot comment on that.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: In your article on schizophrenics, you did not mention whether the germs or fungus of the lung is contagious.

Not contagious in the sense of catching a disease by picking up the germs from someone with the disease. Histo develops from inhaling the fungus.

Ontario Minimum Pay Now Fourth in Country

By RICHARD ANCO
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The decision by British Columbia's New Democratic Party government to increase the province's hourly minimum wage to $2, and then in stages to $2.50 by June, 1974, is likely to keep B.C. the pace-setter in that field for some time to come.

Ontario is reported on the verge of raising its minimum by 25 cents an hour to $1.80, a move that will give it the second highest rate among the provinces.

Four other provinces have increases scheduled, with Quebec committed to overtake Ontario in May, 1974. Other provinces are keeping their rates under constant review.

The new federal minimum of $1.80 an hour, which went into effect Nov. 1, applies to employees of businesses under federal jurisdiction. It was previously $1.75.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows that earlier this year Manitoba and Saskatchewan increased their minimum rates to $1.75 an hour and Alberta's minimum will go to $1.75 Jan. 1, 1973, from the present $1.55. The latest increase in Manitoba was 10 cents an hour, in Saskatchewan five cents.

Quebec's rate moved up five cents an hour Nov. 1 to $1.65 and the province already has set out a schedule that will raise the minimum to $2 Nov. 1, 1974. It will be $1.80 next November.

In the Atlantic provinces, Nova Scotia has a minimum of $1.55 an hour and will add 10 cents next July. New Brunswick's rate is $1.40 an hour, moving to $1.50 in the new year.

Newfoundland increased its minimum 15 cents to $1.40 an hour last June.

Prince Edward Island has the lowest rate in Canada and is the only province that differentiates between men and women, setting the minimum for men at $1.25 an hour and for women at $1.10. All agricultural workers are exempt from minimum wage standards in P.E.I. as are farm and domestic workers in Nova Scotia, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The minimum in the Northwest Territories was raised in September, 1970, to $1.50 from $1.25 an hour and in the Yukon it became $1.75 Jan. 1, 1972, a 50-cent increase from the level set in May, 1970.

Arguments for and against minimum wage legislation have been relatively constant for the last two decades, with labor unions pressing for increases and small businesses, especially in the service-related sector, bemoaning the legislated costs involved.

David Archer, president of the Ontario Federation of Labor, has said a $1.80 minimum in Ontario is "completely inadequate."

"They say it will put many small companies out of business or they will move to another province. Most of the industries that will be affected are local in character, they serve the community in which they are located and couldn't move if they wanted."

The OFL is campaigning for a $2.75 minimum in Ontario.

The federation says federations are that major groups to benefit from any new Ontario rate are in the service industries.

The Council of Quebec Employers said radical increases in the minimum wage in certain sectors of the economy "will only worsen the situation for young unemployed people." An outside salary increases would make employers turn to older experienced workers.

The BC restaurant industry, facing an eventual $2.50-an-hour minimum, predicts substantial price increases, a drop in business and a squeeze on profits. At least two owners feel they will have to lay off staff.

Allen Morgan, president of the Vancouver joint board of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees Union, doesn't see it that way.

"Up to now they've been enjoying the best of two worlds, high prices and low wages," he said.

In most provinces there are exemptions from minimum wage standards. All provinces have lower rates for employees under 18 or under 17 years of age.

The federal minimum for those under 17 is $1.65. Exemptions are also granted to employers providing on-job training or employing handicapped workers under a system of individual permits.

Several provinces allow lower rates for inexperienced workers. In Manitoba, for instance, inexperienced workers can be paid $1.50 an hour—25 cents below the minimum—for the first three months of employment but not less than $1.70 during the next three months.

In the last 15 years there has been a sharp upward climb in minimum wages [illegible]. The federal minimum was $1.25 in 1960. It was 45 cents for men and 40 cents for women in New Brunswick's canning and processing industry in 1956, between 40 cents in B.C. in 1957 and 65 cents in Alberta in 1958. Manitoba in 1957 had rates of 60 cents for all men, 58 cents for urban women and 54 cents for rural women.

Newfoundland started minimums in 1967 at 70 cents for men and 50 cents for women. Ontario's Minimum Wage Act of 1964 set a $1 general base with $1.25 for construction workers.

Ten years ago Nova Scotia had a $1.05 minimum for men and 50 cents for women and P.E.I. had a rate of 80 cents for men only.

In 1960 Quebec had a two-zone system—a 70-cent minimum for the Montreal area and 64 cents in the rest of the province. Saskatchewan also had a divided rate 12 years ago—$30 a week in the cities and 15 larger towns and $28 in the rest of the province.

Prosecution under the legislation have varied in the provinces, with the penalty usually being a fine.

An Ontario labor ministry spokesman said penalties are rare because employers are willing to pay back wages when they are in the wrong.

High Land Costs Disturb Officials

OTTAWA (CP) — The high cost of land for housing is drawing increasing government attention.

It is likely to get a thorough airing at a January federal-provincial conference and may appear in federal-provincial-municipal talks in Toronto next week.

The federal government has moved to ease land assembly provisions by reducing the cost of land and is talking about dealing with the major stumbling-block to land assembly—servicing.

The cost of land generally is agreed to be one of the two main factors in soaring housing prices. The other element is mortgages.

There have been provisions for municipal land assembly in the National Housing Act since 1949. But few municipalities have taken advantage of it.

Peter Burns, secretary of the housing committee of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, said in a recent interview: "If you only have so much money you put it where you have to put it—police and fire services and schools."

He said the cost of buying land combined with servicing it has stopped many municipalities from using NHA land assembly provisions.

Saskatoon has long been heralded as a model of what can be done through public land assembly, acquiring much land during the depression of the 1930s through tax defaults and buying more during the 1950s. The goal was to use the publicly-owned land as a planning tool.

The city was able to use its ownership of land to ensure that private developers followed municipal plans. The land gave the municipality bargaining power when developers sought to buy property from the city.

The city bought 1,600 acres under NHA provisions with the federal government providing 75 per cent of the funds, the province 20 per cent and Saskatoon five per cent.

One observer said the average price of a serviced residential lot in Saskatoon in 1970 was between $9,000 and $14,000 while in Vancouver it was about $7,000 and in Edmonton $8,000.

Wins $2 Million

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Mario Alberto Ronconi, 23-year-old Brazilian businessman, won $2.3 million in cash Monday by picking correctly the winners of 13 weekend soccer games.

Ronconi beats the record set in May by Eduardo Teixeira Varela, a 23-year-old factory worker, who pocketed $2 million as the only one to pick all 13 games correctly.

Lottery Popular

DETROIT (AP) — First-day sales of Michigan state lottery tickets touched off a stampede of legal gamblers Monday.

Sellers at 7,000 locations—bars, service stations, groceries, shops and restaurants—reported a ticket-buying soree from the moment sales started Monday morning.

Many agents, especially those in the Detroit area, reported they sold an entire week's supply of the 50-cent tickets in the first half-day of business.

Question Federal Drug Control Role

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — After hearing day-long arguments Monday on whether or not the federal government has the right to prosecute certain drug offences, Judge I. A. Vannini reserved decision until Jan. 18.

The testing of the law, which both prosecution and defence concede could go to the Supreme Court of Canada, involves a charge under the Narcotics Control Act of Canada.

Albyn Edward Collins, 20, of Sault Ste. Marie, is charged with possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

Monday, Edward Greenspan, lawyer for the accused, made a motion to quash the federal indictment before any plea could be taken.

He argued that while the federal government passes legislation, it is the right of the provincial government to administer justice, and he maintained this means prosecution of all criminal matters, not just provincial statutes.

He said that the only way the federal government would have the right to appoint its own prosecutors, as in the Collins case, would be if this power had been delegated by the attorney-general of the province.

Drug cases are prosecuted by federally-appointed attorneys.

Mr. Greenspan said he believed the federal government was slowly eroding the administration of justice by not allowing each provincial prosecutions.

He said under the circumstances, provincial governments could pay the bills but couldn't prosecute its own statutes.

The Toronto lawyer contended that the federal government did not have the power to make the amendment or continue its prosecutions without the consent of the provincial attorneys-general because the provincial governments have exclusive jurisdiction to administer justice.

Cuba May Close Hijackers' Haven

OTTAWA (CP) — A carefully nurtured Canadian plan to draw Cuba away from its position as the world's No. 1 haven for aerial hijackers may have been helped by the weekend drama of the hijacked DC-9, informed sources said Monday.

Officials here were watching to see how Cuba deals with the three men who ordered the Southern Airways jet Friday night out of Birmingham, Ala., and forced it to hopscotch across North America before finally landing at Havana Sunday.

The 27 exhausted passengers and four crew members were returned to the United States. The hijackers were arrested by Cuban Police.

One Ottawa official said he hoped the incident would impress on Cuban authorities "the necessity of dealing with these situations in a better manner than in the past."

He said Canada still hasn't received a response from Cuba to its request for the extradition of Patrick Dolan, Critton, 25, of New York, wanted for the hijacking of an Air Canada Jetliner last Dec. 26.

The request is more than eight months old. Canada hasn't sent to Havana a written follow-up, but Canadian diplomats have raised the matter gently with Cuban representatives here and in Havana.

They (the Cubans) say they're thinking about it, but there's been no tangible result."

Nor has Canada received a reply to an invitation extended to Cuba last spring to send a delegation here to discuss a new extradition treaty between the two countries, explicitly covering the crime of hijacking.

The present treaty, written in 1904, does not cover hijacking. Canadian authorities are seeking Critton's extradition on charges of kidnapping, extortion and armed robbery—recognized as extraditable offences under the treaty.

Hostility Found

TORONTO (CP) — Racial and religious discrimination in Canada is slowly being overcome, but much hostility still remains against French-Canadians, blacks and Jews.

There were the conclusions of Rev. Richard Jones, president and founder of the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews in an interview on the organization's 25th anniversary Monday.

Reject Report

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Teachers' Federation announced Monday that it has rejected the report of the government-appointed committee and submitted alternative proposals to Education Minister Thomas Wells on collective bargaining procedure.

A statement by the 105,000-member federation said the report by committee chairman R. W. Reville showed "evident distrust of arbitration, conciliation and mediation and how they function."

Anik Boosted

OTTAWA (CP) — Telesat Canada's communications satellite, Anik 1, was boosted on its way to a permanent orbit Monday.

The satellite's rocket motor was fired by ground control at 3:33 p.m. EST and Telesat president David Golden said he is pleased with the results.

It will probably be a day or two before it is known definitely whether Anik has reached the desired orbit.

Recall Cars

DETROIT, Mich. (AP) — General Motors is recalling 253,000 intermediate-sized 1972 models, produced before Oct. 8, as a stop bracket can be attached to the steering idler arm.

GM officials said Monday if the right front wheel should strike a curb or similar object while the driver is backing up with his steering wheel in a hard left position, it could cause a severe "toe in" which, if not corrected, could eventually cause the loss of steering control of the right front wheel.

Trade Rises

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's share of world export trade rose sharply in the second quarter of this year to nearly 6.1 per cent, it is reported in International Monetary Fund statistics.

The highest Canada has achieved on an annual basis was approximately 6.2 per cent in 1950. Ten years ago, Canada's share of world trade ran to about five per cent.

Not Influence

TORONTO (CP) — A $20,000 donation from a property development firm to the provincial Progressive Conservative party last year would not have influenced the cabinet's decision to approve a multi-million dollar agreement with the company, Ontario Premier William Davis said Monday.

The premier said he spoke to party fund-raiser William Kelly after a published report that Fidinam (Ontario) Ltd. made the donation, but said he did not ask him whether the donation came before or after the agreement between the firm and the Workman's Compensation Board, was approved.

The premier said Mr. Kelly informed him—"as I fully expected he would"—that donations to the party are not involved" with the government, "past, present or future."

Want Changes

DETROIT (CP) — An advisor to President Nixon predicted Monday the United States will press for substantial changes in the auto pact.

Peter M. Flanigan, special assistant to the president for the development and co-ordination of international economic policy, said his country wants "changes that should work in the benefit of the United States."

Mr. Flanigan told a joint meeting of Canadian and United States public relations societies that the auto pact must be renegotiated because the United States is laboring under an imbalance of trade of hundreds of millions of dollars with Canada annually.

Quebec Orders Hydro Restored

QUEBEC (CP) — Striking Hydro-Quebec workers must furnish broadly-defined "essential services" or face stiff fines under emergency legislation passed early today by the Quebec national assembly.

The legislature worked until after 3 a.m. to pass the emergency legislation aimed at getting the lights and heat back on throughout the province, hit by a hydroelectric strike nine days ago.

The legislation orders workers to return to those jobs deemed necessary for maintaining essential services and provides fines of between $50 and $250 a day for individuals not complying with its provisions.

Hydro-Quebec and the unions, or their officers, face fines of between $5,000 and $50,000 for refusing to provide essential services or for counselling workers not to comply with the legislation.

The legislation gives only a broad definition of what constitutes essential services or what employees will be required to return to their jobs.

The assembly adopted an amendment, moved by Robert Burns, house leader for Parti Quebecois, which permits either a union or Hydro-Quebec to appeal any order under the legislation to the labor relations board.

The assembly adjourned until Thursday after a sitting that began at 3 p.m. Tuesday and continued with only a two-hour dinner break.

While the assembly was meeting, negotiations between Hydro-Quebec and the Canadian Union of Public Employees Hydro-Quebec and the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) which represents the 8,500 striking workers, were broken off.

The strike Tuesday resulted in 319 unrepaired power breaks affecting about 29,000 people.

Power failures also led to layoffs in industry and ice one case. 4,000 employees were laid off in the Montreal suburb of Anjou.

In the assembly, the Opposition criticized Premier Robert Bourassa's Liberal government for being slow in acting to bring disruption of power supplies under control. Opposition parties had asked for an emergency debate last week.

They also were critical of the sweeping provisions of the bill, which they suggested was the equivalent of an outright back-to-work order.

Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer maintained that it was aimed solely at ensuring that essential services are maintained during the strike.

Mr. Cournoyer has called for representatives of Hydro-Quebec and CUPE to appear before the legislature's labor committee on Friday.

The bill defines essential services as everything needed to "ensure full operation of all electrical and gas services" in Quebec.

The definition includes operation of production, transformer and transmission equipment and distribution "and any other necessary work."

Hanoi, Saigon Seem Flexible

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — New signs of flexibility by North and South Vietnam are encouraging U.S. officials to believe remaining obstacles to peace in Vietnam can be swept away within weeks, probably by the end of the year.

Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger's next meeting with North Vietnamese officials in Paris, expected to begin later this week, may be all that is needed to negotiate a final agreement, sources said.

Despite Saigon's expressions of concern with some of the terms of the tentative agreement worked out by Washington and Hanoi, it is confidently expected by U.S. officials that the South Vietnamese government will agree to accept the peace agreement.

No Permanent Certificate

Manitoba May Limit Tenure of Teachers

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba school trustees decided Tuesday that teachers should have job tenure for three-or-five-year periods after their second year of teaching, and should no longer be issued with permanent teaching certificates.

The decision followed resolutions presented to the Manitoba Association of School Trustees and carried by the convention with large majorities after brief debates.

They now will be presented to the minister of education, who will be asked to amend the Public Schools Act to make the changes.

A resolution changing the present system in which teachers gain tenure with a school board after two years of teaching, and instead giving tenure for definite periods of time, was approved after it was amended to provide for appeal by teachers affected.

Dorothy Scott of Neepawa school division, who moved the resolution, said such a change would guarantee against the possibility "that tenure could be used to extend questionable services over a length of time." She said this wasn't fair to students.

Napalm, Defoliation Terrorism Too - - Arabs

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Representatives of Cuba and Saudi Arabia said Tuesday U.S. bombing and defoliation in Vietnam are terrorism just as much as the aerial hijackings and guerrilla attacks against which the United States seeks United Nations action.

"Arms such as napalm are killing people by the thousands and nothing is done about it, yet an issue is made when a few people take the law into their own hands to secure their legitimate rights," Saudi Ambassador Jamil Baroody told the General Assembly's legal committee.

"This looks like a good place to dump the surplus!"

Power-less Life Hard

MONTREAL (CP) — The strike by 8,500 Hydro-Quebec workers which began more than a week ago has forced Montrealers either to leave their homes, rent electrical generators or just put up with the lack of electricity.

In suburban Cote St. Luc where about 4,000 residents have been blacked out since within minutes of the Hydro workers' walkout, the normal neighborhood sounds have been augmented by the whirr of auxiliary generators.

Many other residents of the relatively affluent suburb have deserted their homes to take refuge in nearby hotels or the homes of friends.

Not everyone has another place to go to.

Three Cote St. Luc residents, a middle-aged couple and their daughter, stood talking outside their house.

"It's colder in the house than outside," the girl said. "The concrete is still damp and it's so cold in there."

Her mother said they could not afford to go to a hotel and had no relatives nearby.

"The first day at a friend's house, you're company. The second day, you're family. The third day, you're just a pain. We refuse to be a burden."

Erie Waves Oust 8,000

By The Canadian Press

Weary civic officials today plan to survey the damage caused Tuesday when rain and waves smashed shorelines in southwestern Ontario, forcing evacuation of more than 300 persons and causing more than an estimated $1 million damage.

The storm, with winds with gusts 60 miles an hour, whacked both Canadian and United States sides of lakes Erie and St. Clair as well as Lake Michigan on the American side.

More than 8,000 persons were evacuated along a 30-mile stretch of Lake Erie in Michigan, extending north from the Ohio border. At the east end of Lake Erie, the Welland canal was closed.

The storm hit most of southern Ontario, but the most severe effects were felt in the townships of Pelee and Mersea, south of Windsor, and the Windsor area itself.

William Derix, reeve of Pelee Township, said 8,000 acres of Pelee Island, 18 miles off the mainland, were flooded when dikes were smashed by waves from Lake Erie.

"There's no use in trying to patch it out," he said, "because it's all level with Lake Erie now."

He said at least 30 cottages were destroyed and some parts of the island evacuated on the accops of front-end loaders. Others clinched on top of bulldozers. He said damage would be more than $1 million.

Mr. Marshall Leo Bernier, minister of natural resources, and Margaret Birch, talked without potfolio, planned to survey the area today.

In adjoining Mersea Township, Reeve Clinton Tetlenbaum said 300 persons were evacuated and billeted in homes of friends and neighbors who lived on higher ground.

"The water was so high that I saw a cottage going down and a refrigerator and washing machine floating out into the lake," the reeve said.

Both townships are agricultural areas with large acreages such as onions, radishes and potatoes. In Pelee Township, more than 50,000 bushels of tomatoes were under water.

Mr. Tetlenbaum said the water was 6 feet deep and the wind so strong that waves broke over a three-rail wooden fence built in 1953.

"Damage will run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars," he said.

But, townships have declared themselves disaster areas and have asked for provincial and federal government assistance.

Flood Victims Start To Return to Homes

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavy snow, freezing rain and drifting snow tormented areas from the Ohio Valley to New England today and gale warnings continued for much of the Atlantic Coast.

Strong winds lashed the lower Great Lakes and the North Atlantic coast. The New England storm moved toward Nova Scotia after leaving up to a foot of snow in some northern states.

Meanwhile, flood victims started returning to their water-soaked homes in Michigan and Ohio in the wake of a storm which lashed the shorelines of Lakes Erie, Huron and St. Clair on Tuesday.

Authorities estimated the number of evacuees at more than 10,000 along a 300-mile stretch of Lake Erie and Lake Huron shoreline extending from Ohio's Cuyahoga County west to Toledo and north to Michigan's Saginaw Bay.

Complete damage estimates were not available, but authorities in Monroe County, Mich., and along the Ohio shore said they expect damages in each of those areas to exceed $1 million.

Geese Huddle Under Shrubs

KINGSVILLE (CP) — Manley Miner, president of the Jack Miner Bird Sanctuary near Kingsville just west of Mersea Township, said he walked down to Lake Erie Tuesday.

"It was the highest and wildest I've seen it in the 30 years I've been around here," he said.

He said the more than 15,000 Canada geese, stopping at the sanctuary on their annual migration south, had sought cover under trees and shrubs.

"They're OK," he said. "It's a good thing we are three miles from the lake and have a lot of a buffer."

Ministers May Refer Problems to Specialists

"Your minister may not be offering you advice in the near future, rather he will refer you to a new breed of clergy, specially trained for counselling purposes.

"The idea must be generating some interest in the Belleville Ministerial Association, which last night held its first ecumenical meeting."

"The interest stirred by this topic has taken us the first step in becoming an ecumenical association," said chairman Rev. Don Hinmeiman.

Rev. D. J. MacLachlan, executive director of the Kingston Institute of Pastoral Care, Queen's Theological College, questioned the association, "are you tuned-in to the needs of the people about you, and are you capable of handling their problems?"

Mr. MacLachlan said he doubted if anyone in the association was completely prepared and offered a "referral service" as an alternative.

If Mr. MacLachlan attains his goal, local ministers, in most cases, will be acting as liaison officers rather than sounding boards for "people problems."

Mr. MacLachlan and his department "are offering a variety of courses in the clergy, in an attempt to men such a referral service.

During the one-year course, students come to class equipped with their current interviews and have them assessed and re-assessed by instructors.

"We have to learn the signs that invite involvement," said Mr. MacLachlan.

People don't always come right out and say their need help, but through a subtle set of "signs" they reach for counselling, explained the guest speaker.

The idea of the course is to teach how signs are recognized and what to do next," he said.

Comparing the clergy to the medical profession, he explained, "we (common clergy) are not much more than a general practitioner and sometimes we need the help of a specialist."

Mr. MacLachlan cautioned, the course is selective and some applicants will have to be turned away.

"Special people are needed and not in great numbers," he said.

Post Office Vote Deadline Is Past

TRENTON (Staff) — Question of the future of Trenton's former post office tower now sitting on a vacant lot at the downtown section of Dundas Street, is now a further mystery.

Deadline for the matter's inclusion on the Dec. 4 municipal election ballot was Monday. At 5 p.m. there had been no word from the Ontario's Municipal Board, which held a public hearing into the matter in September.

It now rests with the OMB to render either approval of the town's project to construct a combined municipal office-parking garage complex on the site, or not.

The municipal board could, however, call for a special plebiscite at some future date. But because a special enumeration would be necessary, additional expense would be borne by Trenton taxpayers.

Over the past five years since sale of the former federal building site, the matter has twice gone to the voters. On at least one occasion, they voted to proceed with plans. In 1973 project is the third proposal for the site.

One's A Winner

Doug Sword, new president of the Quinte District Labour Council, accepts congratulations from Belleville mayoralty candidate Robin Jeffrey. She told council members road improvements will be high on her agenda if elected Dec. 4.

Sophiasburgh Voters Hear Their Candidates

DEMORESTVILLE (Staff) — Sophiasburgh township councillors and election candidates robbed of a normal election meeting by new legislation, last night attended a ratepayers' session organized to preview platforms.

Township reeve George Foster, who has endured an election race with deputy reeve Roy Brooks, last night told taxpayers gathered at Demorestville town hall that curbs and policies he will be called on be one of his goals if re-elected.

He also said if returned to office he would work toward achieving spot reconstruction of the road running from Demorestville to Crofton.

Deputy reeve said he had heard in a radio broadcast that James Taylor, MPP Prince Edward - Lennox, has stated the Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd. will receive a licence to quarry in Hallowell township. He said it is "a must" to have the cement plant situated in Sophiasburgh, since it pays a tax bill of approximately $190,000 and has a payroll of $1.5 million annually.

The reeve stressed taxes in the township possibly would double if the company were to shift its operations from the county.

He touched briefly on a waste disposal system in Prince Edward which will probably be quite costly. He said a closing deadline of November 1, 1971 for the township dump has been extended pending study of alternatives.

Deputy reeve Roy Brooks, who is making a bid for the reeveship, told ratepayers of the development of a volun-

Gunning Retires

Laurason Gunning of Tweed, a member of Hastings county board of education for the past four years, has retired as a trustee.

Mr. Gunning filed nomination papers, but withdrew them before the deadline last night. He has represented the townships of Huntingdon, Hungerford and Tyendinaga and the village of Tweed and the town of Deseronto since the county board was formed in 1969.

Running for public school trustee in that area in the coming election is Ken Little and Carman Gibson.

tary fire brigade and construction of a fire hall during the past two years.

He mentioned waste disposal and said if it is carried out on the county level, a pickup system will be necessary.

Also addressing ratepayers were contenders for the office of deputy reeve, John Sprague and Max MacDonald.

Councillors by acclamation for the coming term are Wayne Lindsay, Leland Dyvee and Sandra Grieve. John Huskinson became Sophiasburgh township's representative to the Prince Edward County board of education by acclamation. He has served in this capacity for the past four years.

The ratepayers' meeting was attended by approximately 30 persons.

Sword Is Elected QDLC President

Doug Sword is the new president of the Quinte District Labor Council.

An executive steward in the customs and excise union at Corby's Distilleries, Mr. Sword is also chairman of PACE (People Against a Contaminated Environment).

He replaces Reg Loader, who will remain in office until the new year.

Elected first vice - president was Jim Wiseman of Belleville, while Gerald Cunningham, also of Belleville, is second vice-president.

Mr. Sword promises to put new life into the QDLC which has been plagued during recent months by sporadic participation.

"We will be involved in issues," he said following his election Tuesday night. "We'll have labor people on different boards and committees in their areas."

Little has been heard from local labor spokesmen in the past, he said.

"We want the labor voice raised over labor issues, government issues and others. We want to let people know what we are politically."

One of his first steps will be to invite municipal political figures to come and discuss important issues.

"That way we can clear the air with them before we reach a conclusion," he said.

Mr. Sword wants council emphasis taken off organized labor which, compared to non-union labor, gives only a little greater say in the workplace," he said.

Two offices that did not change hands are treasurer and recording secretary where Jan Wilson and Daisy LaRose retained their posts.

Remaining executive positions went to Mr. Loader, Keith Wallace, Al Gibson and Rosemary Hamilton. Sergeant-at-Arms is Ron McClenahen.

Two more executive spots and three trustee vacancies will be filled at later meetings.

Jeffrey Endorsed By Labor Council

Mayoralty candidate Robin Jeffrey has called for better roads in Belleville.

The alderman told a Quinte District Labor Council meeting Tuesday the city should rearrange its priorities to avoid what he termed "the annual springtime pastime of pot-hole dodging.

"We need a thorough reassessment of our roads, implemented by an ongoing program of resurfacing," she said. "Roads are the arteries of our community and should be kept in A-1 condition the year round."

Such a step, however, would not come without changes in the thinking of city council.

"I am sure if we rearrange our priorities, we can provide for a road reconditioning program that will please the drivers, and, I am sure, delight the road hockey fraternity."

Mrs. Jeffrey also introduced a new motto at the meeting.

Lone opponent of incumbent Mayor J. Russell Scott, she stated:

"I intend to get the city of Belleville moving in a new direction."

Part of the change would involve the downtown area, which, she said, has been "falling by the wayside".

She would like to see some sort of redevelopment and was encouraged by the recent decision of downtown merchants to contribute voluntary tax funds toward that end.

"They have shown their willingness to participate," she said of the merchants, "by striving and prosperous downtown area attracts dollars; creates jobs and contributes taxes."

Another area of improvement would come in the area of industry, said Mrs. Jeffrey.

"We want more jobs, industry and commercial development. But I think we have to be selective, finding secure jobs in acceptable industries that are not likely to become an environmental liability."

She chided her opponent, Dr. Scott, and boasted her sex when she told the labor council about a phone call she had received from the mayor's office concerning the council's first question, she said, was "What do you think of a woman as mayor?"

"If this is my opponent's tactic, I haven't got a thing to worry about," she commented.

Mrs. Jeffrey also made pleas for generous support of the elderly and "those of us who are called heir years of aiding welfare families," the most rewarding work I've had as an alderman".

Following Mrs. Jeffrey's speech council voted to endorse her in the Dec. 4 election.

Candidates Form Team In Northern Hastings

BANCROFT (Staff) — For the first time in the Quinte area — maybe Ontario — a local government election is being contested as a team challenge at the north end of Hastings County.

Some of the new political strategy is the combined townships of Bangor, Wicklow and McClure, on the county's northern border.

Five local residents qualified to seek the reeveship and council seats — and one already has been acclaimed despite worry of the municipal clerk. Earlier they agreed to pool funds and run on a united platform.

Felix Browne, of Purdy, says the group decided to run as a team which evolved from a local ratepayers' committee protesting a controversial land-holding bylaw.

Mr. Browne now is contesting the reeveship from Floyd Bethune, township councillor appointed to the post a few weeks ago after Ice death of Reeve Delmond Card in a car crash.

While there has been a loose grouping of reform candidates in Toronto, Mr. Browne says the local slate is believed the first emergence in Ontario of a group running on a common local-government platform.

Mr. Browne said the five-candidate slate was pledged to a hard search for provincial and federal job-creation grants which will be better used than "bushing trees that grow again next year".

Other projects being sought include: A library in Maynooth Community hall; covering or improving the area Lockey rink with help from local service clubs; upgrading local roads on a priority basis, seeking fire protection arrangements with neighboring townships.

After the deadline for qualifications in municipal elections Tuesday, Reeve Vic Stevenson, Deputy Reeve Roy Brooks, who is making a bid for the reeveship, and ratepayers of Laurason Gunning of Tweed, a member of Hastings county board of education for the past four years, has retired as a trustee.

Mr. Gunning filed nomination papers, but withdrew them before the deadline last night. He has represented the townships of Huntingdon, Hungerford and Tyendinaga and the village of Tweed and the town of Deseronto since the county board was formed in 1969.

Running for public school trustee in that area in the coming election is Ken Little and Carman Gibson.

Single Contest For RC Board

An election for school trustee in the Tweed - Hungerford area of the Hastings-Prince Edward separate school board was assured today when two nominees for the post withdrew their names to stand.

All other positions on the 14-member school board were filled by acclamation.

Nominations for trustee position for the Tweed-Hungerford area are Simon Mirsaw and Hugh McNulty, both newcomers. This year's incumbent, Ed Courneyea did not seek re-election.

Two other incumbents on the board, Chairman Mrs. Ben Kreeze of Trenton, and Gerald Walsh, member for the Tyendinaga - Richmond area have also retired from the board.

Membership on the separate school board, the area of which stretches from Prince Edward county north to Whitney, this year was raised from 14 from 12 members with one additional trustee from Belleville and Trenton.

Acclaimed as trustees for next year's board were:

Belleville — Incumbents Msgr. J. P. Sullivan, Zdzek Grande, Paul H. Hinchey, Joseph Chapelle and John Granville, with Michael Collins also receiving acclamation as the extra trustee.

Quinte West — Jon Scott, Bert Garrett and Frank Hylton.

Picton — Rev. W. Hamilton.

Tyendinaga — Richmond — Angus Yorke.

Rawdon - Bancroft - Whitney area — Rev. L. P. Casarelli.

Old Lawsuit Revived

TRENTON (Staff) — A fire that destroyed approximately $¾-million worth of Bata Shoe Company of Canada Ltd., supplies stored in the former Trenton CPR roundhouse in 1967, was once again in the news at Monday night's town council meeting.

According to town clerk O. W. Larry, Bata Shoe sued the town, the PUC, Trenton's fire chief, the CPR, the manager of the PUC, and the landlord of the former roundhouse, for lack of proper fire protection.

The firm of Tilley, Carson and Findlay, solicitors, prepared briefs and presented a defence for examination before courts in Toronto in 1969. Since then, the case has not been dealt with.

A representative of the lawyer firm, J. B. S. Southey, QC, advised council in a letter that Bata Shoe has renewed the case, attempting to negotiate settlement.

The letter requested a payment of fees of $5,000, plus $714 additional disbursements, should the matter be settled without further legal action.

Councillor Stan Ketcheson requested a search of the bylaw authorizing hiring of the legal firm, which specializes in fire cases. He said the town should be certain of its responsibility to pay the legal fees. The matter was left to be dealt with in committee of the whole or the next council meeting.

The charge of negligence arose after investigation by a representative of the legal firm of Fasken and Calvin, of Toronto, representatives of Bata. R. B. Tuer, QC of their firm, detailed part of the investigation in a letter to council.

The investigation, in his report, "starts by pointing out . . . that the first very few minutes of any fire are crucial ones as to whether or not the fire is going to be brought under control. Their information and position is that the call was received at the fire hall at 4:35 p.m.; apparently there is an emergency line from the fire hall to the PUC's filtration plant where are controlled the additional sources of water pressure.

"The call was immediately made by the fire hall to the filtration plant but the attendant at the latter was away from his station. By 4:40 p.m. the filtration plant operator had returned to his station because at that time he phoned either the police or the fire department to report the fire, having seen smoke.

"At 4:42 this operator started the Sidney Street pumping well which increased the pressure by 320 gallons; then he started the increased pumpage at the Victoria Street station at 5:05 p.m. which increased the pumpage from 1,420 to approximately 2,000 gallons per minute. During all this time the fire department continued to call for more pressure; the filtration plant operator then decided to call the water works foreman to open the valve at the intersection of Murray and Sidney St. which in fact was done at about 5:20 p.m.

"It is alleged that this permitted the use of a 12-inch pipe instead of a six-inch pipe which had been in use which permitted four times as much water to be available and also was able to use a more direct route to the scene of the fire. It is further alleged that the PUC was still increasing the pumpage after 6 p.m.

"The submissions of negligence as a result of the foregoing against the PUC are as follows:

— "In that the filtration plant operator was not at his station when the call first came through.

— "In not arranging for opening the valve at the Murray and Sidney St. intersection as the very first step in order to make available the 12-inch pipe and also to use the more direct route."

Back to Fundamentals

Hastings-Prince Edward separate school teachers went back to school Monday at St. Michael's Academy for their annual professional development day. Three officials had an opportunity to try out the latest in kindergarten equipment in displays and demonstrations. They are trustee Mrs. Lillian O'Connor, Archbishop W. L. Wilheim of Kingston and superintendent E. J. Neville of the local boa rd.

New Town Bylaw Forces Cleanup

TRENTON (Staff) — Trenton town council Monday night gave first reading to a bylaw that sets down a list of restrictions geared to improve the esthetic appearance of the town.

Bylaw 71-259 includes clauses calling for residents of the town to keep yards in a safe and clean condition to guard against fire or any accidents, proper cleaning or draining of vacant yards, to keep snow clear of the roofs of buildings that might tend to collapse under stress, removal of wrecked automobiles, and to repair or tear down run down buildings.

If action is not taken by the owner of property conflicting with this bylaw, within 10 days of mailing of a notice, the improvements will be made and the cost billed to the owner.

Should the owner refuse to pay the bill within 30 days, the costs will be added to the municipal taxes, governed by proper court procedures.

Notices can be authorized by such persons as medical officers of health, policemen and sanitary inspectors.

Maximum fine under summary conviction for first offence, is $100, no more than $300 for repeated offences.

Councillor Stan Ketcheson asked if this bylaw would stand up in court. Town deputy clerk Arden Royce said the clauses were drawn up by the town's solicitor.

Councillor Paul Tripp named one private home and a wrecking yard, as prime examples of sites that require attention. He said the boarded up house on Front Street near Holland, is "a fire hazard," and described the wrecking yard on Meyer Street, as "deplorable."

Davis Impresses German Visitor

Most aspects of Ontario have drawn favourable comment from the visiting Lahr delegation. So it was only fitting that the province's leader would make a striking impression with Lahr's Lord Mayor Dr. Philipp Brucker who Monday met with Premier William Davis.

"I find Mr. Davis to be a young, modern man who looks to the future," said Dr. Brucker after his 19-minute meeting in the Premier's office.

Coming from Dr. Brucker — who does not join pleasleis loosely — the complement could only be taken as wholly sincere.

His discussion with the Premier was mainly conversational. Mr. Davis recounting a trip through the Black Forest and Dr. Brucker describing his experiences in eastern Ontario.

"I am pleased to hear Mr. Davis thinks the twinning of our cities is a good step toward better understanding between countries," commented Dr. Brucker.

The Lord Mayor presented the Premier with a large colour book about Lahr. In return, he received a certificate from the province.

The meeting took place in the original Queen's Park building after the eight delegates and their Belleville hosts had been taken on a brief tour of downtown Toronto and inside the building.

For lunch, the group crossed to one of the newly constructed provincial buildings east of the original.

The delegation then reboarded its charter bus and headed for Toronto Island Airport where two Twin Otters were waiting to take them over Ontario Place and Niagara Falls.

Skies were hazy but both landmarks were clearly visible to the peering guests who were as interested in the adjoining Niagara power dam as in the falls themselves.

The delegation then returned to Belleville. Today they'll tour Belleville General Hospital and Wednesday they go to Ottawa before returning home the next day.

Dixie Lee Top Rated

BELLEVILLE (Special) — In the current issue of the food service and hospitality's leading publication F-H Top 50, the locally based Dixie Lee Co. Limited was ranked with the outstanding performers in 1972 in a survey conducted by the magazine.

The leader of the companies rated was Versafood, a company that operates hundreds of university and hospital feeding operations with gross sales of over $80 million yearly. Locally Versafood operates the food facility at the Trenton Memorial Hospital.

Dixie Lee Co., started in 1961, is owned by two brothers, Douglas Walmsley, president and Ramon Walmsley, vice president with head office and one of its 25 outlets in operation in Canada at 211 Coleman St. The company also has a few franchises in operation in northern United States.

The company first sold restaurant franchises for its chicken throughout Ontario, and then the Maritimes, during a strong initial success. For most of the 60s, Dixie Lee chicken dominated the Maritime market. Since 1966 it has opened company-owned stores in Belleville, Picton, Petawawa and Napanee as well as expanded by setting up a number of franchises in both Canada and the U.S.

In addition, according to the company president, Dixie Lee is expanding in British Columbia with two new stores opening in Vancouver this year as plans get underway for a major effort in that western province in 1973.

The new store opened at Napanee recently at a cost of $75,000 is typical of the outlets to be established under projected expansion in the next period, president Douglas Walmsley reported. That place, with 10 persons employed, is setting records in sales well above the volume anticipated, he noted.

December 4 Vote

In municipal elections this year there is a trend toward youth which, combined with the experience of other candidates offering themselves for local councils, is a very encouraging sign.

In Kingston a 22-year-old, Paul Guindon, is running for Mayor. Mr. Guindon is unemployed. From his picture though, he is an estimable looking young man and it is said he has a way of getting to the point on politics.

At least one other candidate for Mayor has been announced in Kingston. He is Alderman George Speal.

In Cornwall a young man of 20, John Raudoy, is running for a county education board seat.

Here in Belleville, with nominations closed, we also have the prospect of a very interesting election. Incumbent Mayor Dr. J. Russell Scott and Ald. Robin Jeffrey are seeking the position of Chief Magistrate and there are 18 candidates, for 10 places on council. They include a blend of youth and experience. One whom we omitted, inadvertently, to mention in our comment last week is company sales manager Joseph Cox. In a letter, Mr. Cox notes, "you forgot the shortest and easiest name to remember . . . I don't feel badly, as long as I'm remembered on December 4." Good luck Mr. Cox. Another giving it a try is retired company supervisor T. A. Kelly.

Others to declare themselves in recent days are veteran council members Ben Corke, Jack Ireland and Art Keegan.

One whose wisdom and experience will be missed is Ald. Enos David. A veteran of 20 years in civic life here, Ald. David's keen interest in this community and his counsel on a wide range of matters affecting the city have been a valuable asset.

Another who will be missed is Ald. Gerald Joyce. A realtor, Mr. Joyce feels his involvement in this sphere of professional activity in the community could, conceivably, lead him into a conflict of interest situation. He is therefore stepping down and this is the community's loss also.

Belleville nevertheless does not lack for candidates, in this election and the calibre of those running is high. It is an interesting period in the life of the community. It is a time of progress, but a time also for self reflection on the kind of matters that are of concern and which are reflected by the candidates' platforms.

Heroic Saga

There were so many terrifying facets to that hijacking the other day that the only valid words for the whole affair are that "truth is stranger than fiction."

The questions it raises are clear — as to a U.S. penal system that allows to go loose men of such obvious alienation from society, permitting them to go free on bail although facing charges of rape, or was it attempted rape (it makes little difference); and as to the role of the press in almost seducing the fate of the entire plane and its passengers by shooting out four tires.

All ended happy however and the United States has a new saga of heroism in the deeds of a pilot who went something like 30 hours without sleep, landed his aircraft in city after city in three countries, carried on with his co-pilot wounded and one engine out of action and finally put the plane down on a foam-covered runway in Havana.

The event will rank along with Davy Crockett and The Alamo and with Captain Carlson and his crippled ancient Flying Enterprise in the annals of American history. It is ironic too that some of the credit for a safe issue to the long ordeal must go to the Cubans who, helped the U.S. pilot get his plane down safely.

Pepin Out Again

What a topsy-turvy election it has been in the wake of recent recounts and the prospect of more changes. Gone down to defeat once again is Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin. One of the more engaging personalities and effective ministers in the Trudeau cabinet, Mr. Pepin will be missed. His defeat is all the more bitter a pill in view of the fact he had been declared the winner recently after an earlier recount.

Montreal's Own Needs Overlooked

Drapeau Wants Olympics Whatever the Cost and Risk

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Parsifa Affairs Analyst

As matters now stand, Canada should not be involved in the 1976 summer Olympics. It is already shaping up as an international extravaganza with many ominous overtones this country does not need.

In fact, the present catalogue of reasons to reject it is large enough that both the international and domestic problems associated with the proposed Montreal event, should rule it out.

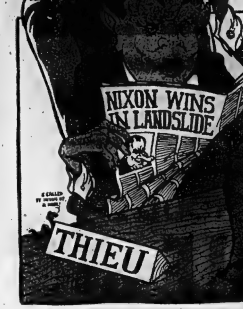
Despite the terror in Munich and the future need for massive security apparatus around the next Olympics—a security system which could envelope Canada—Jean Drapeau, the authoritarian and publicity mayor of Montreal, still wants, the 1976 summer Olympics as another municipal showpiece.

Mr. Drapeau is mayor of one of Canada's neediest cities, where public housing, welfare, poor representative government and a high tax base are all concerned. This is a fancy way of saying Montreal, Canada's largest urban community, is a sick community.

Mr. Drapeau's well-publicized energies should be directed to these essential requirements of Montreal, not to a circus outlay, which like Japan's Olympics in 1970, could come to $1 billion. And guess where he expects much of that money will come from? The public purse.

Prime Minister Trudeau had told the Montreal mayor there would be no public funds for the 1976 Montreal summer olympics in view of the tremendous costs of Expo 67 to the nation.

That should have been enough for Mayor Drapeau who refuses to reveal where his funds will now come from. Instead, the cocksure Drapeau actually stated his overwhelming mayoralty victory, (in the shadow of the FLQ crisis of 1970), also gives him the mandate to go for the 1976 Olympics.



Oh? Mr. Trudeau once had that kind of a mandate. But the voters who put him in in 1968 almost put him out in 1972. Does Mayor Drapeau honestly believe he is impregnable at the municipal polls?

The international problems which would be created by holding the 1976 summer Olympics in Canada are equally disturbing. By Olympic terms, any substantial facilities, chiefly the Olympic village for athletes and trainers, must be guaranteed by the host country. Well, who is going to pay for such expensive facilities if the federal government has bowed out.

And who is going to prevent killings in Canada within another large and temporary Olympic domicile? To do so, Canada would have to be full of the security and intelligence operators of nations participating in the summer Olympics, doing an unwholesome and entirely un-Canadian job of internal and external surveillance.

The prospect of Olympics 1976 is already nightmarish. We could have a national referendum on the Olympics as Colorado had state-wide on the Winter Olympics there.

But Jean Drapeau, possibly afraid of a repeat rejection in Canada, is opposed to the idea.

"And to think the Americans complained about MY one-man election!"

Municipal Election and Issues Before Public

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

A while back I read in the daily paper that this city has thrived in the last five years. But what was not stated was the fact that the mill rate had risen greatly also during that period. Credit for the decrease this year goes to the school board and the extra help given by the Provincial Government.

I would like to draw to the attention of citizens that the women of this city should be given the opportunity to share equally with the men in the work of civic government. I therefore ask the voters of this city to support Mrs. Robin Jeffrey for Mayor. She has the experience and she looks after any complaint immediately. We need her as our Mayor. Tweed and Picton elected women to head their councils—it is now time for Belleville to do the same.

Let us remember that many of the ideas made by the present Mayor as to the progress of this city were started by the previous Mayor and council.

We should encourage more women to run for elected office, I am certain they would show more concern for the disabled, the pensioner and those unable to work.

A HEAVY RATEPAYER

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Last week's council meeting emphasized three things: mayoral arrogance, aldermanic indifference and developer domination.

Once more the Chief Magistrate demonstrated his civic arrogance when challenged regarding alleged conflict of interest. As usual, no comment from His Worship. Citizens ought not to entertain overly optimistic expectations of any statement from the mayor, at any time it took him 183 days to come up with an answer.

Perhaps it would be better if none were forthcoming. A second door in similar vein to the first would be more than the average voter's stomach could stand.

The decision to allow Maurice Rollins construction to put a town housing in a subdivision in the east area of the city completely denied the wishes of the residents.

Currently the mayor is inviting the electors to "Vote for the people", those are the same people who also kept waiting 183 days for answers to pertinent questions. They are the same people he voted against in respect to a protest lodged by east end residents relating to the approved zoning.

Perhaps there is no room for the feelings of the citizens any more. I feel commonsense and good taste go a long way to preventing such allegations as have already been made respecting conflict of interest.

However, it is unlikely that any council that votes to prevent the average working man from being able to participate in council affairs is about to become concerned with such matters of legerdemain. Belleville's, to the polls.

WILLIAM C. HOCKLEY

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

If I had any doubts about the wisdom of Mayor Russell Scott's decision to evade answering the charges of conflict of interest laid against him in council they disappeared when he remained silent again at the last meeting.

I am now convinced that the mayor should take the advice he offered Aldermen Soulter and Jeffrey. He should resign and retire from the local political scene gracefully. To appear as a continuing candidate for the office of Mayor of the City of Belleville is, I feel, an insult to the intelligence of the voters.

Mayor Scott, like so many others who are elected to public office, seem to forget they have a duty to the electorate at large and tend only to accommodate their existence at election times.

In between times, the tendency to become indifferent to the needs and feelings of the voter is frequently exemplified by such acts of arrogance as the present unsatisfactory situation resulting from the Mayor's attitude in relation to the conflict of interest charges.

I don't know whether or not the Mayor had a conflict of interest. Neither he, nor those advising him, have considered an inquiry had any intention of allowing me to find out.

Family Planning and Tax Dollars

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

On Nov. 1, we attended an open meeting of the Family Planning Association of Hastings Prince Edward Counties at the Quinte Hotel, Belleville. This session was part of the training program for volunteers running from Sept. 26 to Dec. 5, 1972.

We are concerned about spending our tax dollars ($2,600 in amount) on a service that has not been established. It was stated at this meeting that the doctors of this community have rejected the need for this association. The spokesman, at a meeting approximately eight months ago were asked if their group could be of service and in light of their knowledge and experience with people, what the idea was rejected in favor of a total education program dealing with not a symptom of the problem but the real basis of the problem.

Pertinent presentations were made by representatives of Tyler-ton, Birthright, Clergy of Anglican and Roman Catholic faith following by a questionable presentation by a spokesman for the Family Planning Board.

It was obvious to the small group discussions which followed that none of the members of the visiting course was aware of this association and could not verbalize the particular need for which this group was formed. They also had no visible statistical information to back to base their operation. They also could give in many cases their role of service in view of the presentations made by the groups represented above.

Certain failacies were pointed out to them:

1. Birth control related to environmental control in Canada is not a problem.

2. Information about birth control simply treats a symptom and not the basic problem of human sexuality as an awareness of the whole person and his-her relationship to other members of the community.

3. The Government's huge expenditure on drug research proved to be $13,600,000 last, this is only a similar attempt which deals with symptoms, and can only lead to the same end.

4. American needs are not necessarily Canadian needs.

5. The increase of venereal disease in this country shows a direct relationship to the amount of birth control information and — use without responsibility.

Family Planning can be a positive value in the community but it is the primary responsibility of each family unit to determine from its peculiar circumstances (economic, social and emotional) its size and its numbers and relationship to the whole community.

Family Planning should be concerned not just with limiting family numbers but with assisting the family to face the pressures of this society through developing a rich potential of relationships through the social services available in the community.

Limitation of family and subsequent medical and moral implications can be handled by Amateurs especially those Amateurs who claim expertise because they have read a book or two.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics shows a definite decrease in the birth rate of Canada in the past two years. The average is down 17.2 per 1,000 in new births. This information, and other information is available through this agency.

People of this community should be aware that their tax dollars are being wasted and misused. While in grade 13 are potentially in trouble if this like of thought without goals, without basis in fact is presented as truth. We should all look very carefully at this aspect of our United Community Services.

Branch Library Under Fire

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

This letter is to express our concern about the running of the East Branch Public Library.

The insignificant sums are ridiculous and enforced with uncomfortable discipline. The library has an awkward time for junior (or youth) in which in the public interest it should not. Being a public service, the library should provide material to encourage the curiosity of youth, not to discriminate it, even if it is a subject the librarian has a negative feeling about.

It is their job to be objective about subjects, period. Books, like knowledge, are have found them, as well as the reading material, to be biased on several different occasions.

Surely we know that gypsies and also Hitler were not 190 per cent bad. Besides, in an emergency they refused us use of the phone, while if we had been ill and conservative in our views, we are sure permission would have been granted and without prying questions.

In grade nine we found it insulting to our intelligence when advised to read "Little Women" (which we had both read in grade six). While in grade 8 the librarian would not let us take out "The Legend of Wrath" (we felt the language was too strong. (Since then we have also read it and enjoyed a very good literature.) We also feel it was a personal offence that we had no one we had to have our parents' signature before we could possess a library card.

In spite of this we must admit that the children's section is quite good but eventually children do grow up and cannot be continually sheltered from opposing views.

We have read the advertisement for library month telling us to make suggestions to our librarians. We feel this is the farce that tops off the whole totalitarian situation.

Car Towed Away

Hospital Parking—Visitor Says Situation 'Deplorable'

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

My husband was injured in an accident about two weeks ago and a friend offered to drive me from Marmora, where I work, to Belleville to visit him.

She is not familiar with Belleville and I had not been to the hospital myself for some time. Therefore, I directed her to a parking space at the rear of the "Employee's Only" parking lot, which is clearly marked and, in my anxiety and haste, noticed the signs, short several hours — my husband having required a lengthy operation — she went out to her car, only to find to her consternation that it was gone. Her first thought, of course, was that it had been stolen. On inquiring at the desk, we were informed, it had been towed away and was told it would be brought back in about 10 minutes. After waiting almost ½ of an hour, a tow truck arrived to take her to the garage where her car was. This presented another problem (plus the one of saying $6 to reclaim her car) — that of finding her way out of Belleville as I was not going back with her. What a frustrating way to end an errand of mercy!

I would like to end by saying that having visited the hospital several times of late, I find the whole parking situation deplorable.

— The limited Visitors parking — the small entrances and exits for the visitors parking lots — the manner in which the cars are towed away (no warning for those not familiar with this practice) — the seeming tolerance of employees parking (for which I understand they pay $5 monthly).

Perhaps the powers-that-be would be wise in considering the Reeve of Madoc, Mr. Tom Bartons' suggestion of utilizing the property to the south of the hospital (Intell-Nov. 9-72) or finding some other solution to this very disturbing situation.

Bell Telephone Wants More

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

So the bandits of Bell are at it again. The continuing insatiable appetite of this company for hikes in the telephone rates has become a national disgrace.

Not satisfied with the grab-off they got away with last May they now threaten us with the Canadian Transport Commission to approve even further increases in rates for "increased operating costs beyond their control" by January 1st.

Having almost a complete monopoly in the telephone system in this country Bell are able to hold the general public to ransom, and when operating costs get "beyond their control" which, unfortunately, seems to be every other month.

This latest request should be rejected by the Canadian Transport Commission, and, if that body has the terms of reference to do so, they should recommend that Bell should be taken over by the people of Canada. As it is, the people have an ever-increasing investment in the company. In time now to spare them their image as "corporate bagmen."

Election Issues were Basic

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

As a defeated Conservative candidate in the federal election I am disturbed and disgusted with the reaction of some of the news media to the results.

Having knocked on hundreds of doors myself in the state positively that not once was I asked about Quebec. Over and over and over again I was asked by the two simple basic questions: "Where can I get a job?" and "How can I live on my pension?"

It was mainly the failure of the Liberal party to offer any constructive campaign proposals whatsoever on these two issues that caused the election results, not any relationship with Quebec.

For the news media to place the whole blame on Quebec is not only a disservice but is the true situation but also a gross disservice to Canada.

The Experts Say

Prepare House And Car for Snowstorms

WINNIPEG (CP) — Though no one likes to think about it, those snowed-in days are coming, and now is the time to get house and car ready to withstand storms.

The Manitoba department of agriculture has some tips to help you keep warm and fed even if you're stranded in a storm or stuck with a power failure.

Be sure you have enough heating fuel in your home at all times to carry you through three days when roads might be impassable.

Have some auxiliary heating and emergency cooking facility in case there is an electrical failure.

Have a complete supply of first-aid materials, and know how to use them.

Most winter fires are caused by overheated stoves, fireplaces, furnaces or chimneys. Be sure all your heat sources are in good condition and use them carefully.

Keep the gas tank of your car full to cold weather. A full tank cuts the risk of water condensation in the tank, and ensures that you can keep the car warm if you're stalled in snow.

Before it gets really cold, have your brakes adjusted and supplied and your exhaust system checked.

Check windshield wiper blades and be sure the defroster is working.

The car should be fitted with snow tires and you might want chains in severe ice conditions.

The battery terminals should be clean and cables tightly connected. The battery should be fully charged.

Drain and flush the car radiator. Add antifreeze and check hoses.

Add a proper grade of winter oil and have the chassis greased.

It would pay to have the car engine given a thorough tune-up, including ignition system, generator, points, timing and spark plugs.

If you travel in areas of heavy snow and sparse population or if you've a chance of getting stuck on the road, it might pay to carry a storm kit in the car.

The department recommends it include two or more blankets, matches, candles, an extra parka, socks. It should contain some high-calorie, non - perishable food, a first-aid kit, shovel, flashlight, booster cables, tow chain, fire extinguisher and catalytic heater.

If you are stuck in a storm, don't try to walk through it to find shelter. Don't overexert yourself or subject yourself to overexposure trying to push or shovel your car out if the situation is hopeless.

Your best shelter is usually the car. Run the motor and heater sparingly, leaving a downwind window open for ventilation. Exercise occasionally, and if you have passengers, don't let everyone sleep at the same time.

Leave the dome light on at night and use a flashing warning light if you have one available.

National Fame for Bellevillian

A Belleville woman has qualified as one of only three theatre archivists in Canada.

Marian M. Wilson recently graduated from a course offered in Ottawa by the Canadian Historical Society and the Public Archives of Canada in archival principles and management.

Next April she will see the book for which she did all the research reach the market. Love and Whisky, the story of the Dominion Drama Festival is the result of four years of research by Mrs. Wilson in Canada and abroad. Published by McClelland and Stewart and funded by two Canada Council research grants, the book is the first comprehensive history of theatre in Canada.

MARION WILSON

It is written by Betty Lee of Toronto, who dedicated the book to Mrs. Wilson.

In addition, on her two coast to coast trips across Canada, Mrs. Wilson tape-recorded interviews with living pioneers of the theatre, resulting in a collection that comprises the largest oral theatre history yet assembled.

Mrs. Wilson is a consultant for the Quinte Arts Council and Quinte Dance Centre and is vice-president, public relations for Theatre Canada, formerly the Dominion Drama Festival.

She has just been appointed as representative of the Belleville Branch, National Ballet Guild to the National Ballet of Canada board.

Mirror of Your Mind
by JOHN CONWELL

Do most kids hate to study music?

NO; although many of them say they do (look at the time Mother has trying to get Junior to practice his piano lessons, even when he doesn't have a ball game). Yet music may be just the scapegoat. A child frequently may unconsciously hate some member of the family. This is unthinkable for the youngsters, right? So he transfers his hatred to music—something that he can safely express hatred for without feeling guilty.

Who is safer: skeptic or sucker?

IN extreme cases, one is as bad as the other. As far as actual cash outlay is concerned, being a skeptic, of course, is usually not as expensive as being a sucker. Very often, however, the cynical skepticism can keep him from becoming involved in a worthwhile project, and that, in the long run, can prove to be just as costly as another individual's falling for a scheme that costs him dearly in actual money out of his pocket.

Can a husband love a nagging wife?

YES; and he may love her more than she loves him. In some cases, too, only a husband of a nagging wife may be sure of his love. A lot depends on the way the wife nags, and the tone of her voice. If she is insecure in her love, the wife may say to test her husband. On the other hand, a wife may be telling her husband from her tone of voice—but the actual words—that she is not really nagging but complaining about being married.

Ann Landers
Libbers Refuse Orders?

Dear Ann Landers: I think the Women's Libbers have hit ten off more than they can chew. Their problems are just beginning. I heard today that several women walked off the job because three females were asked to grease machinery, which required them to wear bibs on their backs for several hours at a stretch. Another group of women balked at filling 150-pound drums of coffee beans. They said it was a "dirty job," and refused to follow orders.

It seems to me that if women want equal pay and the same privileges that men get they should be willing to do a man's work—either that or admit they are inferior and keep their traps shut. What do you think, Ann? — M.C. Pig

Dear Pig: I think I'll keep my trap shut until I find out what really happened. There have already been some conflicting reports.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is a physician. Dedicated and conscientious. He came home tonight exhausted. It was an especially trying day.

No sooner had we seated ourselves at the dinner table when he received a telephone call from a woman who lives in our neighborhood. She's had this "tummy" pain for about three months. She decided it would be better to call him after office hours so he could run over. She didn't want to "interfere with his day."

I was so mad I could have chewed nails. So was he, but he went anyway. Can you make some comment?—M.D.'s Wife

Dear Wife: No. I'm also chewing nails.

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this letter for the mothers of daughters who are 12 to 16, look like 18 or 19 and act like 25.

At this moment a good friend of mine, a really good guy just back from Vietnam (and brighter than he should have been) is sweating out a charge of statutory rape. Some little sex kitten made him a straight-out proposition right in her own living room. She said he or Tolly were out of town so he took her up on it.

About 2 a.m. the girl's parents came home and caught them in the act. The girl yelled, "Rape!" and her father called the police. They took her to the hospital for an examination and the cops took the guy to the station.

The real villain here is not the boy or "Miss Round Heels" but the mother for allowing her 14-year-old daughter (she lied and said she was 19) to get herself up like a tramp and have free run of an empty house. I would like to see this letter published in Chicago because it seems there is more of this sort of thing in Chicago than anywhere else. Thank you. Ann.—Disgusted With It

Dear G.: I agree, the mother is to blame. Usually she's an unhappy woman who wasn't popular and hopes to get a vicarious thrill living her daughter's escapades. Such pathetic women can't walk the tightrode to grow up so they can't train them to be man traps.

As for Chicago having more of "that sort of thing" than other cities, I doubt it. My mail indicates this affliction is not a matter of geography.

Fine For Landlords

MONTREAL (CP) — Landlords who change exorbitant rents or indiscriminately evict tenants should pay fines of $500 and up, says the Quebec Federation of Tenants Associations. The federation has also asked a committee of the Quebec legislature to allow prospective tenants five days after signing, in which to cancel a lease.

Dancer Becomes Broker

LONDON (CP) — Liliana Archibald wanted to be a ballet dancer but became a historian. Now she is the first woman ever to become a Lloyd's broker.

The slim, grey-haired woman has admitted to Lloyd's—the world-famous London insurance market—in 1970 but it was only this year by decision of the annual general meeting that she was allowed to conduct business in the Underwriting Room.

Her early ballet training was cut short by the Second World War, when she was evacuated to the country. By the time peace came her late-start practice had been too long neglected for her ever to reach professional standards.

She had always been interested in history, especially 18th-century Russian history, and decided to specialize in that. Although born in London, Mrs. Archibald is of Russian ancestry. She went to the University of Geneva in 1947 and after her return did some university lecturing. She translated into English Peter the Great, by Vasili Klyuchevsky, and in 1970 the same author's The Rise of the Romanovs.

For a time she lectured in New Zealand, but on her return faced the need to earn more money. She was already fascinated by finance because her stepfather, a banker, was one of the first to support credit insurance. o undertake it he formed his own small brokerage firm.

After his death Mrs. Archibald spent six months absorbing every bit of information she could about credit insurance, with guidance from an old family friend. After that it was a case of learning by experience.

In 1958 she became a director of Credit Insurance Ltd. and in 1970 a director of Adam Brothers.

"Today," she said, "I am the insurance consultant to the Bank of London. I took after all the insurance problems involved in their building operations.

"I like doing this sort of work. Banking fascinates me and so is the illogical and messy and so it is stimulating to sort them out. At present I am working on the insurance involved in a $480-million project."

She is much involved with export insurance and she has worked out new types of contingency policies placed at Lloyd's, for unless available one is available some exports would be too risky to undertake. The amount of export credit insurance done in Britain now is bigger than that of the whole of the rest of Europe put together.

Business often takes her away, touring the United States and Europe. Back in her own office, she trains a young woman assistant.

"When one is fortunate enough to be the first woman to gain acceptance in what was formerly a men-only profession it is essential to have trained women to follow," she says. "This profession offers a chance to use both intellect and personality and the door is open now.

"In future I want it to be possible for women to be told that here indeed is a career in which they can go right to the top. I handpicked my own Oxford University graduate assistant for her fresh, clear, logical mind—and, very important, for her ability to get on well with people. She will go far."

Mrs. Archibald pays tribute to her male colleagues, both in her own office and at Lloyd's.

"Without any pressure, they have done the right thing in the right way," she said.

New Horizons Program Invites More Ideas

By DORIS CLARK

Hon. John Munro told a seminar recently that the New Horizons program is invigorating ideas. The $10,000,000 which is to be spent yearly is not just to provide things like handicraft material for bedridden retirees; it can meet other needs too. A committee of 10 people averaging 6 years of age may make representations about projects to improve things where they are.

So if 10 go-ahead people in the 60 to 70 age bracket are all fired up about a service their community needs, talk it over, write it down, and figure out how to get it going. It might be a day centre for seniors or a special counselling service. It might be a sheltered workshop or visiting service that needs staffing.

New Horizons is there to provide equipment, expenses, even a salary for some skilled person hired by the 10-person volunteer committee. They could go on over a period of three years, the greatest thought being that once a service has proved its worth, a service club or other community group may well be ready to take over.

Dear Doris: I greatly enjoyed your story about Palermo and heartily agree that it takes some doing to keep up with the changing modern world.

With five of its inhabitants growing up in our family, I feel like I am back at my mother's knee many times. Had I many hours to dwell on the startling changes in the views of young people, I might be a bundle of nerves.

However, Media Club looks after those 'many hours' and my children are grateful I am not around playing the overbearing mother ben all the time. At 14, there's nothing worse, I'm led to believe . . . that from my youngest!

The open, frank way youngsters have of expressing their feelings and thoughts these days makes up for any times in the system and I am enjoying our exchanges of opinion far more than any I had with my parents years ago. — Jean, Secretary, Media Club of Canada.

Dear Jean: Thank you. So glad to find somebody accentuating the positive!

Dear Doris: My husband hates our seven-year-old son; at least it appears to be him. I can't remember him ever saying a kind word to him. It is criticism all the time.

Today for instance, he got hollered at for tracking around outside in the snow. He was getting his boots all wet. For my part, I could have dried them. It just hurts me to see a child's enjoyment and enthusiasm destroyed.

Sonny has always had a very outgoing personality. Most people like him. Now he seems to want to fight all the time.

I don't know what to do next Doris. Today I had a long talk with my husband again, and he promised to act differently. But for how long? He doesn't understand children and there was very little love in his own family.

Words like idiot, good-for-nothing, numbskull, S.O.B. and screwball are not too pleasant to hear, especially if they are directed at a seven-year-old. There is also physical abuse like kicking, pushing him down the cement front steps, jamming his feet in the door, just to mention a few. — In The Middle.

Dear Middle: How horrible! My guess is that Pappa is in competition with Sonny. Perhaps in competition for your love. Not that you don't give it but that he is not convinced, deep down, that he is worthy of it. And the way he has bit upon for bolstering his ego is to belittle the "flesh of his flesh!"

When his jealousy gets so far as to make him push his own little boy down cement steps, it is time he was brought to realize what he is doing, in no uncertain way.

And what he is doing is ruining his boy's personality. We shouldn't be expected to handle this all on your own, which is what child care counsellors are for. You will find one in your own local child care or family agency, or mental health centre.

Quinte Schools Wow Germans

"Wunderbar!"

Bayside Secondary School sprang exclamations of praise yesterday from its first foreign visitors — four citizens of Lahr, Germany.

"This is the most beautiful school we have ever seen," each said at one time or another as the group toured the school.

They first commented on the brightness and airiness of the corridors and classrooms when they entered Georges Vanier Secondary school together with superintendent Ed. Neville and trustee Mrs. Lillian O'Connor.

Morning visitors were Adolf Kohler, Lahr city manager, Dr. Wilhelm Hodapp, principal of a modern language school, Robert Schles, principal of a classical high school and Canadian Armed Forces interpreter Capt. Hannelore Siebel. For the afternoon tour of Bayside they were joined by Walter Dettling, director of a rest-dential school for emotionally disturbed children in Lahr.

Library resource centres at Banier, Nicholson Catholic College and Bayside brought delighted "Ahs" from the visitors.

Herr Kohler gave particular attention to the buoyancy of gym floors and appeared to have no rigid for time maximum safety.

The visiting educators were amazed at the open - plan classrooms with several teachers and classes in one big room at Vanier and Bayside. They were assured the open concept worked, the short time allocated to each tour gave them no chance to stop and prove it to their own satisfaction.

The Germans went to the schools to investigate the possibilities of student exchanges. At first it seemed doubtful that many Belleville students would want to go to school in Lahr. When NCC principal Sister Mary Dorothy told them several of her students were ready to pack anytime, they asked to talk to the students.

Their doubts vanished at Bayside, when several students stopped the visiting delegation in the halls and asked where they could sign up for the student exchange.

The student exchange, original reason for the twinning of Belleville and Lahr, is still up in the air. The German educators had too little time in their brief visit to thresh out the details.

A German student would lose an entire year of academic credits if he spent a year in Canada. But a Canadian student would be given credit for every course he passed in Lahr. On the other hand, the German students would be at an advantage, because all would have at least seven years of English study behind them before they came to Canada. Few, if any, Belleville students have ever studied German, and they would be required to take all their classes in German in Lahr.

Both Sister Mary Theresa and L. D. Read of Bayside said the loss in academic credits would be more than offset by the experience the students would gain in living in another land. The Germans were quick to agree.

Exchange plans ranged from a two-month summer period, through six months, to a full school year. Both principals were in accord with a teacher exchange suggested by the Lahr delegation.

What, No Latin?

Wide Choice of Subjects Is Confusing to Visitors

They hardly had time to scratch the surface, but visiting Lahr educators were both impressed and surprised at the differences between Canadian and German education.

The Lahr educators were familiar with the Canadian comprehensive school, one with arts, science, commercial and vocational courses under the same roof. The Germans still have separate institutions for each branch of education and even divide the strictly academic course into two parts. One high school in Lahr concentrates on modern languages; the other, the classical school, offers Latin and Greek, as well as the traditional history, German, English, science and math offered at the other school. Students in each school can advance to university in every faculty.

The "modern" high school has about 1,000 students; the classical school about 300. How does a student make the choice between the two?

The German child attends primary school for four years. At about 10 or 11 he enters the high school (called a gymnasium) and spends nine years there taking secondary education.

Why the difference?

An agitated buddle of educators answered, with words like "parents" and "social class" emerging at intervals.

Walter Detling, director of a school for emotionally disturbed children in Lahr, gave some insight.

He is a Social Democrat, member of one of the four political parties in Germany. His party advocates an educational system similar to Ontario's, but he said his ideal is 20 years away.

He opposed the present system of streaming a child at 10, after four years of primary school, into an academic, a commercial or a technical institution.

All educators were baffled, as are many Canadians, by the "no Latin" requirements of Canadian universities. They bundle Peter Lee, Wafler Gasley, guidance teacher at Nicholson Catholic College, when he told them Latin is not required for entrance into medicine, law or the priesthood. They checked again with principal L. D. Read at Bayside and were again bewildered at his concurrence with Father Lee.

There was envy on both sides.

The Germans were obviously impressed by the bright, airy and cheerful Belleville schools and regretted not having color pictures to take home to Lahr.

Mr. Read envied Herr Detling his psychological clinic for 132 students to about 90 staff members.

By contrast in the academic high school in Lahr, each class comprises about 36 students. At Bayside the class size is about 22 or 23 students.

Canadian and German educators were delighted to learn that each system extends to grade 13 and in both systems students take an equal number of subjects each year.

The free style, so - called "cafeteria style" of selection of subjects in Ontario schools was new to the Germans, but they went away armed with courses of study from both Nicholson and Bayside.

Chief regret on both sides was the length of time to fully explore each others' methods and learn from each others' successes and failures.

Drop-in Centre Is Not for Rent

Belleville's senior citizen drop-in centre at the recreation building on Pinnacle Street should be reserved for senior citizen use and not rented out for other purposes.

That was the decision Tuesday by the city Recreation-Arena Committee which turned down the request of a local fraternal organization for one day a week use of the Pinnacle Street facility.

The point taken was that if the facility was rented out to one outside organization there would be no justification for refusing other requests.

The committee decided against any use of the OSD swimming pool for the balance of the year.

Committee member Joe Cox recommended city use of the pool for the month of December but this drew objection from Alderman Paul Russell, who suggested programming activities for too much Christmas - oriented activity.

Instead, the student body at Quinte Secondary School will be given the opportunity of making arrangements for use of the OSD pool.

During the past summer the city recreation department carried out an activity program at the pool.

Committee members voted to continue this winter the ski lesson program carried out last year at the Batawa Ski Club slope, south of Frankford.

Much of the time at Tuesday's committee meeting was taken up with a review of recreational programs activities carried out during the past year.

Purpose of the review was to determine whether certain aspects of programming should be increased or stepped up for next years.

All Because Of Cough Drop

A bizarre series of mishaps on North Front Street Tuesday night sent four people to hospital and resulted in $2,750 damage.

Irwin Maxwell Doyle of Prince Albert, Ont. was southbound on North Front at 7:40 p.m. when he began to choke on a cough drop and lost control of his car, he told the police. The vehicle travelled 65 feet along the sidewalk before crashing into a wooden hydro pole on the west side of the road.

Doyle, his wife Elma Clara and their daughter Geri-Lee, all suffered cuts and bruises. They were taken to Belleville General Hospital where they were treated and released.

Constable Sam Morgan of city police, investigating the accident, said in the road directing traffic when a truck driven by Doyle was brought down by the Doyle vehicle.

The truck dragged the wires, toppling a nearby light standard which fell and damaged a Mercury owned by Mrs. Morgan. He complained of dizziness and was taken to BGH for treatment. He was later released but will be off work for the rest of the week.

Also torn down by the truck's impact were hydro connections to a house at 41 North Front, as well as a portion of the house itself. Debris from the wall fell on two cars parked in an adjacent lot. Damage to the cars and house totals $900.

Police are still looking for the truck driver.

The Doyle car suffered $1,-600 damage. Pole by hydro pole and light will cost $450 to replace.

Language Lab

German visitors at Bayside Secondary School yesterday were interested in the teaching aids used in the language department. "The wireless" record player (the wiring is sewn into the carpet) intrigued Dr. Wilhelm Hodapp, (centre), a high school principal in Lahr. With him are student Jo-Anne Hyatt and teacher Roy Ingram, who assisted with interpreting duties yesterday.

Clinical Analysis

G. W. Laird Morton of Tweed Steel Works Ltd., (left), discusses his company's marketing position with David Eggleston, director of marketing for a Toronto firm and consultant at yesterday's product development clinic in Belleville. The clinic, sponsored by the Ontario Ministry of Industry and Tourism, drew 35 businessmen from Trenton through to Kingston.

Clinic Offers Advice To Quinte Businesses

Municipalities must devote more attention to existing industries, not just to luring new ones — that is the advice of Lloyd Collins, industrial development officer for the Ontario ministry of industry and tourism.

Collins, who organized yesterday's product development clinic for small businesses held at the Four Seasons Hotel, said in an interview, "attention must be given existing industries . . . politicians want to get a new smokestack. That is where the glamor is."

He said that in the industry and tourism ministry's industrial development branch only 15 specialists out of about 60 are working on problems related to securing new industry, the rest are delving into the needs of the province's present industries.

And it was to help the existing industries and businesses of Eastern Ontario that Tuesday's Belleville clinic was held.

Representatives of 35 firms from Trenton to Kingston took advantage of the free clinics with four business consultants.

On hand were David Eggleston, marketing director for Kates, Peat and Marwick Co.; Frank Dudas, industrial design consultant with Dudas Kuypers Johansen Ltd.; William Smith, technical consultant for Ontario Development Corp. and William Batt, manufacturing systems consultant for the Thorne Group, each giving private counselling sessions in their respective specialties of marketing, industrial design, finance and manufacturing.

Mr. Collins said the ministry of industry and tourism has been sponsoring product development clinics to make industries aware of consulting services they may wish to use.

"Often the businessmen does not know what is available to him," he said, adding some industrial representatives attending the clinics come away knowing they can use the special skills of consultants.

If they do not, he added, they usually appreciate discussing their business situations with knowledgeable observers who give them an outside view.

He indicated that he feels one of the strengths of the small businessman is his self-sufficiency but, at times, it is useful to supplement the resources of small business with

CNIB Canvass Shows Drop

$5,000 in Guns Loot in Madoc

MADOC (Special) — Ontario Provincial Police here are pressing their investigation of a weekend robbery of Ray's Sports Shop on the main intersection of this village.

Thieves broke a glass door on the street side of the store to enter and remove $2,000 worth of guns. Some ammunition was also taken. The robbery took place some time between store closing Nov. 10 and 8 a.m. Nov. 11.

City Police Capture Escaper

A prisoner who disappeared from Landry Crossing Correctional Institute more than a month ago, was captured by city police in downtown Belleville Tuesday.

The prisoner, Jack Edward Garreau, was serving a five-year sentence for fraud when he failed to return to the Penitentiary on a pass Oct. 5.

Police were investigating a fraud charge at Rachael's Ladies Wear when store employees spotted a man they believed to be Garreau who resembled the person passing bad cheques. The man identified himself as Jack Reid but police later determined he was really Garreau.

He has been charged with one count of fraud and escaping lawful custody. More fraud charges are pending.

Garreau told police he worked in Kingston following his escape from Landry. He has been in Belleville since the end of October, working part of the time as a cook.

Grade Eights of Today and Long Ago

Three men dropped into Queen Alexandra School yesterday after graduating from it, in one case, more than 50 years ago. The three gentlemen were invited by a teacher to participate in the 60th birthday celebration of the school. Centre is Oliver Owen, who began his education in 1912, charter year for the school. Seated left is John Hall, who attended the school in 1933 and (right) is Allan Smith who attended in 1928. All three gentlemen agreed teachers were more lenient and more information was available to students now than in their time.

Aussie Hijacker Ends in Hospital

ALICE SPRINGS, Australia (Reuter) — An armed hijacker and a policeman were wounded today as Australia's first case of air piracy ended in a running gun duel at Alice Springs airport.

A hospital spokesman said the policeman, reported to be shot in the back and legs by the hijacker as he tried to wrestle away a sawed-off shotgun, was in serious condition.

The hijacker was also in hospital with gunshot wounds.

The gun duel brought to a close a drama in which the hijacker had held 33 persons hostage aboard an Ansett Airlines Fokker Friendship aircraft on the ground while he negotiated for a light plane and a parachute.

It was while the hijacker was putting on a parachute and preparing to board a light plane at this remote airport in the central Australian desert that police tried to seize him, touching off the gunbattle.

The hijacker ran into the bush surrounding the airport but was seized shortly afterward.

The hijacker commandeered the aircraft as it was preparing to land at Alice Springs after a flight from Adelaide 1,000 miles to the south. Aboard the plane were 34 passengers and four crew members.

He did not demand money.

The hijacker burst into the cockpit flashing a gun and demanding that he be given a parachute.

When told none was available, he ordered the pilot to head at Alice Springs as scheduled and demanded a parachute and a light plane to take him to safety.

He freed 15 women and children among the 38 people on the plane while he waited for airport authorities to meet his demands.

Before the commandeered aircraft landed, the hijacker was told that at Alice Springs there was little chance of getting a light plane with a 1,000-mile range, as he had demanded nor was a parachute available.

When the Fokker landed and the 15 women and children were allowed off, the hijacker was offered a Cessna-172 with a range of 600 miles and his old parachute.

At first the man, who kept one of two stewardesses near him throughout, rejected the offer but he later changed his mind.

He disembarked and was pulling on the parachute when the policeman tried to seize him.

Dow Jones Above 1000

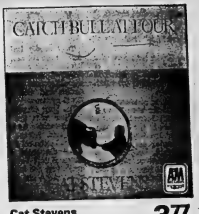
In the aftermath, Wall Streeters are asking themselves what the long - term consequences would be.



"Do investors who have been waiting for this historic level now start selling off and taking profits, or does the event increase investor enthusiasm?" asked Robert Johnson of Paine, Webber, Jackson and Curtis.

Questions And Answers

By The Ontario Motor League

QUESTION: In planning a winter vacation motor trip we wonder when one may expect to find off-season hotel and motel rates in effect in Florida, California, Arizona and Mexico.

ANSWER: Low rates are in effect in Florida from April until mid-December. In places like the Miami Beach and Fort Lauderdale prices are almost doubled after that time. Motels around Daytona Beach and Disneyworld are busy in summer,as more people are taking their children there during the holidays. The climate is cooler there than in Miami and the daily motel rates are usually only about $10. cheaper during the period from late spring to December.

In Arizona and California three seasons are observed by most hotels and motels. Summer rates, in effect from June through September, run 30 to 50 per cent less than in winter. Fall rates are priced about half way between. For some hotels, peak season starts in mid-December. For others, it may be as late as February 1st.

Heavy summer rains begin tapering off in Mexico in October and by November, and for the rest of the winter until the end of April, you should get sunny weather. Off-season rates prevail from May through mid-November. Mexico City itself does not go in for off-season rates.

QUESTION: When is the Apollo 17 going to be launched in Florida and where would be the best nearby place from which to watch it?

ANSWER: The scheduled early December flight of Apollo 17 will be the first night-time launching of a moon rocket, and if you are in Florida at this time, you can take in this spectacular sight. Take-off time is set for 9:38 p.m., well after dark, so that the full effect of the blast-off should be evident. Of course, there could be delays.

On launch date, the Kennedy Space Centre, which is six miles east of U.S. 1, south of Titusville, Fla., will be closed for the day. But on every other day of the year, except Christmas day, it is open from 8 a.m. until dark. Many visitors heading for the Space Centre, are confused by the Florida highway signs which refer to Cape Kennedy. If you follow them you will find yourself miles away from the Space Centre, besides having to pay unnecessary tolls. So be sure to follow only the Kennedy Space Centre signs or the small road signs that have the blue NASA logo on a yellow background with the words "Space Centre" in black.

After crossing the NASA causeway which extends eastward to Merritt Island across the Indian River from U.S.1, you will reach the Visitors Information Centre. It serves as a museum of astronautics and houses the spacecraft from the Apollo 7, Gemini 9 and the first Mercury flights. There are also launch vehicles on display. Admission to the Space Centre is free. The bus tour of the area costs $2.50 for adults, $1.25 for those in the 12-18 year-old bracket and 50 cents for children under 12, and provides a driver-guide explanation of the history of the region from the time it was wilderness to present development as North American's only Spaceport.

In the west building, space movies are shown and talks on various phases of the space program are presented. These are very informative and entertaining and mainly concern the human aspects of space travel.

The Apollo launch tower is a huge, bronze atop a concrete mound. Visitors are allowed to go inside the building and gaze upwards hundreds of feet to the roof.

On the Apollo 17 launch day, all of Merritt Island will be closed to visitors but there are several places where you will be able to get an excellent view. One of the best is along the western shore of the Indian River at Titusville, and along the causeway on Highway 405 north of there. The Bennett Memorial Causeway, where it crosses the Banana River, and particularly on the embankments around the Turning Basin, are the best of all as viewing points.

At the final count - down, the tension builds up inadvertibly, and when ignition takes place, it is a thrill without equal as, with a brilliant flash of flame, followed by the deafening, throbbing burst of sound, the rocket slowly and majestically begins to lift off the pad.

This is one of the most interesting places to visit in Florida, and, at the same time, one of the least expensive.

Literacy Climbing In Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Brazil's literacy rate is climbing, thanks in what the government bills as the world's biggest crash course in reading and writing for adults.

Seventy-two per cent of those over 15 in this vast South American country of 100 million people now can read and write, the education ministry has announced. In 1940, Brazil's literacy rate was 44 per cent.

Education in general has improved in Brazil in recent decades. But the recent upward spurt in literacy is due mainly to a nationwide program for adults called MOBRAL. Since its start two years ago, MOBRAL claims to have taught more than two million adults to read and write, but total adult rise to 7.2 million by 1974, officials say.

MOBRAL is doubly successful in that it uses hardly any money from federal, state or local budgets. Most of its funds —MOBRAL will spend $38 million in 1972—come from the weekly national soccer lottery. Another chunk comes from private corporations, which can earmark one per cent of their federal income tax each year to the program.

Canadian Children's Books For Young Canada's Book Week

MARY OF MIZE II — Ann Blades. This delightful book for younger children has won the Canadian Library Association prize as best published children's book published in 1971. It is the story of a little Mennonite girl living eighteen miles off the Alaska Highway. There are full page illustrations done in soft glowing colors.

ATUSH INLET — Fred Ford. Two teen-aged boys spend a year with their aunt and uncle at Atush Inlet on the Northern coast of British Columbia. There they learn to live in the wild, to fish, and are trapped by grizzly bears. The author spent seven years on the British Columbia coast, and knows the area well.

OUR EARTH IN CONTINUOUS CHANGE — David M. Baird. Older children will be interested in this very readable introduction to geology written by a well known Canadian geologist. The book is profusely illustrated with photographs, both colored and black and white.

RED HORSE OF THE WEST — Isabel M. Reckie. There are tense days during the Riel Rebellion. When twelve-year-old Donald Anderson discovers his horse has been stolen, he begins to search, and finds himself in the midst of adventure.

TOYS FROM THE SKY — Lynn Cook. In her first picture book this popular Canadian author turns to Labrador. There the Eskimo children are awaiting December and the big silver bird bearing gifts from the sky.

RIVER OF STARS — Jean MacKenzie. An exciting adventure story of a fifteen year old Indian boy fishing off the coast of British Columbia. After Andy's father is injured in an accident, the boy decides to operate the fishing boat in his place. His difficulties in the white man's world are many, but Andy is a boy of great determination.

MAPLE SYRUP — R. D. Lawrence. Here is a book to remember for early spring, when the sap is running. The author tells us the true story of his experiences operating a maple syrup farm. The book is well illustrated with a section of photographs and concludes with a number of recipes using maple syrup.

SECRET IN THE STALAKUM WILD — Christie Harris. Fantasy set in the mountains of British Columbia. A young girl becomes interested in the Indian legends of the Stalakum spirits. Soon she is plunged into a mysterious world, searching for a hidden treasure. A moving story, coupled with a plea for conservation.

FROM ANNA—Jean Little. Set in depression times, this is the story of Anna, emigrating with her family from Germany to Canada. No one had realized that Anna had a sight problem. Now, suddenly, she had glasses and went to a special sight saving class. Miss Little's own experience with blindness lends authenticity to the story.

THE STANLY SAUCER — Marsie Klein. Stanley was a bright green turtle who lived on the shores of Lake Nipissing. One of Canada's greatest hockey fans, Stanley finally has a chance to visit Maple Leaf Gardens and watch a hockey game.

Success Difficult To Handle

NEW YORK (AP) — Japan, whose economy continues to grow at the fastest rate of any major industrial country, is finding that success sometimes is as hard to handle as failure.

With its gross national product expanding at more than 10 per cent a year since the mid-1950s, compared with three to six per cent for most other countries, the Japanese are achieving domestic prosperity abroad.

The expansion has been enhanced greatly by the enthusiasm with which the Japanese send their goods to the far corners of the earth, outselling and underselling foreigners.

But that propensity for exporting has not been matched by a comparable interest in the products and investments of foreigners. It is considerably more difficult to sell to the Japanese than it is to buy from them.

The result is an enormous trade surplus and an export momentum that the Japanese seem unable to stop. And if the situation isn't corrected, the market place itself might act to force a yen revaluation.

It might occur this way: So long as the trade surpluses continue the yen remains strong and desirable. You don't have to take Japan's word for it: those surpluses testify to it. They amount to 10Us.

Other countries become upset at the situation. They insist that Japan open its markets to their goods to help redress the imbalance. And they insist that Japan artificially restrict exports.

Otherwise, they say, they will insist that Japan recognize what the market is telling the world, that the yen is really worth more than its face value. They might insist that a greater value be declared for it.

A revaluation would make Japanese goods more expensive abroad and, depending upon the method in which the revaluation is carried out, tend to make foreign goods less expensive to Japan. Thus, the imbalance would tend to diminish.

Prior to this, however, the speculators will be active. Sensing a revaluation, they begin buying yen, hoping to pocket the difference. And in buying yen they put upward pressure on the price of the yen.

To stop this activity, which might disrupt their domestic economy and securities markets, the Japanese might have to bow to realities and raise the price.

Bits and pieces of the scenario already are shaping up. The Bank of Japan says Morgan Guaranty Trust was obliged to absorb $1.1 billion from yen buyers. This doesn't mean that a revaluation is inevitable, however. The Japanese revalued by 16 per cent last December and aren't anxious to do so twice in a year.

Smallpox End Sought In 2 Years

GENEVA (Reuter)—The final phase is under way in a world - wide campaign to wipe the killer disease of smallpox from the face of the earth. The world target is zero cases within two years.

When the campaign was launched five years ago by the Geneva-based World Health Organization (WHO) there were 2,500,000 smallpox cases a year spread over 42 countries.

Today, that total is down by 80 per cent to fewer than 300,000 cases in 16 countries.

By 1974 it is hoped the world will be completely free fromm smallpox, a disease that over the centuries has brought death or disfigurement to millions.

Its victims have included royalty as well as the common men. The mummy of pharaoh Ramses V indicates that he died of smallpox 3,000 years ago. Queen Mary II of England and King Louis XV of France died of it too.

Smallpox epidemics used to sweep the cities of Europe regularly, killing 20 to 40 per cent of those who caught it.

Exploration and settlement of the New World brought smallpox to the Americas in the 16th century, devastating entire Indian tribes and killing 3,500,000 people in Mexico.

It was not until the late 18th century that an English country doctor, Edward Jenner, developed a smallpox vaccine that eventually made it possible to bring the disease under control.

By the 1950s smallpox had been eliminated from Europe and North America through vaccination and brought under control in many other countries.

It remains a problem now in only seven countries of Asia and Africa—India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Afghanistan, Nepal, Ethiopia and Sudan.

New Stutz For Sale At $27,500

DETROIT (AP) — If you have to ask about financing, insurance rates, or even gas mileage, you can't afford a Stutz Blackhawk II.

But officials of Stutz Motorcar of America, Inc., which started in 1968, are happy only a few can afford $27,500 for one of the runabouts.

Otherwise it would lose its snob appeal.

Blackhawk II is what the company says a Blackhawk would look like today if it hadn't folded in 1929.

The Stutz Blackhawk, along with its more common cousin, the Stutz Bearcat, was a Depression-era victim along with other automotive notables such as the Graham-Paige, Chandler, Jewett, Marmon, Moon-Diana, and Star.

Company President James O'Donnell is a New York investor who financed the old car buffs who wanted to recreate the Blackhawk as a modern, limited production luxury car.

So far the company's plant in Turin, Italy, has made 47, and O'Donnell said if he did not get another order for a year the plant would be turning out the 100-or-so backlogged orders.

The Blackhawk II is actually a hand-crafted body, with leather seats, portable backseat, DAR, AM-FM stereo, air conditioning and optional mink floor mats—on a GM chassis powered by a 455-cubic-inch engine like the ones in the large Pontiacs.

In fact, except for the hand-crafted parts, Blackhawk II uses GM parts exclusively.

When you get your Blackhawk II—after at least a four-month wait, you're given a set of solid gold keys and a dashboard plaque which proclaims that the car was handcrafted especially for you.

Tough Foil May Save Lost at Sea

BOURNE, Mass. (AP) — A tough, shiny foil for life rafts and foul weather gear has been developed by a Bourne scientist who says it increases the chances of people being found at sea.

The tissue-thin coppery material shines brilliantly in daylight and may be spotted several miles away with the naked eye and at least 17 miles away on radar, says its inventor, Robert J. Parchard.

"It is my conviction that search and rescue teams were overlooking the value of human eyesight in trying to locate objects or people, at sea or on land," said Parchard, a retired research associate for a drug firm.

"I was conscious of the folly involved in attempting to locate an aircraft or people down in the woods with only electronic means of finding them," he said.

After lost people are finally found, he said, they "unanimously report they have seen all kinds of aircraft and ships, but nobody could see them."

His material, which has been on the market for about two months, is made of 25-gauge metallized polyester film backed by nylon mesh.

It is lightweight, waterproof and so thin a self-inflatable life raft weighs about three pounds and will fold into a package about half the size of a shoebox.

Concert Hall

LONDON (CP) — The party of the century has been planned by business man Roger Haywood—he's hired the Royal Albert Hall for a New Year's Eve rave-up in 1999. If he and his friends are a little breathless when they dance around the vast auditorium, it will be understandable; they will all be in their 60s. "It will be a marvellous place to welcome in the new century," Haywood said. He has no idea of the cost. The present price for an evening's booking is $1,800 (about $3,600).

Rosko Currency

LONDON (CP) — A stunt by zany British disc jockey Emperor Rosko backfired when thousands of imitation $1 notes went into circulation as celebrity currency. "I can't believe it," said Rosko who distributed the notes at public appearances. "The notes have a picture of me on each one with the words 'Bank of Rosko' printed on the back. Apparently they have been passed in dark places like nightclubs." Police asked him to stop the stunt.

Mitchell Puts Intell on Hockey Carpet

Constellation's Ron Mitchell pulled his team into a 4-4 win over The Intelligencer last night with 2:15 left in the third period. Not satisfied with a single, Mitchell lamented Constellation's victory with his second of the game with a rebuttal left in the game.

Besides Mitchell's tallies in Gas House hockey action Terry Pope of the Bob Tomaso-Terry-Pope-Norm Pope forward line played a solid game. Terry Pope managed two for the carpetmen. Other Constellation tallies came from Dominic Lendzi and Tomaso.

Intelligencer's Gary Rutherford scored the prettiest goal in the game. Rutherford stick-handled along the red line on Constellation goalie Rick Murdoff's left, body parallel to the ice, stick and puck ahead. As Rutherford's stick touched the crease, he backhanded the puck past Murdoff's glove side for Intell's only third period goal.

Terry Hiddleston, Dennis Baragar, and Sonny Farrell netted the other Intell tallies.

In the second Gas House league contest, Hospital General Last winter, Ealey said he was "a little disgusted and disappointed" at being passed over in the National Football League draft. He had been a main cog in Toledo's 35-game winning streak that had stretched over three years.

"I think my stating that I would only play quarterback could have resulted in me getting drafted a little later, but not in them bypassing me completely."

Ealey hadn't lost a football game since Grade 9, but he left in his first appearance with Hamilton on Aug. 8, 1972, when British Columbia Lions of the Western Conference won 19-17.

In that game, Ealey went at halftime, replacing Gabler. He moved the team and despite the fact that they lost, coach Jerry Williams said, "He's going to be a good one."

Ealey was at the helm all the way three days later when the B.C. Edmonton Eskimos triumphed in the last three minutes, 30-27. He passed for three touchdowns and ran for another.

Defeat again, Aug. 19 at home to Montreal Alouettes, who won at 25-23 in the last minute. Ealey had completed 16 of 34 passes for 238 yards in a losing cause.

At that point—Gabler had been the opener against Saskatchewan Roughriders—Hamilton was 1-3. Ealey led them 19 consecutive victories the rest of the way for a season record of 11-3.

Ealey is not the first black quarterback to make it in Canada.

Sandy Stephens came out of the University of Minnesota in the early 60 and was successful with Alouettes and Argonauts before a car accident ended his career.

In the late 1960s, Carroll Williams, a frail, running quarterback, from Xavier University in Cincinnati, played for three years with Alouettes and Lions.

Twenty years ago, Bernie Custis from Syracuse University and Argonauts was a good one playing quarterback and halfback with Hamilton.

There were one or two others of lesser brilliance—Wilburn Hollis from the University of Iowa who tried out with Edmonton 10 or 15 years ago; John Henry Jackson who played briefly with the Argos in the mid 1960s before going down to the Continental League.

Jim Stillwagon, outstanding lineman from Ohio State now with Toronto Argonauts, says of Ealey:

"He's more calm than he was at the start of the season. He knows where he's going."

Al Brenner, defensive back who joined Hamilton from Michigan State and New York Giants, has been a pro for four years. This season he intercepted 15 passes, a CFL record.

"I could intercept passes off a Joe Theismann every day," Brenner says. "But in practice, Ealey makes me look stupid. Every time I try to guess against him, I'm wrong."

Intelligencer Sports

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1972

Taylor Down But Not Out

Referee Don Gavey had his work cut out for him last night when OMHA Western Tire juvenile Dave Taylor (on bottom) and Trenton juvenile all-star Roger Duek started a fight in the closing minutes of a 4-4 hockey match. Trenton's Jim Baker is being held back by a fellow team mate. Jim Richardson of the Ti remen netted a hat trick for himself, while the other Belleville tally came from Grant Goegan.

Sports Volunteers Honored

The Belleville Minor Sports Executive Council has decided to hold its first Annual Minor Sports banquet and Dance at the Oddfellows Hall December the first.

According to Bochnek, secretary of the BMSA, the banquet will be held "in recognition of the immense work done for youngsters in this city.

"There's got to be a myriad of women, besides the 700 or so men, involved in minor sports, who are never recognized. This banquet and dance will give them an opportunity to go out with their husbands who are always so involved in minor sports," said Bochnek.

Of the 300 possible guests at the Oddfellows Hall, nine of them will be Volunteers of the Year. Each of these individuals will be nominated by the executives of the various minor sport executives. From these volunteers of their time and energies to minor sports, will be chosen a Volunteer of the Year.

Lorne Williams, director of the Recreation Department, and Lloyd Syer, director of the Parks Board at City Hall have been invited by the BMSA executive to attend.

"Without these two men, we'd have to close up minor sports in Belleville," said Cy Bochnek, "and we'd like to show our appreciation to them."

Countries Can Make Bids For Winter Olympics

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — National Olympic committees were told today to submit new bids by Jan. 15 for the 1976 Winter Games following Denver's withdrawal.

This was announced by the International Olympic Committee after IOC president Lord Killanin was formally notified of the withdrawal by the Denver organizers.

Information directo Monique Berlioux said formal notification of Denver's withdrawal came in a cable received today from Carl de Temple, president of the Denver organizing committee.

"In view of this, it will be therefore necessary to seek fresh invitations to the Games and circulars have been prepared for all national Olympic committees for replies by Jan. 15, 1973," Mrs. Berlioux said.

A U.S. court order had "delayed until Monday the notification prompted by the Nov. 7 Colorado referendum against funding the games. A citizens' committee trying to keep the games in Denver had obtained the restraining order, and Harry Akin, a lawyer for the committee, outlined its position in a meeting with Lord Killanin Monday.

Vancouver, which originally bid for the 1976 winter Games but lost out to Denver, still wants the Games. Montreal already has the 1976 Summer Games.

Ealey Draws Raves From CFL Veterans

HAMILTON (CP) — "People ask me how it feels to be successful black quarterback," says Chuck Ealey.

"I never know how to answer them. I'd much rather they ask me how it feels to be a successful quarterback."

Ealey, 6-foot-1 and 193 pounds, came scrambling out of the University of Toledo this season, took the first-string quarterback job away from journeyman veteran Wally Gabler and led Hamilton Tiger-Cats to the Eastern Football Conference title.

"He's unreal," Marv Luster, defensive leader for Toronto Argonauts. "He's the best I've seen during my 12 years up here."

Garney Henley, two-way veteran and captain of the Ticats, says:

"He stands with the very few who managed to take over right out of college, Joe Namath and Joe Theismann were among those who did."

The 23-year-old from Portsmouth, Ohio, comes off almost too good to be true in the eyes of team-mates, friends and opponents. But he's quiet about his own accomplishments.

"I don't open up and tell people I've just met about myself even though I think I can talk to anyone. One of the things I was aiming for, I can talk about it because I've done it now, was to try to become a starting quarterback with this team."

The next time he starts will be this Saturday, against Ottawa Rough Riders in the first game of the two-game, total-point series for the Eastern Conference playoff title. Second game of the final is Nov. 26. Winner of the series meets the Western Conference survivor here in the Grey Cup game Dec. 3.

Here's a new-style ton of coal.

That's a pellet of uranium dioxide, the raw fuel for Hydro's nuclear power stations. It will produce as much heat as a ton of coal — and there you have the main reason for Hydro's nuclear power program.

A nuclear reactor is an extremely efficient way of producing the heat needed to generate electricity. The cost of generating power the nuclear way is expected to be less than in fuel-burning plants, and should decrease as more and bigger nuclear stations are built. There are other advantages too.

An environmental advantage — the only emission from a nuclear power station that has any appreciable effect on the environment is the water used for cooling, returned cleaner and warmer into the adjacent lake. Scientific tests are constantly being conducted to be sure that this effect is in no way detrimental to our water resources.

An economic advantage — while Ontario has no adequate deposits of coal, or oil, or gas, there is an abundance of natural uranium.

And a technical advantage. The low, stable, fuel costs of the nuclear system make it an ideal "base-load" power source — working continuously at peak capacity, for maximum efficiency.

The success of Hydro's nuclear program offers high promise for the future. It's another way of ensuring that Ontario will always have a clean, economical, source of power, to meet the needs of strong economic growth and continuing improvement in the quality of life.

Hi-Jack at Frontenac?

KINGSTON (Special) — Frontenac Downs will have its own hi-jacking problem tonight, when the featured ninth race gets under way.

Six pacers will be attempting to command Air Line, the latest addition to the Kingston track's card. Air Line's a preferred pacer, is owned by Earl Lake and has spent the season racing at Rideau-Carleton.

His main opposition is expected to come from Mighty Flyer with John Renaud in the sulky and Dandy Don, who will be driven by dash leader Hugh Wemp.

Lake, who will be driving Air Line has enjoyed great success at Frontenac behind such horses as Earlylakes John and Canadien Killean.

Post time for tonight's races will be 7:45 p.m.

Argos After Canadian Talent

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts, one of the flops of the 1971 Canadian Football League, are busy looking at 1973, with the emphasis on finding Canadian talent.

Greg Barton, a high-paid quarterback cut by the Argos who have to pay him for two more years anyway, is doing most of the looking.

"Greg's been on the road doing a breakdown of all Canadian boys in CIAU colleges and he's visiting Canadian colleges and doing a breakdown there," said general manager John Barrow.

We have to know what we have down there and we have to know what other Canadian teams have down there, too."

He said his biggest concern is "to build up our Canadian strength."

This year the CFL draft will, for the first time, include Canadians at United States schools. Previously, such players automatically belonged to the club which had territorial rights in the area of the player's residence.

Canucks Officials Face Theft Charge

VANCOUVER (CP) — Thomas Scallen and Lyman Walters, top management officials of Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League, were committed for trial Tuesday on charges of theft and issuing a false prospectus.

Scallen is president and Walters vice-president of Medical Investment Corp., Ltd., of Minneapolis, which controls the Canucks through a 10-per-cent holding in Northwest Sports Enterprises Ltd., immediate parent company of the Canucks. Both hold similar positions with Northwest Sports.

Scallen was committed for trial on a charge of theft of $3 million by converting the money from Northwest Sports to Medical, and on a charge of issuing a false prospectus to induce the public to purchase shares in Northwest Sports.

Walters was committed for trial on a charge of issuing a false prospectus.

Scallen and Walters both elected trial by judge and jury when they appeared before provincial court Judge David Mostyn Sept. 18. Judge Moffett ordered that evidence taken at the preliminary hearing not be published.

They were charged Feb. 22 after an investigation by the British Columbia Securities Commission. Results of the investigation were turned over to Vancouver lawyer Ray Parts by the then attorney-general, Leslie Peterson, in October, 1971.

The preliminary hearing was long delayed, with the defence winning a series of adjournments before the hearing finally began. The adjournments were protested by Mr. Parts.

No date for a trial has been set.

Russia Series Set For '73-74

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Hockey League is planning a 10-game series with the Russians to be played in the middle of the 1973-74 season, Phil. president Clarence Campbell said Tuesday.

The series would see a Russian hockey team play against regular NHL teams with six games in North America, two in Moscow and two in Leningrad, Campbell said in an interview.

Details of the series, such as how many games each NHL team involved would play, have not been worked out.

Campbell said current plans call for the NHL to decide which teams would play the Russians and build the regular season schedule around the special series.

Campbell said there are plans for a two-day rest between each game in the series rather than the one-day rest used in the series against the Russian national team last September.

Team Canada, made up of players from NHL teams, repeated on a 4-3-1 edge in games over the Russians in the eight-game September series.

Habs Surpass Bowman's Hopes

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

You'd think Scotty Bowman had it all figured out at the start of the year.

"I think we've had a good training camp and we're very pleased with most of our rookies," the Montreal Canadiens coach remarked of his club's chances in the forthcoming National Hockey League season. "With the mixture we should be a contender."

The Canadiens aren't just having a "good" season, they're dominating the NHL and Tuesday night's 7-2 victory over New York Islanders moved them seven points atop the East Division ahead of New York Rangers.

The Montrealers have lost just once while winning 13 of 18 games.

Elsewhere Tuesday, Minnesota North Stars beat Los Angeles 4-1 to continue their unbeaten string over the NHL club that covers the last four seasons and Vancouver Canucks came from a three-goal deficit to tie Detroit Red Wings 3-3.

Atlanta Flames, who had somewhat hazardous landing at Toronto International Airport, meet the Maple Leafs tonight. In other games, Philadelphia Flyers, are at New York Rangers, Detroit is in Oakland against California Golden Seals, Buffalo Sabres visit Los Angeles and Pittsburgh Penguins entertain Minnesota.

The Canadiens have been getting key games from several players to date, but their big shooter is Jacques Lemaire, a surprise in that he is one regular who didn't perform impressively in the pre-season camp.

Hawks Still Hope To Bar Hull

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League said Tuesday they would continue efforts to prevent former Hawk superstar Bobby Hull from playing for Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association.

A Black Hawk lawyer, Seymour Scheier, said the NHL club's effort to renew a restraining order against Hull's play in the WHA must wait until Nov. 20.

That is the date set by a Philadelphia federal judge last week requiring a $2.5-million surety bond be posted by the WHA in his ruling granting a temporary injunction barring the NHL from enforcing its reserve clause.

That ruling permitted Hull to perform for the Jets under a multi-million dollar contract.

Scheier said the Black Hawks asked circuit court Judge Francis T. Delaney Monday to renew restraining order against Hull.

"Judge Delaney said he won't do anything until he finds out whether the WHA bond is posted," said Scheier. "If the bond is posted, then there is no his 44th career shutout at 11:45 further case in Chicago."

Lemaire scored his 15th goal of the season to give Montreal a 5-3 lead and Marc Tardif and Frank Mahovlich finished the scoring for the Canadiens, who had key games from several players to date, but their big shooter is Jacques Lemaire, a surprise in that he is one regular who didn't perform impressively in the pre-season camp.

The Canadiens opened a 3-1 lead before veteran Ron Stewart, acquired earlier in the day from their cross-town rivals, the Rangers, scored on a power-play to bring the Islanders to within one.

First period goals by Dancy Grant, Murray Oliver and J. P. Parise propelled the North Stars into a 3-0 lead at Minneapolis and they were ahead 4-1 before Ralph Backstrom ended Gump Worsley's bid for of the third period.

Ti-Cat Top Rookie

HAMILTON (CP) — Bob Richardson, Hamilton Tiger-Cat linebacker, today was named Canadian Rookie of the Year in the Eastern Football Conference.

The announcement, by EFC secretary Frank Gibson, also disclosed that Ticat veteran Garney Henley is the 1972 recipient of the Jeff Russel Memorial Trophy.

The two players will be in action Saturday at Ottawa where the Ticats meet the Rough Riders in the first of a two-game, total-point final starting at 2 p.m. EST.

The sudden-death Western final at Winnipeg, between the Blue Bombers and Saskatchewan Roughriders, is set for 3 p.m. EST Sunday.

The eastern game will be carried nationally on the CBV out-work while CBC-TV will handle the western game nationally.

Richardson, a 6-foot-5, 250-pounder, was employed at tackle and centre during Hamilton's training camp but became a regular slotback for the final nine games with Good Christian's injury.

The Hamilton native, who earned his football letter at Iowa State University, was frequently flanked wide of Hamilton's game plans and caught 15 passes for 251 yards and one touchdown.

NBA Stars Sparkle

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rick Barry, Jerry West and Wali Frazier are three of the superstars in the National Basketball Association paid super salaries to break open games.

And that's exactly what they did Tuesday night.

Barry sparked a fourth-period rally to help golden State Warriors defeat Atlanta Hawks 114-105.

West poured in 15 of his 28 points in the last period as Los Angeles Lakers trimmed Milwaukee Bucks 95-92.

And Frazier scored 32 points as New York Knicks clawed Phoenix Suns 103-97.

In the other NBA games Tuesday night, Baltimore Bullets edged Houston Rockets 104-101; Chicago Bulls ripped Seattle SuperSonics 97-80; Kansas City-Omaha Kings nipped Buffalo Braves 106-101 and Portland Trail Blazers spanked Cleveland Cavaliers 109-91.

In the American Basketball Association, it was: Carolina 127 Virginia 118; Denver 118 Indiana 108 and San Diego 122 Utah 111.

Ali Opens Fire

LAKE TAHOE, Nev. (AP) — Former world heavyweight champion Mohammad Ali arrived Tuesday for his fight card with Bob Foster—and promptly made an enemy.

"We ain't chasing hands, we ain't getting close to each other," Ali said when he was asked to pose for pictures with his opponent.

Ali added: "Foster has been mouthing off about the time he beat me when we were amateurs. But that was many years ago. I'm a better fighter now, bigger and stronger."

Foster, the world light heavyweight champion, defeated Ali when they met in a training fight for the 1956 Pan American Games.

Remparts Roar

Quebec Remparts used one of their two games in hand to open up a four-point lead on second-place Cornwall Royals Tuesday night while Sorel Black Hawks won a squeaker in Quebec Major Junior Hockey League action.

Quebec now leads Cornwall 34-30 and has a game in hand.

Allen Named American MVP

NEW YORK (AP) — Dick Allen, the muscle of Chicago White Sox' offence, was named today the American League's Valuable Player of 1972.

Allen won the coveted prize in a landslide vote from the Baseball Writers' Association of America, receiving 21 out of a possible 24 first-place votes.

The White Sox' star first baseman, who slugged a league-leading 37 home runs and knocked in a career-high 113 runs, won the trophy easily over outfielder Reggie Rudi of the world champion Oakland Athletics.

Allen, playing in his first year in the American League after several years in the National, was the only player named on all 24 ballots. He finished with a total of 321 points, just 15 shy of a perfect score, while runner-up Rudi collared 196.

Rudi, the Athletics' leading hitter with a .305 average, was named on 22 of 24 ballots.

Sparky Lyle, the left-handed relief ace of New York Yankees, who saved 35 games and won nine during the 1972 season, finished third in the voting with 158 points.

Allen, Rudi, Lyle and pitcher Mickey Lolich of Detroit Tigers, who finished 10th with 60 points, were the only players to receive first-place votes. Rudi, Lyle and Lolich got one each.

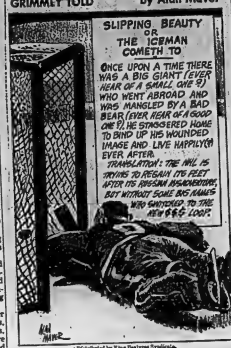
Canadian Horsemen Hold First

TORONTO (CP) — The Mexican equestrian team captured its first victory of the Royal Winter Fair Horse Show Tuesday, winning the International Relay Stakes.

Elias Perez de Las Heras and Capt. Fernando Hernandez Izquierdo toured the eight-jump course without a knockdown in one minute, 30.8 seconds.

The Canadian team of Elizabeth Ashton aboard Hombre and Jim Elder on Top Gallant finished second with a time of 1:32.4 which included a knockdown penalty of 10 seconds.

Third place also went to Mexico as Jesus Portugal and Gerardo Tesser covered the course in 1:45.3.



Americans Neil Shapiro on Christopher Robinson and Kathy Kusner on Triple Crown had three knockdowns and finished fourth in 1:46.5. The second U.S. team of Frank Chapot on White Lightning and Mike Korner on Nirvana, was disqualified after a jump was taken in the wrong direction.

Moffat Dunlap and Jim Day captured fifth place for Canada in a time of 1:51.8 for three points, and an evening total of nine.

Canada remains in first spot with 75 points. The United States is second with 64 and Mexico trails with 26.

Denver Withdraws As Winter Olympics Site

DENVER (AP) — A resolution by the Denver Olympic Organizing Committee (DOOC) withdrawing Denver as a site for the 1976 Winter Olympics has been forwarded to the International Olympic Committee and the United States Olympic Committee, the DOOC said Tuesday.

The DOOC had passed the resolution last Thursday, two days after Colorado and Denver residents approved ballot proposals prohibiting the state and city from spending any more money on the Olympics.

But a temporary restraining order was obtained by a citizens committee preventing the DOOC from advising the IOC of its decision to withdraw Denver's invitation to stage the games.

The restraining order was effective until Monday, and the DOOC resolution was sent Tuesday.

Frontenacs Fall To Last Place Downsview

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Downsview Beavers remained in last place despite a 7-4 victory over Kingston Frontenacs in an Ontario Provincial Junior A game in Kingston Tuesday night.

Mike Kelly led Downsview with three goals. Linemate Randy Ciotti scored twice, with single goals going to Paul Tantrello and Ed Pimenoff. Scoring for Kingston were Dave Sandler, Don Wilson, Greig Gravel and Kirk Twigg.

In other league action, the visiting Wexford Raiders scored eight goals in the first period and then hung on to defeat Richmond Hill Rams 9-8.

The Rams remain in second place, one point behind league-leading Vaughan who play Wexford tonight.

Track Stars Join Pro Ranks

NEW YORK (AP) — Amateur stars Jim Ryun, Bob Seagren, Lee Evans and Randy Matson turned professional Tuesday at the machines of a track and field circuit that plans 48 meets next year in the United States, Canada and Europe.

Richmond Flowers of the National Football League's New York Giants, a former hurdling star at the University of Tennessee, also signed a contract, it was announced by the new International Track Association at a news conference.

"We plan 24 to 30 events in North America," said Michael O'Hare, president of the new International Track Association, "and about 15 more in Europe.

The ITA format calls for up to 48 meets with basic purses of $10,800 each. There are to be two meets a week, one each on Saturday and Sunday, in cities that are close to one another.

"We will give athletes for each of 12 championship events," O'Hare said. "At each meet, the winner of an event will receive $500 with $250 for second, $100 for third and $50 for fourth."

Ryun said it had been projected to him that "a good year" could be worth $18,000 and up at the beginning. That might not seem huge, but it is when you've been earning zero."

The former Kansas University world record holder in the mile said he foresees, "possibly great financial benefits, as long as your name is hot in the news, in such areas as endorsements and commercials."

O'Hara said that Flowers, who makes an estimated $25,000 a year in the National Football League, "contacted us about pursuing since track was his first sports love."

The ITA president, said he was, however, "treading cautiously in talking deals with pro football players. We want to play ball with the clubs and the NFL.

"But, for sure, we are interested in people as Bob Hayes, Paul Warfield, Mercury Morris, Earl McCulloch and Jimmy Hines, who were track heroes as well as good football players."

JIM RYUN

O'Hara released a partial 1973 schedule which included Albuquerque, N.M., March 23; Los Angeles, March 24; Fort Worth, Tex., April 6; Baltimore, April 7; Chicago, May 4; Atlanta, May 5; Philadelphia, May 11; Pittsburgh, May 12; Vancouver, May, 18; San Diego, May 19; Louisville, Ky., June 1; Richmond, Va., June 2; Long Island, N.Y., June 9.

He said ITA meets are also to be scheduled for New York, Orlando, Fla., Oakland, Cleveland, Seattle, Dallas, Toronto and Montreal.

Pilots Request Federal Police

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the United States Air Line Pilots Association (ALPA) called on President Nixon Tuesday to provide U.S. airports with federal police to supervise boarding and passenger screening in an effort to halt air hijackings.

ALPA president John J. O'Donnell, in a letter to the president, said:

"Due to the magnitude of the problem and the apparent inability of local, state and federal officials or the industry to achieve effective results, we must request that you immediately provide airports with federal officers to be utilized during the boarding of all commercial airlines."

The ALPA is a union representing about 21,600 pilot on 28 U.S. airlines, plus 15,000 flight attendants of 18 U.S. airlines.

O'Donnell also said an agreement with Cuban Premier Fidel Castro's government..."must be reached if we are ever to see an end to this skyjacking menace."

Chief Resigns

SEAFORTH, Ont. (CP) — Town council has accepted Police Chief Gordon Bulley's resignation, effective Dec. 31.

Chief Bulley, 49, who has held the position for 10 years, submitted his resignation last week. It was accepted Tuesday by officials of the town 25 miles northwest of Stratford.

Chief Bulley said his decision to resign had nothing to do with an Ontario Police Commission report criticizing the force. He said he had been planning to resign for some time.

NDP Wins

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — A recount of rejected ballots from 44 polls in the Nickel Belt riding Tuesday confirmed a seat in the Commons for New Democratic Party candidate John Rodriguez.

In the Oct. 30 federal election Mr. Rodriguez defeated incumbent Liberal Gaetan Serre, by about 1,000 votes, but election officials rejected 4,718 ballots.

Mr. Serre called for a recount after Liberal supporters claimed the majority of rejected ballots favored him with an X-marking after his name rather than in the circle on the ballot.

Favor Strike

OTTAWA (CP) — A conciliation hearing with a different slant was to begin here today under guidance of the Ontario labor department.

The hearing fell final with a contract dispute between the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC)—as employer—and the union representing 23 CLC employees who work at organizing and servicing the congress across Canada.

The staff, members of the Canadian Labor Congress Representatives Union, has voted 98 per cent in favor of strike action if they do not get a satisfactory agreement.

Posties Quit

TORONTO (CP) — More than 100 postal employees walked off the job for about an hour Tuesday at the main post office and at the airmail forwarding terminal at Toronto International Airport.

The employees said the walkout was for a "study session."

A post office spokesman said the walkout came during it "assured mail dispatch" time, which is set up to coincide with Air Canada flights.

Given Life

WINCHESTER, England (AP) — A London-based Irishman was sentenced Tuesday to life in prison after being convicted of killing seven persons in a bomb attack last February at the Aldershot army base.

Noel Jenkinson, 47, was also found guilty of making the explosive, estimated at 100 pounds of gelignite, that killed five women and a gardener and a Roman Catholic priest and injured 17 other persons.

Mercy Flight

EDMONTON (CP) — A 15-year-old Ontario girl who was a patient at Edmonton's university hospital has been flown to Toronto—on a special Canadian Armed Forces mercy flight—for tracheal surgery.

Barbara McQuaid, who lives near Peterborough, Ont., left Edmonton Tuesday in a Hercules aircraft, which had been scheduled to fly to Trenton, Ont. It was delayed to accommodate the girl.

She was accompanied on the flight by a three-member medical team from the University Hospital and by the armed forces base surgeon, Dr. P. J. Ekegwald.

Space Age Police

CALGARY (CP) — Space age versions of flying policemen swooping down on wrongdoers were seen here recently, after completion of discussions on the feasibility of a helicopter patrol program for Calgary's police department. A report said: "The experience of the many cities now using helicopters on a regular basis leaves no doubt that helicopters would work well in Calgary."

Joyceville Prisoners Protest Warden's Rule

JOYCEVILLE, Ont. (CP) — About 130 of the 650 prisoners in the federal medium security institution here are protesting a ruling by the head of custody, Charles W. Chitty.

Following a meeting Tuesday night between Mr. Chitty and the men to explain his decision to end a six-month experiment in free off-hours movement within the prison, the prisoners decided not to return to their cells.

In an interview, Mr. Chitty said no disturbance was involved in the protest and none was expected.

"The population asked me to meet with them to explain a directive issued Tuesday restricting their movement.

"After I met with them and we discussed the situation for about two hours—most of the men went back to their ranges.

"But about 130 of them decided not to return to their cells and remained in the common room watching television. They are just sitting there talking and watching TV. They want the directive rescinded and their freedom returned."

Genetic Disease Treatment Could Turn Out to Be Curse

SASKATOON (CP) — Control of more and more genetic diseases could become a curse for future generations unless society steps doing some thinking, Dr. D. E. Miller, a Vancouver geneticist, said Tuesday.

"We have very few accurate statistics on the impact of genetic diseases on the community," said Dr. Miller, head of genetics on the faculty of medicine at the University of British Columbia.

"But a very large number of individuals are affected by genetically-determined diseases," he said. "As more and more of them are treated, we will have an astronomic increase in genple, to our right of reproduction or must, we accept that some of our rights are privileges with responsibilities?

Pope's Envoy Visits Peron

ROME (Reuter) — Former Argentine president Juan Peron, who was once excommunicated from the Roman Catholic Church, has received a visit from Pope Paul's "foreign minister," Archbishop Agostino Casaroli.

The 77-year-old Peron's stay here—on his way home to Argentina from exile in Madrid—has caused speculation that there will be a reconciliation between him and the church.

But the archbishop's visit appeared to confirm reports that Peron, who leaves for Buenos Aires by air Thursday, has failed in a bid to be received by the Pope.

Archbishop Casaroli was seen entering the luxurious villa Velabro in the centre of Rome, where Peron is staying.

Asked to confirm that the archbishop was seeing Peron, Vatican spokesman Prof. Federico Alessandrini said "it is possible."

Peron was excommunicated by Pope Pius XII in 1955 after conducting a campaign against the Roman Catholic Church in Argentina.

The excommunication was subsequently lifted, and in recent years Peron has apparently attempted to improve his relations with the church.

He said in an interview published Tuesday in the Italian Roman Catholic weekly Panorama Christiana that Peronism has never been against the church.

"There were differences with some trade union organizations, and it was to this I owe my fight about peace," he was quoted as saying.

Meanwhile, in Argentina, Peron supporters looked set for a clash with Argention's military government over a ban on a giant rally to hail his return.

Government sources said the former strongman, deposed in a military coup in 1955, would be staying in Argentina for only a few days before returning to Spain, where he has spent 12 of his 77 years in exile living in a fortress like mansion.

Nordair Workers On Strike

MONTREAL (CP) — About 240 Nordair Ltd. employees walked off their jobs at midnight Tuesday in Quebec, Ontario and the Northwest Territories after voting 97 per cent in favor of strike action to back contract demands.

Union representative Aldo Cahuri said the men, members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, have been called to a meeting later today to discuss strike strategy.

The employees include maintenance personnel, cargo handlers, ticket and passenger agents and Distant Early Warning (DEW) line personnel. They have been working without a contract since May 31.

A Nordair dispatcher said early today none of the airline's flights had been cancelled.

Union president Victor O'Reagan said stewardesses and flight attendants, who belong to the same union but have different contracts, may join the strike.

Debt Faced By Trent

TORONTO (CP) — Officials of Trent University in Peterborough, Ont., said Tuesday the university will be $1.27 million in debt by 1975 if the Ontario government does not change its method of financing higher education.

In brief to the government's advisory committee on university affairs, Trent spokesmen complained of a growth pattern "forced on us" by the committee and the government's ministry of colleges and universities.

It called on the committee to change a financing formula which it said favors big, non-residential universities with specialized research and many graduate students.

In another presentation to the committee, Dr. John J. Deutsch, principal of Queen's University of Kingston, said the ministry of colleges and universities used unfair tactics in increasing students' fees without sufficient warning.

He said a "system of harassment and attrition" was used to discourage graduate studies and this was "not the way to deal with the problem of financing university work."

MEMO FROM HEIDI GASCHER

NEW BEEF GRADING- HOW IT AFFECTS YOU

Puzzled about what new grading regulations for beef should do for you as a consumer?

You'll see little immediate difference. The beef that has been stamped "Canada A" in red since September 5 is the previous Canada Choice. Long term the new grading method should help in guiding farmers to produce beef with less variation in leanness. Described as "the most accurate method of grading in the world", it depends on research that relates leanness of an entire beef animal to the fat content of the 11th rib of the loin.

If you can't find the red stamp on beef in your Miracle Food Mart, it has probably been removed in trimming, or just missed the place you bought. All beef sold at Miracle Food Mart is the guaranteed Canada A.

My bulletin this week at your Miracle Food Mart information desk has recipes for using some favourite beef cuts.

Hijack Shooting Decision P. Grey's

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The acting director of the FBI said here Tuesday that the controversial decision to shoot out the tires on a hijacked Southern Airways jetliner Saturday in Orlando, Fla., was his decision.

"I made the decision to abort the flight with the full concurrence of Southern Airways," acting Director L. Patrick Gray said at a news conference Tuesday.

"I elected the means to do it," Gray said, adding that airline officials concurred because of the "risk" involved.

"It was obvious that the crew and passengers were under considerable tension," he said, noting that the plane had made six landings in the United States.

Lise Laporte Testifies

MONTREAL (CP) — Lise Laporte, sister-in-law of former Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte, testified Tuesday she was sitting in her brother-in-law's car in the driveway of his St. Lambert home at the time of his abduction.

Testifying at Jacques Rose's second trial on a charge of kidnapping Mr. Laporte in October, 1970, Mrs. Laporte said she was "nursing" herself in the car when a car sped around the corner and stopped beside Mr. Laporte, who was throwing a football with her 19-year-old son.

Two men got out of the vehicle and ordered Mr. Laporte into their car at gunpoint saying, "get in, this isn't a joke."

one in Toronto and one in Cuba before the tires were shot out.

Gray said the action was successful in that it "caused the plane to land and the passengers to be released." He said the hijackers planned to take the plane to Switzerland or Africa and their destination was impossible with the tires shot out. The plane eventually landed a second time in Cuba, where the passengers and crew were released.

Delay Trial

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Difficulty in bringing witnesses from as far away as Florida and Quebec will delay the trial of five persons charged with the $1.3-million bank robbery here last December.

County Judge Bruce J. S. Macdonald said Tuesday the trial will be adjourned after today's sitting until next Monday.

Det. Alex Zoorerville, who told of making a search of the Montreal-area home of James Ernest McArthur, 40, was the only witness to testify Tuesday.

McArthur and the other four persons face a variety of charges in connection with the Dec. 18 robbery of the main Windsor branch of the Royal Bank of Canada.

Drapeau Rejects Referendum For '76 Olympics

MONTREAL (CP) — Plans here for Canada-wide and lasting groundswell of public interest that will "peak" at the proper time for the 1976 Montreal Olympic Games, Commissioner-General Roger Rousseau said Tuesday.

Interviewed at a time of Olympic controversy, Mr. Rousseau said full "people participation" would ensure that all Canada—not only Montreal—will benefit by economic athletes from around the world to the 21st Olympiad.

The former ambassador announced that long - awaited financial figures will be made public "within a week or two" after conferences between Montreal, the federal government and the Quebec government.

Mayor Jean Drapeau already has rejected the idea of a referendum on the 'whole Olympic question, and Mr. Rousseau said such a concept would fly in the face of tradition in Montreal.

In a referendum held in conjunction with the United States presidential election Nov. 7, Colorado voters rejected any expenditures to hold the 1976 Winter Olympics in Denver and the idea sought free here.

Yves Ryan, mayor of suburban Montreal North and vice-chairman of the Montreal Urban Community (MUC), was the first to call for a referendum, but Mayor Drapeau reiterated his pledge:

"The Olympic Games won't cost a penny more than Montrealers would normally pay for the civic improvements now needed."

Mr. Rousseau, 51, said this city of 2.5 million French-and English - speaking citizens — home of Expo 67—is tackling the Olympics in a new way.

"I think the people should know that we have conducted a sort of aerial survey of the Olympic Games of 1971 and all the other Olympics and we have noted a great deal from this study."

The exercise has enabled officials to adapt the experience of other lands to the North American continent and streamline organization.

Mr. Rousseau conceded that certain factors have made it difficult to keep the public informed on the progress of the Games were scheduled for tomorrow, rather than in four years.

Mayor Drapeau has estimated the construction bill at $310 million but has avoided figures relating to the Olympic Village, housing about 12,000 expected athletes and officials, and the organization of sporting events.

WILLS EYES JAPAN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Maury Wills, baseball free agent after 14 years as a major league shortstop, is considering an offer to play baseball in Japan next season, but would prefer to join a Unified States major league club as a player-coach. Wills confirmed Tuesday that he has been negotiating with Nankai Hawks of Japan, but denied he had reached any agreement. Wills, 40, who set a major-league record in 1962 by stealing 104 bases, was put on waivers by Los Angeles Dodgers several weeks ago.

Brockville Beaten

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Smiths Falls Bears moved into a tie for second place with Brockville Braves in the Central Junior Hockey League Tuesday, downing the Braves 6-2.

In other action Tuesday, league-leading Pembroke Lumber Kings continued to stretch their first-place margin with a 4-3 victory over Hull Festivals.

Terry Fournier's two goals in the third period gave the Bears the win after Don Robertson and John Greenlee had scored to tie the game in the second period.

Brockville's goals were scored 36 seconds apart late in the first period by Kevin O'Donnell and Bob Mulcahy.

Both teams now have 14 points although the Bears have played one game less than the Bears.

Bob Wright scored two goals for the Lumber Kings, with single goals coming from Tim Young and Mike Nixon.

The Lumber Kings now have 21 points.

The next league game has Hull at Ottawa Rangers Thursday.

FACES DOPE CHARGE

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Linebacker Don Parish of Denver Broncos was charged Tuesday with possession of cocaine. Parish, 34, was apprehended at Los Angeles International Airport Monday night after he tried to flee police.

START AGAINST CHAMPS

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos announced Tuesday they will start their 1973 National League home schedule at Montreal Stadium April 13, against Pittsburgh Pirates. The Pirates, defending National League Eastern Division champions, will be here for an afternoon game. The Expos' complete schedule of 79 playing dates comprises 45 single night games, 24 single day games, seven single twi-light games and two doubleheaders.

GRIESE ON MEND

MIAMI (AP) — Coach Don Shula of Miami Dolphins said Tuesday he hopes to regain the services of first-string quarterback Bob Griese for the last regular season National Football League game against Baltimore Colts Dec. 16 in the Orange Bowl. Griese is to have the cast removed from his broken leg in the next two weeks then will begin a rehabilitation program.

tournament last month and criticizing officials.

Joseph C. Dey, Jr., commissioner of the Professional Golfers' Association Tournament Players Division, announcing the fine, said punishment of the popular former United States open champion and reigning British Open king was softened because of Trevino's attitude.

"The extent of the penalty for this major violation of tournament regulations was transformed not only by the fact that Mr. Trevino was the defending champion but, in addition, by his prompt and unqualified apology to tournament officials," Dey said in his formal release.

Trevino picked up his ball and walked off the course after playing nine holes of the third round of the Sahara tournament at Las Vegas Oct. 26.

He at first complained that he was weary from too much tournament play but later took a blast at the slow play of the tournament.

Afterward, Trevino apologized and publicly announced that he felt he was wrong and was deserving of some sort of punishment.

Sharks Shaken By Jets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Los Angeles Sharks have only themselves to blame for Tuesday night's 3-6 humiliation by Winnipeg Jets.

The World Hockey Association club apparently established the rough-house pattern of play in pre-season contests and they've since come under the scrutinized eyes of league officials.

The Sharks drew 10 of the 12 minor penalties meted out by referee Ron Stewart and the hometown Jets, playing before 5,105 fans, converted five into power-play scores, two of them by defenceman Larry Hornung.

In other WHA contests Tuesday, Minnesota Fighting Saints scored three goals in a span of 98 seconds to defeat the Eastern Division-leading Cleveland Crusaders 5-3 while Andre Lacroix's goal with 10 seconds left in the game gave Philadelphia Blazers a 4-3 win over Chicago Cougars.

The Jets, who moved two points ahead of Alberta in the Western standings, get a chance to pad their lead when they meet the Oilers in Edmonton tonight. Elsewhere, New York Raiders visit Quebec Nordiques and Houston Aeros entertain Los Angeles.

Chris Bordeleau, Bobby Hull and Brian Cadle also scored for Winnipeg with the Sharks' shorthanded Bordeleau with his 13th of the year. Dunc Rousseau and Danny Johnson tallied with the teams even.

Ernie Walsely potted the shutout, his first, of the season, in turning aside 24 shots.

The game at St. Paul was delayed for 16 minutes in the second period when Cleveland's Jim Watt and Jay Arbour, a WHA employee, had a fight in the visitor's penalty box.

Watt's team-mates joined in and were pelted chairs thrown from the stands by some of the 3,948 fans. Anderson, a former National Football League player with the New York Giants, was taken to hospital with undetermined injuries.

On the ice, Erich Christiansen, George Konik and Fred Speck with his second of the night into an empty Cleveland goal, turned the game around.

Bobby MacMillan opened the game's scoring for the Fighting Saints, but Joe Hardy tied it and Gary Jarrett scored two to send the Crusaders' into a 3-1 lead.

The Blazers also grouped their scoring at Chicago, scoring three times in the final four minutes to nail down their third win against 12 losses.

Darray Lawson, Michel Plante and Lacroix did the damage against the Western Division gutter cat-cics at Chicago Coliseum in front of 2,948 fans.

Den Lodhos of the Cougars and Philadelphia's Don Burgess exchanged first period scores. Bob Liddington and Lodhos tied the Cougars into a 3-1 lead.

What the Stars Say

By JEANNE DIXON

THURSDAY, NOV. 16

Aries (March 21-April 19): Endless discussions produce no real solution but do let off pressures. Criticism is to be taken with more than a grain of salt.

Taurus (April 20 - May 20): Complexities characterize the working day. When you get a stopping point, do so, whether anything is settled or not.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): You seem to be "selling" well but there's an extra string on every transaction, a detail to unravel later.

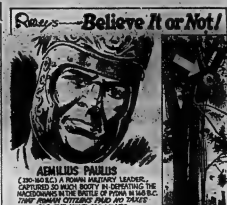
Cancer (June 21-July 22): Letting serious decisions ride gives time for reconsideration. Money has a way of getting itself spent before you realize it's gone.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 23): Write down what you must specify, or postpone them for a better time. Late hours come up with a rush of belated cooperation.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be willing to see things confused, realize you've worried past an error a while back, have to undo much recent work to make the corrections.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Except enough resistance to provoke you. Don't make drastic statements. There's plenty of time to get your records on record.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 22): Such abides completion, but outlines requiring only minor decisions can be definitely cleared off. Idleness can be hazardous.



Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21): Relationships of all sorts go through the mill this long and tense day. There's no answer beyond patience, real understanding.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Early out and gone gets you into diverse complex detours. delays, but also gets you out from under heavier experience.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Appearances of favorable reception are not the last word. You still have to find out what you really have.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Progress comes in subtle changes rather than drastic decisions. Life is not to be filled with extremes just now.

Growing Pains Due to Exercise

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Doctor: I read in your column that "growing doesn't hurt anybody." Well, my five-year-old son has been having pains in his legs every once in a while at night.

He'll wake up crying and I have to rub his legs before he subsides and he goes back to sleep. This has been happening for about two years.

I took him to the doctor and he took x-rays of his legs and said nothing showed up and it was probably just "growing pains."

Should I take him to a specialist of some kind?

I'd be willing to bet that your doctor smiled at you when he said that, didn't he?

If there is such an ailment as "growing pains." I have missed the literature describing it.

Pains in the legs do not cause pain. You have joined an army of millions of mothers the world over who have become midnight masseuses to ease the overstrained muscles of their active youngsters. Not even children, with all of their boundless energy and seemingly indestructible bodies can escape the fact that overworked muscles will complain.

You will probably notice that the leg pains follow a day of extra vigorous exertion, perhaps on days when little friends or relatives have spent the day at your home or after a family vacation or an outing.

Rubbing his legs, as you have already found out, is one of the time-honored and effective means of relieving the discomfort. Heating pads can help, too.

If such pains continue to occur during days or less vigorous exercise, you might do well to visit an orthopedist or a pediatrist. Often faulty foot mechanics call for specially built shoes that take care of such problems.

But I suspect that you are over-reacting to a normal, active child who happens to get more active some days than others.

Dear Dr. Thoteson: They say that men should not shovel snow as it can cause heart attacks. They say this does not pertain to women. Why—when they are much more delicate?

Generally speaking, women are more delicate than men. Men have a higher incidence of heart attacks than women. They may be unaware of impending trouble until under the stress of shoveling. Women are also subject to heart attacks under such exertions, usually more so after menopause.

I think one reason, though, for the snow-shoveling fad directed to men rather than women is the fact that, in the scheme of things, men are more commonly assigned this type of family chore and, being men, they assume their strength and reserve is unlimited.

Opening lead — eight of spades.

Dear Mr. Becker: A fellow can dream, can't he? Well, I have had this hand on my mind for a long time, and if it ever comes up with me holding the West cards, I have the perfect remedy to stop South from making three notrump. I realize there is very little chance of my ever encountering this particular layout. I know that if I played bridge every night for the next billion years or two the odds would still be against this exact setup taking place.

But if lightning ever does strike and I am around to witness it, you will find me Johnny - on - the - spot when it comes to taking charge of the operation.

South is in three notrump and, since I always have faith in partners, I lead a spade, the suit my dear partner has bid. This brings forth the jack from East, and declarer, who has an idea I have a singleton spade, ducks.

My partner continues with the king and South decides to win the trick with the ace, forcing me to find a suitable discard.

It is clear to me at this point, for some reason I do not understand, that unless I discard correctly declarer will make nine tricks consisting of a spade, four hearts, a diamond and three clubs.

But since this is the hand I have been dreaming of all these years, I have no trouble finding the right discard. When South takes the ace of spades, I discard the ace of hearts on it!

South may now huff and puff, or sweat and strain, but he will get him nowhere. He can no longer make nine tricks.

I hope that some day this hand will really be dealt to you. Cordially yours, Constant Reader.

Tomorrow: The disappearing trick.

Snow Geese Flock Booms

CAP TOURMENTE, Que. (CP) — Every fall, waves after wave of snow-white geese glide up the St. Lawrence River valley in honking, V-shaped formations to descend on the tidal marshes and mudflats below towering Cap Tourmente.

The world population of greater snow geese, after flying 2,000 miles from the eastern Arctic, make this their one major nesting and feeding stop on an annual migration that continues to wintering grounds in North Carolina and Virginia.

During the last half century, hunters and conservationists have combined to rescue the species from near extinction and rebuild the flocks to a point where, this year, steps have been taken by the Canadian Wildlife Service to remove some of the pressure on food supplies here.

The geese, numbering only 3,000 in 1900 after years of uncontrolled shooting, multiplied to 55,000 in 1970. This year the flock is estimated at 96,000.

Protected in their Arctic nesting grounds by Inuit and Baffin Islands by remoteness and a federal sanctuary covering part of the region, these flight path southward remains largely unmolested until they appear over the Saguenay River, flowing into the St. Lawrence 35 miles east of here, early in October. Cap Tourmente is 35 miks east of Quebec City.

Baffled biologists like Marcel Laperle say the geese must leave the Arctic by the mid - September freeze-up and the flight to the St. Lawrence should take only about a week or less. Somewhere along the way, perhaps over north-central Quebec, the snow geese must put down for three weeks or so but the location of that stop is a mystery.

Here they rest and feed until sometime in November, when they resume on the next leg of the trip south. They return along the same route in the spring, stopping here in April and May.

Since there has been no open season on greater snow geese in the United States since 1931, the only real hunting threat is along the St. Lawrence, especially when they put down at Cap Tourmente.

Historical records say they were seen resting and feeding by the thousands here at the time of Jacques Cartier.

The mudflats and marshes were purchased in 1908 from a Quebec seminary by a group of Quebec City sportsmen, who severely restricted hunting. In combination with other measures, this helped slowly to the rebuilding of the stocks.

The Canadian Wildlife Service, which purchased the land in 1953 and set up a 5,000-acre National Wildlife Area, decided this year the goose population was approaching the maximum level that could be sustained by the primary food supply, underwater roots.

There is more food elsewhere along the river but, apparently, the geese have learned this is a no-hunting area. The service staged a controlled hunt this fall with the aim of dispersing the birds and forcing them to extend their feeding area.

A lottery was held to choose 300 hunters, each of whom is being permitted to bring one companion hunter for 24 hours between Oct. 2 and Nov. 11 at a total cost of $50 for guide fees and a two-man blind. There were 1,619 applications.

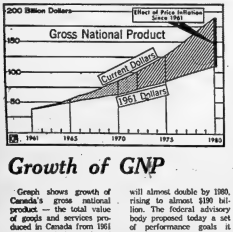
Poor weather, especially lack of wind, and a low proportion of less-timid young geese made the first two weeks of hunting slightly less successful than expected. But are the ones more likely to fly approach the maximum permitted, about 3,000 geese.

Mr. Laperle, biologist in charge of the site, said the low reproduction rate on the nesting grounds, due to late snow conditions earlier this year, is a big factor in hunter success or the lack of it. The flocks probably contain less than one per cent young geese, he estimated, and these are the ones more likely to fly within shotgun range.

He said the population could rise dramatically next year if breeding conditions are favorable—"look what happened in the last two years"—and he would not be unhappy if hunters here and elsewhere cut the number to as low as 120,000.

If he does not fear hunting pressure, another threat bothers him.

A small oil spill in September across the river at Montmagny, Que., blackened a large area of the vegetation the geese feed on. Montmagny is the next stop south for the geese.

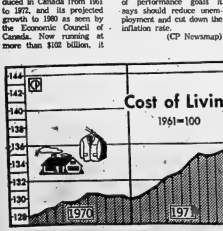


The spill is not considered to have done serious harm and a fish and game association quickly got a $37,000 Local Initiatives Program grant for clean-up operations.

But the sight of freighters and tankers moving slowly upstream in a ship channel as few hundred yards from cluster of geese near the shoreline appears ominous to Laperle.

We're going to have huge tankers, a couple of hundred thousand tons, going right by there in a couple of years. What happens if one of them has a major spill when all the geese are here?"

The newly-abolished Arrow oil rpill off Nova Scotia shows that the tools are not available for fast action, he said. The Arrow cleanup took months and 'we would have dirty beaches.'



When a $300,000 tourist interpretation centre and access road opens in time for the spring migration, the wildlife service will have spent almost $1,000,000 on the nesting area. This includes an annual budget of about $100,000.

Growth of GNP

Graph shows growth of Canada's gross national product — the total value of goods and services produced in Canada from 1961 to 1972, and its projected growth to 1980 as seen by the Economic Council of Canada. Now running at more than $102 billion, it will almost double by 1980, rising to almost $190 billion. The federal advisory body proposed today a set of performance goals it says should reduce unemployment and cut down the inflation rate.

(CP Newsmap)

Index Up Again.

The consumer index price index rose to 142.0 in October, up from September's figure of 141.8, Statistics Canada reported Thursday. Although food prices were lower, an increase in housing and clothing costs pushed the index up. The index, based on 1961 prices equalling 100, was 134.9 in October last year.

Bank Head, Gordon Agree Trade Surplus Is Essential

CHICAGO (AP) — The manufacturing potential of Canada must be allowed to develop without United States domination or interference, the chairman of the Toronto-Dominion Bank said Tuesday.

Allen Lambert said additional exports by Canada of U.S. manufactured goods would be "intolerable" in the light of Canada's current seven-per-cent unemployment rate.

Speaking on a panel before a conference of the English Speaking Union, Lambert and Walker Gordon, former Canadian finance minister, argued for Canadian independence from the U.S. economy.

Both men agreed that a surplus in Canada's trade balance with the United States is essential to pay interest on dividends of past U.S. investment of capital.

Canada's favorable balance with the United States has been a sore point in economic negotiations between the two countries.

Lambert said the development of Canadian manufacturing "looms as the largest problem in the coming decade" and will "test the past friendship" of Canada and the U.S.

Gordon said one of the basic problems facing Canada is the domination of large U.S. corporations in Canada.

He said U.S. imports consist largely of raw materials which utilize a "small labor content" while Canadian imports consist of finished products that require a large labor force.

"In the decade of the 70s, our labor force will grow at the rate of 2 per cent, comparing with a 1½-percent growth in the United States and half of one per cent in Sweden and Japan."

The capital inflow from the United States "is no longer needed on the scale which hitherto prevailed," he said.

Gordon noted that General Motors of Canada is the largest manufacturing concern in the country but, nevertheless, "all important decisions are made in Detroit and purchasing is done in Detroit."

Thus, he said a Canadian parts manufacturer must curry favor with American interests in Detroit to gain any hope of a contract, even though Canadian suppliers would go a long way American oil concerns in Canada are operated on much the same basis with decision-making in the United States.

"The United States is short of energy sources," Gordon said, "and they are looking for new sources in Canada."

"But there is not quite the same need for Canada to go so quickly. Perhaps we should husband the potential resources in our country for our own future requirements," he said.

Fund-Raising

The Toronto Symphony's fund-raising canvassers are attempting to raise $340,000 for the 1972-73 symphony season.

tial improvements had occurred beginning about 1960, when Ralph Costello was named publisher of the Saint John Telegraph-Journal and Times-Globe owned by K. C. Irving, the New Brunswick industrialist, and Michael Wardell, now retired, also had made significant improvements as publisher of the Fredericton Gleaner.

Group ownership provided greater resources. A paper reasonably sure of survival was a better paper, while those with financial problems sometimes had to compromise with journalism principles.

For three reasons, "a single-ownership newspaper is not necessarily . . . as independent a newspaper as a member of a chain."

Tommy Banks, 36-year-old host of CBC-TV's Edmonton-produced Tommy Banks Show, began his career in 1950 as a 14-year-old pianist with the Don Thompson jazz band.

Frost at Dinner

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Former Ontario premier Leslie Frost was a guest at a dinner in the officers' mess in the Barrie Armory recently. The formal dinner was in honor of Brig.-Gen. T. J. Rutherford of Leith in his retirement from the position of honorary colonel of the Grey and Simcoe Foresters Militia. Frost served with the Simcoe Foresters and went overseas with the unit in the First World War.

Camp Says Irving Newspapers Improve

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — New Brunswick's Irving-owned daily newspapers have improved more in the last 10 years than any comparable group of newspapers in Canada in the opinion of Dalton Camp, New Brunswick-born political columnist and former national president of the Progressive Conservative party.

Testifying Tuesday as a defence witness in the Irving combines trial, he said that in the 1950s "many valid criticisms could be made" about daily papers in this province. Substan-

Police Chief Acquitted

ANTIGONISH, N.S. (CP) — A grand jury Tuesday dismissed eight charges of fraud, theft and attempting to obstruct justice against former Antigonish police chief Malcolm MacEachern.

Mr. MacEachern had pleaded not guilty to the eight charges that followed an RCMP investigation of police affairs in this community. He had served as chief of police for 11 years.

In his instructions to the grand jury, Mr. Justice Gordon L. S. Hart said the fraud charges alleged Mr. MacEachern had collected cash by falsely holding himself out to be a person with authority to levy and collect fines. Two theft charges concerned allegations in connection with town and provincial government monies.

The charges of attempting to obstruct the course of justice followed after two vehicle operators, arrested for impairment, were subsequently fined on lesser offences, Mr. Justice Hart said.

Parley To Seek Troop Cuts

BRUSSELS (CP-AP) — Members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization are inviting some Warsaw pact powers to meet Jan. 31 for preparatory talks leading to a conference on troop reductions in Europe.

The official invitation said the site of the talks was still to be decided but in Bonn it was reported that Switzerland had been selected.

France, which has withdrawn from NATO's integrated command and has been cool to talks aimed at reducing troop strength, did not participate in the proposal.

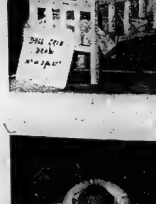
West German Foreign Minister Walter Scheel said today in Bonn that Switzerland had been chosen as the site of the talks.

He did not specify a city in Switzerland for the proposed talks but Geneva, Bern and Geneva have been mentioned.

The United States, Canada, Britain, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands distributed jointly-formulated notes in Moscow, Warsaw and Prague and West Germany sent the note to East Berlin, Scheel said.

The Russians had proposed discussion of both reduction of armies at home and of military forces on foreign soil. But the crux of the negotiations will be the extent of the pullback of Soviet and American troops.

The Soviet Union has about 310,000 men in East Germany, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary, Western sources report.



The United States has about 300,000 troops in Western Europe.

One of the problems repeatedly stressed by NATO leaders is that Soviet troops would withdraw to nearby Russia, while American troops would be pulled back 3,000 miles.

Last spring, on the aftermath of President Nixon's trip to Moscow, the NATO allies agreed to go ahead with both the European security conference and the negotiations for reduction in forces. They called for separate parallel talks.

Talks to prepare for the security conference are to open Nov. 22 in Helsinki. Thirty-two countries, including the United States and Canada, will take part.

Hijackings Annoy Cuba

U.S. Pilots Plan Strike

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

With their lives menaced by hijackers and their command authority challenged by tactics of the FBI, United States airline pilots are contemplating a new worldwide suspension of air service.

Spokesmen for both the pilots and their airlines welcomed the prospects of negotiations between the United States and Cuba to curb hijacking, but the pilots expressed a view that only a worldwide strike would force all governments to crack down on air piracy.

"I don't think we have any alternative to another worldwide strike," said John O'Donnell, president of the Air Line Pilots Association (ALPA).

The first such demonstration was a 24-hour shutdown last June 19.

O'Donnell said the ALPA board would meet within less than two weeks to consider closing air commerce as a means of inducing governments to take stronger measures against hijacking.

Earlier, in a letter to President Nixon, O'Donnell urged that the United States take the initiative in trying to negotiate an anti-hijack accord directly with the Cuban government, because Cuba has been the principal haven for American hijackers.

A broadcast from Havana Wednesday said "the government of Cuba is willing, and without delay, to take such steps which might lead to the adoption of a bilateral agreement" on hijacking.

Even before this broadcast was monitored in Washington, state department spokesman Charles Bray said repeatedly: "We do have the impression now that there may now be a basis for reopening negotiations" on the issue.

The State Department has not shown any previous willingness to negotiate the hijacking situation.

From the American viewpoint, the obstacle in past efforts to reach an accommodation on hijacking prevention was Havana's demand that the United States return Cubans who fled to the U.S.

In the Wednesday broadcast, Havana did not repeat the demand for extradition of "illegal Cuban immigrants."

Cuba, one official said, does not want to be known as a haven for criminals and is willing to deal on that basis. This is particularly true, he said, because the two most recent hijackings involved accused murderers, bank robbers and rapists.

But the American experts say there is no sign Castro wants a better relationship with Washington and they say President Nixon is not in the mood for a change either.

Arabs Won't End Terrorist Tactics

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — A representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization told the General Assembly Wednesday that the guerrilla struggle against Israeli will continue as long as one Arab Palestinian remains alive.

Saadat Hassan told the assembly's special political committee that Arab guerrillas are unswerving in their intention to defeat "Israeli and Zionist imperialism." And despite the current concern of the UN over terrorism Hassan said the Palestinian Arabs will use whatever methods they can against Israel.

Hassan was invited to speak to the committee as it considered this year's report of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine refugees (UNRWA).

Hassan spoke one day after Israeli Ambassador Jacob Beron told the committee that Arab countries want to keep the Palestinian refugee question unsolved for political reasons.

"They prefer on the one hand to keep the refugee problem open and on the other hand, to squander billions of dollars for warfare against Israel and for the financing of the murderous activities of Arab terrorist organizations," he said.

Beron also said Israel has done much to improve the lot of Arabs within Israeli borders.

But Hassan said thousands of Palestinian Arabs have been imprisoned or sent into exile, Palestinians remain third-class citizens in Israel and the country is "an undemocratic nightmare" even for Jews not of European or American origin, he added.

Although the UN was discussing the plight of Palestinian refugees in the Arab countries, Hassan said the more basic problem is the denial of the inalienable rights of our people at the hands of Israeli Zionist and imperialism."

He said the only solution is the creation of a secular democratic state in Palestine where Jews could live in peace with Arabs.

Later in the day, the assembly adopted a resolution by the same committee calling on the Security Council to consider the situation in South Africa. The resolution requested the council call for sanctions to force an end to apartheid or racial separation.

The resolution was approved by a vote of 100 to 4 with 21 abstentions. The United States, Britain and Portugal joined South Africa in voting against it.

Israel Offers 5 Iron Rules

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — Israeli Transport Minister Shimon Peres urged the world's aviation authorities Wednesday to adopt five "iron rules" to counter air piracy.

1. Not to give in to blackmail, not to let the hijackers escape punishment, not to exchange ransom money and to stop them on landing or takeoff.

2. Countries failing to make the maximum effort to prevent hijackings were to be boycotted by international airlines;

3. To provide every airport with police and the control facilities to put this policy into practice;

4. To place "air police" on board all flights and give them the means to do their duty in the air and on the ground according to the law of the airline company's home country;

5. To set up an international police force similar to Interpol, especially designed to fight the war against air piracy, wherever it occurred, under the auspices of the world community.

Liberal Alliance Rejected by NDP

OTTAWA (CP) — After rejecting a suggested alliance with the minority Liberal government, New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis said Wednesday the "objectives" his party wants from the next Parliament.

The NDP holds the balance of power, although the Liberals forged ahead of the PCs as a recount at Whitby reversed the result in the riding of Ontario, electing Norman Cafik, Liberal, by four votes over Frank Mc. Gee, PC.

The NDP leader said a form of alliance was suggested last week when Justice Minister Otto Lang called him and "in effect, proposed some kind of union." Mr. Lang had used the term "organic understanding."

Mr. Lewis said he rejected the proposal "outright and firmly." He said he had no reason to doubt Mr. Lang's statement that he was making the proposal "on his personal thought alone and not for the cabinet or anyone else."

The justice minister apparently didn't have an opportunity to go into details.

"I never asked any questions," said Mr. Lewis, "because I was not interested in a discussion of that sort."

After listing the objectives—most of which are established party policy—he told a news conference it is impossible to specify the NDP's minimum demands for the continuation of the new Parliament.

He said that if the throne speech gave a definite undertaking to deal with "some of the objectives," he NDP will feel "morally obligated to give the government a chance, to deal with them."

Basic parliamentary principles are about the right number for Canada.

"Any more creates problems."

The justice minister emphasized that the meeting was carried out in his own initiative. A statement verified later by Prime Minister Trudeau.

Lang Denies Coalition Offer

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang denied today that he had proposed a coalition between the Liberal government and the New Democratic Party in a recent meeting with Robert Stanfield.

"I was essentially talking to him and exploring views about the party's role in Canada, including my fairly strongly held personal view that two democratic parties are about the right number for Canada.

"Any more creates problems."

The justice minister emphasized that the meeting was carried out on his own initiative. A statement verified later by Prime Minister Trudeau.

The NDP leader said a form of alliance was suggested last week when Justice Minister Otto Lang called him and "in effect, proposed some kind of union." Mr. Lang had used the term "organic understanding."

Mr. Lewis said he rejected the proposal "outright and firmly." He said he had no reason to doubt Mr. Lang's statement that he was making the proposal "on his personal thought alone and not for the cabinet or anyone else."

The justice minister apparently didn't have an opportunity to go into details.

"I never asked any questions," said Mr. Lewis, "because I was not interested in a discussion of that sort."

After listing the objectives—most of which are established party policy—he told a news conference it is impossible to specify the NDP's minimum demands for the continuation of the new Parliament.

He said that if the throne speech gave a definite undertaking to deal with "some of the objectives," he NDP will feel "morally obligated to give the government a chance, to deal with them."

Basic parliamentary principles are about the right number for Canada.

"Any more creates problems."

The justice minister emphasized that the meeting was carried out on his own initiative. A statement verified later by Prime Minister Trudeau.

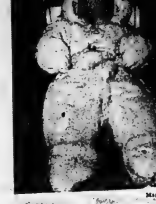
Hanoi Won't Accept Changes in Accord

From AP-REUTER

North Vietnam announced today in Paris that it will accept no changes in the Vietnam ceasefire agreement worked out with U.S. presidential adviser Henry Kissinger.

Kissinger was in Washington today and American sources said he is expected to leave for Paris at any time, perhaps today, for a meeting with Le Duc Tho, chief North Vietnamese negotiator.

Xuan Thuy, the North Vietnamese chief delegate to the stalled Paris peace talks, told reporters today the Hanoi government will "accept no arguments in favor of possible changes" in the draft.



Kissinger and Tho, a politburo member, have been expected to resume talks on the proposed Vietnam agreement but the U.S. side has said some points need to be clarified. Hanoi has maintained the U.S. should have signed the agreement Oct. 31.

The White House promised to give notice of his departure. Officials stuck by their predictions he would start the final round of talks with Tho before the week is out.

Schools and History Subject of Workshop

The Ontario Historical Society will sponsor a two-day workshop here Friday and Saturday to give municipal and regional societies insight into how they may co-operate with the schools on local historical studies.

Titled The Local Historical Society and the Schools, the gathering at Moira Secondary School will feature addresses by eight specialists, each followed by discussion sessions.

Curriculum and the part history can play in it will be dealt with by Mrs. Sheila Roy, a ministry of education program consultant.

R. K. Armstrong, a Peterborough high school principal and editor of several resource material kits in the Clarke Irwin Company's Jawdaw series, will discuss how similar kits may be geared to local history topics.

The question of how societies, particularly through their museums, may assist the schools will be treated by V. N. Styrmo, senior museums adviser with the Ontario Archives.

Introducing the student to the "skills of the historian" through local history is the subject for Lloyd Jones, head of the history department at Belleville's Centennial Secondary School.

James Eadie, head of the history department at Napanee District High School, is scheduled to conduct two sessions, one on the local history essay, another on how the schools may assist historical societies.

Organization of the local history fairs in the schools will be discussed by Father L. Burns, head of the history department at St. Islington, Ont. high school, while Ian Wilson, a Queen's University archivist, is handling the question of how historical societies may co-operate in the establishment of resource centres.

A novel approach to historical study, by which resource people and documents are taken into the schools for brief but intensive research programs, is the subject to be discussed by Gerald Boyce, principal of Moira Secondary School and chairman of the workshop.

The Belleville workshop is the third to be organized by the Ontario Historical Society. In 1970 Kingston was host for a local history workshop, in 1971 it was Kitchener.

Worried Seniors Ask Crosswalk

TRENTON (Staff) — The problem of enforcing existing crosswalk regulations was a topic for discussion at Monday night's meeting of Trenton town council.

Councillor Paul Tripp said residents of a senior citizen's home on Dundas Street East, near Flindall, were concerned that a widened Dundas arterial now under construction, could develop into a worse speedway than when it was a two - lane highway.

He requested the town look into the possibility of installing a regulated crosswalk near the home.

Councillor George Brown then told council the felt town police were not enforcing laws governing crosswalks in at least two locations. Mayor Duncan McDonald requested the public works department speed up plans to make and install crosswalk notice signs at the entrances to Trenton.

Councillor Tripp suggested police Chief David Saunders call for stricter checks on crosswalks in the town, "especially with the Christmas season approaching."
